LONDON, JULY 7, 1849.

In the case of The Attorney-General v. Strange, at the hearing of the cause, (see 13 Jur. 507), the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce held, that the works produced by the defendant wrongfully using the property which the plaintiffs had in the impressions, must be destroyed, although that destruction would involve the destruction of the material on which they were made, and which was the property of the defendant. His Honor decided the point without deciding what the Court would do in a case where the material, the property of the defendant, should be of intrinsic value, holding that, in the case before him, that point did not arise, as the material was substantially worthless.

The guarded language of his Honor, in this case, leaves it an open question, whether, generally, if one person infringes on the right of property of another, in a work of literature or art, and in so doing blends the complainant's property with his own, the Court of Chancery has jurisdiction to make an order, the effect of which will be the destruction of the property of the offending party, as well as of the property of the plaintiff wrongfully taken. The point has, we believe, only been directly considered in the case referred to in The Attorney-General v. Strange, by the counsel for the defendant, Judge. (Colburn v. Sims, 2 Hare, 554). In that case, the Vice-Chancellor Wigram was pressed to order the delivery up of copies of the plaintiff's work, piratically published by the defendant, for the purpose of their being cancelled. His Honor thought that the plaintiff had no such right, founded on the common-law right of an author in his work, anterior to or independent of the Copyright Acts. The mode, however, in which his Honor had the point before him made it a different question from that in The Attorney-General v. Strange. In Colburn v. Sims the plaintiff had published, and the defendant had pirated his publication. The question, therefore, whether the plaintiff had any common-law right to order delivery up of the pirated copies, depended, in the first instance, on the extent of his common-law right of property in his work; and as it has long been settled, that the right of an author to prevent the multiplication, by others, of the work that he has devoted to the public, or, in other words, his copyright, strictly so called, is not a right at all at common law, but the creature of the Copyright Acts, it followed, that, having no right of property at common law, the plaintiff could, of course, have no right at common law to have the pirated copies delivered up. But in The Attorney-General v. Strange, the question was, whether the plaintiff, having an admitted common-law right of property in his unpublished work, and a right to withhold it from the public, had not, as a consequence, a right to the assistance of equity to have copies made by the defendant, in infringement of such the plaintiff's right of property, delivered up to be destroyed. The only real question, therefore, would be, in a case where the value of the materials used by the defendant would allow a substantial question to be raised, whether the Court has authority to direct the destruction of that which is the property of a person who has so annexed the property of another to his own that the one cannot be destroyed without destroying the other.

We have not ourselves much doubt that the Court has such jurisdiction, upon principle and upon authority. The whole ground of the interference of equity, in the way of restraining either piracy of copyright, or infringement of the common-law right of an author or artist to withhold his work from the public, is the jurisdiction assumed by the Court of Chancery to aid a legal right by restraining acts inconsistent with its full enjoyment; and a variety of cases may be referred to in which no question is ever made about preserving the integrity of the defendant's property, although the preservation of such integrity is quite incompatible with the relief given to the plaintiff. For instance, where a railway company is compelled indirectly to pull down any work erected by it in breach of the contract by which it is bound by its act of Parliament, unquestionably much of the property of the company is not merely damnified, but actually destroyed, or, at least, deprived of all utility and value. So, in many cases where an injunction is granted to restrain the infringement of a patent, the effect of obedience to the order is not merely to prevent the infringer from using the patent right of the plaintiff, but, by excluding from the defendant's machinery the use of all those parts which are within the plaintiff's patent, to render absolutely useless all the other parts of the machine admitted to be the defendant's property. Yet in none of these cases has it ever been attempted to contend that the Court was deprived of jurisdiction fully to protect the plaintiff's right, because obedience to its order might be incompatible with the preservation of the defendant's property in its integrity. Again, in a very different kind of case, between trustee and cestui que trust, where the trustee had so dealt with the trust property that the rights of the cestui que trust could not be protected without injury to the rights of property of the defendant, equity has not suffered that circumstance to prevent its interference; as in Lord Chedworth v. Edwards, (8 Ves. 46), in which a steward, having improperly mixed monies of his master with his own in the purchase of stock, was restrained from transferring any part until he should have satisfied the Court, by answer, what part was his, and what his master's. It is true, that, in this case, the decision was put partly on the ground of the danger to the plaintiff's rights, if the defendant were allowed to deal with any part of the property till it was clearly ascertained what was his; but still it was clear that the injunction did interfere with some right of property of the defendant; and the principle was, that the plaintiff's rights must be protected, no matter whether thereby the defendant suffered inconvenience in his property or not. The true rule of equity in such matters seems to be, fiat justitia to the innocent plaintiff, rust the right of the defendant the wrongdoer. And if it be recollected that the Court of Chancery acts, in the exercise of its jurisdiction in aid of legal rights, upon the person, and not on the thing, there seems really to be hardly any difficulty remaining in the case.

There can be no question that a court of equity has authority to order a person who has published my work, in derogation of my right, (whether by direct order or by mandatory injunction is perfectly immaterial), effectually to put it out of his power, by destruction of it, if necessary, to use that which is my property: the wrongfully-made impression, for instance, in such a case as that of The Attorney-General v. Strange. The Court leaves to the wrongdoer the mode of obeying its order, contenting itself with committing him for contempt if he disobeys it. The Court is not, in point of form, (if there be anything in the form in which the jurisdiction is to be exercised), driven to order the destruction of the defendant's property, but throws upon him the onus of that destruction, if he cannot, without incurring it, obey the order which the Court has unquestionable authority to make; just as in the case above referred to, of wrongfully-constructed railway or other works: the Court simply casts it upon the wrongdoer to put himself and his works in the same position as if he had not done the wrong, not inquiring how he shall do so, but leaving it to him to do it as best he may—with or without injury to his own rights of property.

It would, indeed, to use the words of the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, be "a slur upon jurisprudence, and a dishonour to the administration of justice," if a person could refuse to put it completely out of his power to enjoy the property of another, by saying that he had so mixed it with his own that he could not do full justice to the plaintiff without doing injury to himself.

The Laws of Debtor and Creditor as they are and as they ought to be, &c. By PETER HEALEY, a Retired Solicitor of Thirty Years' Standing. Pp. 31.

Mr. Healey's view of the principles on which the law of debtor and creditor should be regulated are, at least, novel. Whether they are correct or not deserves much consideration. The fundamental notion is this, that the honest debtor—meaning thereby the trader or other person whose insolvency is the result of misfortune, against which no ordinary prudence could provide—ought not to be required, as a condition of his emancipation, to give up all his existing, still less all his future, property, but ought to be entitled to share, in some fair proportion, his property with his creditors. Mr. Healey's pamphlet bears internal evidence of his having been, what he states himself to be, a solicitor of long practice; for he begins it as if it were the deposition of a witness, by a statement of his past occupations, to shew that he speaks of that with which he is familiar. "To shew," he says, "how far I am qualified 'for the performance of my task, I might state, that I 'have, within the thirty years of my practice, acted 'many parts in this legal drama—firstly, as a commissioner of bankrupts; secondly, as a solicitor to numerous commissions and fiats; and, lastly, as an advocate both for and against bankrupts and insolvents 'of all grades."

In Chapter II. the author explains the substance of his views:—

"The close analogy between the ancient and the modern laws of debtor and creditor is very striking; for 'we learn from the New Testament, (St. Matthew, xviii. 23), that OUR SAVIOUR, in order to illustrate and confirm his instructions to St. Peter, on the forgiveness of injuries, related a remarkable parable, which opens thus:—'Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened 'unto a king, which would take account of his servants. 'And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought 'to him which owed him ten thousand talents; but 'forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded 'him TO BE SOLD, AND HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN, AND ALL 'THAT HE HAD, AND PAYMENT TO BE MADE.'

"This seems a most severe penalty for insolvency; and 'yet it was a frequent practice among the Jews, as we 'learn from various passages of the Old Testament, an

'from Josephus, (Exodus, xxii, 3; Leviticus, xxv, 47). 'And we are told, by several intelligent travellers, that 'insolvency is one of the causes of slavery in Africa at 'this very hour."

He then proceeds to argue, that, in effect, the law of England reduces into practical slavery the insolvent debtor; and to shew the ill effects of the law:—

"By depriving," he says, "the unfortunate debtor 'of 'all that he has,' and by WITHHOLDING FROM HIM A 'JUST AND EQUITABLE PARTICIPATION IN, AND SHARE OF, 'HIS OWN PROPERTY, the existing laws hold out to him 'NO INDUCEMENT to meet his creditors face to face.

"On the contrary, the debtor, upon first discovering 'his own insolvency, shudders at the bare idea of be- 'coming a voluntary victim of such arbitrary and unjust 'laws—laws which, if yielded to without a struggle, 'are sure to divest him, not only of all his property, 'without any participation therein, but also of all his 'domestic happiness at once and for ever.

"It cannot, therefore, be surprising to any thinking 'man, that expedients of all sorts should be resorted to 'by an unfortunate debtor, in order to keep his head 'above water, and to avert evils such as these.

"The expedients generally adopted by a trader debtor 'whose means are on the wane, and who is, perhaps, 'hard pressed by some of his creditors to meet his en- 'gagements, are as follow:—He first seeks pecuniary 'assistance from his personal friends; but, failing this 'kind of aid, as fail it will, he then goes into the 'market and purchases on credit, while he has it, a 'larger quantity of goods than he requires for his or- 'dinary business transactions, to enable him, by forced 'sales of these goods, by pawning, and by other irregular 'means—each and all at great sacrifice—to raise money 'wherewith to meet his current bills. His next course 'is, to obtain from his neighbours or acquaintances '(who, in their turn, are almost sure to require similar 'favours from the trader himself) the loan of certain 'accommodation bills. These bills are then discounted at 'an enormous rate of interest, ranging probably from '10 to 20, and even in some cases so high as to 60 per 'cent. Next comes the lawyer with his writs upon 'these accommodation bills. Legal proceedings may 'indeed be, and often are, by a prompt and liberal ad- 'vance for costs, averted for awhile; but judgments 'and executions will most inevitably follow. Then, 'but not till then, does the tardy and reluctant debtor 'surrender, by compulsion, either his person or his 'effects, or both; and then it is that his creditors at 'large first make the disagreeable discovery, that all, or 'nearly all, the debtor's property has been absorbed in 'these too common, but certainly most corrupt and in- 'effectual, attempts to escape from what the debtor 'deems to be—improperly so, perhaps—the greater mi- 'series to result from becoming bankrupt or insolvent.

'Incidit in Scyllam qui vult vitare Charybdim.'
In attempting to avoid a lesser, he falls into a greater evil.

"Here, then, lies the ROOT OF THE GREAT EVIL—the 'MAIN DEFECTIVE PRINCIPLE so loudly and so justly 'complained of by the oppressed debtor; and from this 'discordant root do spring many concomitant evils, 'which tend to produce, in the courts of bankruptcy 'and insolvency, such meagre and discouraging results.

"If the Legislature would allow the honest debtor to 'PARTICIPATE LIBERALLY with his creditors in the distri- 'bution of his own property, such ruinous expedients as 'those just mentioned would, of a verity, be resorted to 'no longer.

"On the contrary, it is but reasonable to infer, that 'the fair trader, with a liberal per-centage for his re- 'ward, would, on the very first discovery of his ina- 'bility to pay his debts in full, spontaneously and 'cheerfully submit at once to mild, just, and equitable 'laws; and that, instead of dissipating his property, as 'at present, in order to put off the evil day, he would, 'both before and after his bankruptcy or insolvency, 'use his utmost endeavours to protect and preserve his 'estate, because he would then be especially prompted 'so to do by reason of his own vested right and interest 'therein."

Mr. Healey afterwards proceeds to discuss various matters of detail, as to the improvement of the different modes of proceeding, both privately, by deed of inspectorship, composition, and assignment, and under the direction of the courts of bankruptcy and insolvency. Many of his suggestions appear to us well founded, particularly that a majority—of course, a considerable majority—of a man's creditors should have the power of binding the minority as to the course to be pursued in dealing with his insolvency; that official assignees should be paid by salaries, instead of by fees; and that some of them, at any rate, should be professional men, instead of being all mere merchants or accountants.

Of the value of the broad principle advocated by Mr. Healey we entertain considerable doubt; but it deserves, at least, the serious attention of legislators, and of the Profession, particularly having regard to the undoubted fact, that all the attempts at debtor and creditor legislation have hitherto been, more or less, failures. Now, since scarcely any amount of error in detail would produce such signal failure of laws based on a just principle; and since, moreover, the details of the law of debtor and creditor have, at least of late years, been most carefully and laboriously provided for, so that, in fact, there is no ground to suppose that their failure results from error of detail, the unavoidable inference is, that they must contain some grave error of principle.

If Mr. Healey has discovered the real error, and its remedy, he will have deserved well of the commercial community.

LONDON, JULY 14, 1849.

The tenderness of our law for the female sex has been ably commented upon by both Mr. Christian and Mr. Chitty, in their respective editions of Blackstone's Commentaries. We propose to point out here with what peculiar tenderness the law affects the position of a married woman in respect of her rights, or rather her absence of rights, over her personal freedom. And, firstly, it is quite clear that a married woman is in the custody of her husband; she cannot regularly withdraw herself for any reason from his control, leaving him to be compensated in damages or otherwise for her so doing; but if she does withdraw herself from his control, he may retake her wherever he can find her, subject only to this—that in doing so he may not commit a breach of the peace against third parties. If a husband behave with great cruelty to his wife, she may have, it is true, security of the peace against him. The effect of this is not, however, to allow her to live separate from him, but only to put him on terms not to treat her brutally. Or, if a husband conducts himself, as against his wife, with a certain extent of misconduct, and she removes herself from him, and he, not being able to seize her, brings her before a court of law by habeas corpus, to shew why she refuses to abide with him, a court of law will allow her to shew, on the return to the habeas corpus, the husband's misconduct as a justification; and the Court will, if the justification be sufficient, refuse to order her to be delivered up to the husband, and protect her on her return to her friends*.

But it is apprehended, that nothing short of proof of adultery in the husband, or of actual or seriously threatened and contemplated personal violence, would be sufficient so to induce a court of law to refuse its assistance to the husband. There seems, indeed, no reason why a court of law should curtail his common-law rights, and no reason to suppose that it would, except where the facts are such as would support a suit by the wife in the Ecclesiastical Court for divorce; and it is clear, that such a suit can only be maintained where there has been adultery or actual personal violence, or well-grounded fears of such violence; or, at least, such conduct as is dangerous to the person or health of the wife. It has not long ago been decided in the Ecclesiastical Court, that for a person, in the station of a gentleman, to spit in his wife's face, is not an act so destructive of her domestic comfort, so inconsistent with the marital relation, as to support a suit for divorce; "so great a favourite," as Sir W. Blackstone hath it, "is the female sex with the laws of England!"

It is also clear law, that a husband may restrict his wife's personal liberty—in other words, that he may lock her up to prevent her going into society of which he disapproves; and it does not seem that the Court will take on itself to inquire whether the grounds of disapproval are substantial. The duty of the wife is to obey implicitly the husband's mandate, of the rationality or justice of which he alone is, in general, the judge. No doubt there may be cases in which the exercise of the husband's right would be held illegal—that is, in cases where that which the wife desired to do, contrary to the husband's orders, should be a legal, or perhaps even where it should be a moral, duty. But, generally

* Rex v. Brooke and Fladgate, (4 Burr. 1991). It is not stated, in this case, that the Court put any permanent restraint on the husband's right to take his wife, but only refused to assist him, and protected her on her return to her friends pro hâc vice: and it is to be doubted whether the Court could go further.

The result is, that a married woman has, at the common law, strictly speaking, no right of personal liberty; and that she has, while married, but slender protection against abuse of the husband's right of custody of her person—her protection consisting, at the utmost, in the Courts refusing to lend their aid to the husband to force her to live with him, if she can contrive to avoid being personally seized and carried away by him.

There is, in fact, but one mode of proceeding by which a married woman can obtain effectual separation from her husband, and that is by suit in the Ecclesiastical Court for divorce. But, as we have seen, such a suit can only be supported for adultery, or propter sævitiam, and the sævitia must be such as not merely to make life a burthen to the wife, in the sense of making her unhappy, but such as to endanger her person or health. We are not here going to discuss whether such a law is wise or chivalrous; we content ourselves with stating that it is the law, and that it is not a state of the law which at all justifies the notion, that the female sex is a great favourite of the laws of England.

STAMPS ON MORTGAGES TO BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETIES.

In a case of Walker v. Giles, decided in the beginning of last term, (and reported in our present number, part 1, p. 566), the Court of Common Pleas held, that, by the conjoint operation of the Friendly Societies Act, (10 Geo. 4, c. 56), and the Building Societies Act, (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32), mortgages to building societies are exempted from stamp duty. Glad as we should be to assist in mitigating the rigour of the stamp laws, especially in their operation upon small transactions, we cannot acquiesce in the correctness of this construction of the latter act, and feel it to be our duty to warn the trustees and advisers of building societies against acting on that decision—a course which, if the liability of such securities to stamp duty should be established, would occasion irreparable mischief, because securities to building societies, if liable to stamp duty at all, are almost always so framed as to be liable to the highest duty, unless an express limitation of the amount to be recovered is inserted, which limitation would, of course, not be inserted by those who acted on the case of Walker v. Giles.

In that case the deed in question was a mortgage by demise of leaseholds to the trustees of a building society, upon trust to permit the mortgagors to hold the premises and receive the rents until default in payment of the subscriptions intended to be secured, with an agreement by the mortgagors to become tenants at will of the trustees, at a yearly rent, payable quarterly, and a declaration that the deed should not be a security for more than 840*l*. The deed bore a 5*l*. stamp, which was the proper ad valorem stamp on a mortgage for 840*l*. It was objected that the contract for the tenancy of the mortgagors amounted to a lease, and required a lease stamp. But the Court held that the stamp was sufficient, because the stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 4, incorporates in that act "all the clauses and provisions of the Friendly Societies Act," and among them the 37th section, which exempts all securities, &c. to friendly societies from stamp duty; and the 5*l*. stamp might, therefore, be appropriated to the lease, which stamp the Court, singularly enough, seems not to have considered as coming within the supposed exemption. The stamp, however, was clearly sufficient without the aid of the Friendly Societies Act, because the demise was made for the purposes of the security, and being, therefore, incident to it, came within the exception in the clause, under the title "MORTGAGE" in the schedule to the Stamp Act, by which a mortgage-deed containing any other matter or thing "except what shall be incident to such mortgage," is made liable to the duty on such extraneous matter, in addition to the mortgage duty.

The 6th section of the Building Societies Act enacts, that all the "provisions" of the Friendly Societies Acts, (10 Geo. 4, c. 56, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 40), "so far as the same or any part thereof may be applicable to the purpose of any building society, and to the framing, certifying, inrolling, and altering the rules thereof, shall extend and apply to such benefit building society, and the rules thereof, in such and the same manner as if the provisions of the said acts had been herein expressly re-enacted." The obvious intention here is, not to incorporate all the provisions relating to friendly societies which could possibly be applicable to benefit building societies or to any transactions or matters between such societies and their members or third persons, but to incorporate those provisions only which are applicable to the framing, altering, &c. of the rules of a benefit building society.

The 37th section of the 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, exempts from stamp duties all copies of rules, powers of attorney for transfers of funds, receipts for funds and monies, bonds and other securities given to or on account of any friendly society, drafts, orders, forms of assurance, appointments of agents, and all other instruments or documents whatever "required or authorised to be given, issued, signed, made, or produced, in pursuance of this act." This is plainly not a "provision applicable to the purpose of any benefit building society, and to the framing, certifying, inrolling, and altering the rules thereof;" and if it did come within that description, we do not see how an enactment, merely that such provision shall "extend and apply to such benefit building society, and the rules thereof," can extend it to a mortgage made by a member of the society.

That the exemption in question was not intended to be incorporated in the Building Societies Act is plain from the 5th clause of that act, which, evidently for the purpose of exempting the members from the stamp duties on re-conveyances of their mortgages, enacts, that a receipt for the mortgage-money shall re-vest the mortgaged estate without any re-conveyance, and from the 8th section, which expressly exempts the rules of building societies, and copies thereof, and transfers of shares in such societies, from stamp duties.

We shall take an early opportunity of discussing the very serious question suggested by the Court of Exchequer in the case of Cuthill v. Kingdom, (1 Exch. Rep. 494), as to whether the stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, does not require that no member of a building society within its protection shall hold shares amounting in the aggregate to more than 150*l*. Many titles to small properties depend on this question. G. S.

Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint Robert Garraway M'Hugh, Esq., to be Second Puisne Judge of the Royal Court of the Island of St. Lucia.

MASTER IN CHANCERY.—The Lord Chancellor has appointed Robert Dukinfield Darbishire, Gent., of Manchester, to be a Master Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

Review.

A Collection of Copyhold Precedents in Conveyancing, arranged for General and Ordinary Use; together with introductory Treatises upon the various Transactions and Occurrences incident to Estates of Customary Tenure, and an Appendix of Abstracts of Title, and Extracts from relative Acts of Parliament. By John Fish Stansfield, Esq. 8vo., pp. 412. [Benning.]

The graces of style and composition have seldom been bestowed upon legal productions. The "enchanting harmony" of Blackstone's periods is, indeed, acknowledged even by Bentham; and Mr. Hayes, in our own time, has aimed at the reputation of an elegant writer, not without success. Mr. Preston, too, astonished the world nearly as much by his style as by his learning. To these exceptional instances must now be added the work before us, which is written, as we shall shew by a few examples, in language of no common stamp. Our first extract is from the opening of the second chapter, on intestacy and descent:—

"Since the power to make a will, but few persons 'who have immediate relations are so improvident as 'to leave their property to legal distribution. A wise 'discretion is exercised by a testamentary declaration 'of the disposal of every man's possessions and chattels, 'thus obviating those litigious quarrels which other-'wise occasionally disturb the peace of a family. It is 'not, however, an agreeable duty to perform, since men 'are so indolently averse to make any preparation for 'that serious finale common to us all, although a me-'lancholy accident or sudden illness does sometimes 'occur, inflicting the inflexible veto of death upon hu-'man faculty or will."

From the above passage, the opinion appears to be a vulgar error, that more litigation arises upon wills than upon the statutes of distributions and the canons of descent. Our next extract contains a lesson of politeness, and also a trait relating to the habits of the elder members of the Profession, which is new to us:—

"When a will of copyholds has been legally drawn 'and executed, the testator dead, and his will proved, 'either the executors or trustees thereof must be ad-'mitted; at least, such is the practice, though certainly 'such a requisite can be obviated by the form of the 'instrument. Disputation should not, however, be in-'dulged, and it is more courteous to the lord, and usual 'in practice, to take admittance. Before proceeding to 'the requisites of such admittance, the form of sur-'render previously in use as a preliminary to a will, is 'inserted, upon the assumption that a more correct idea 'may be formed of what was lately the practice, and in-'deed I believe even yet observed by the elder members 'of the Profession." (p. 14).

In treating of an obscure point in the law of curtesy our author adopts an ornament of which there are some celebrated examples in the Iliad, Faery Queen, Castle of Indolence, &c., namely, the reflection or imitation of the character of the subject in the language:—

"As when great Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,
The line too labours, and the verse moves slow."

"There is still another undecided point in curtesy 'which materially affects this estate, and that is where 'custom does not in distinct terms limit its enjoyment 'to cases where issue have been born, that connubial 'sterility will by virtue of the nuptials alone entail 'curtesy." (p. 30).

If we rightly interpret the following passage, it is meant to convey a general warning against riches, although the author's strict regard for method obliges him to confine the illustration to copyholds, in a work limited to the consideration of that kind of wealth:—

"Occasionally instances occur where a person under 'age, or a married woman, becomes entitled, either by 'intestacy, descent, will, or the limitations of some set-'tlement, to an estate of inheritance in copyhold lands; 'and more lamentable instances also occur in those 'family afflictions where an individual relative becomes 'demented," &c. (p. 38).

Our next extract illustrates our author's power of giving novel and important information in few words. From it we learn that a composition with creditors is an act of bankruptcy, and that an assignment for the benefit of creditors is only an act of bankruptcy under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, ss. 3 and 4, when it is executed in the manner and acted upon within the period prescribed by that act:—

"It must not be forgotten, that deeds of assignment 'and composition are acts of bankruptcy, if acted upon 'within the prescribed period, and executed as legally 'required." (p. 67). [In the form to which this passage is prefixed, the debtor's signature is prescribed, but no mention is made of the execution by the trustees, and attestation, required by the Bankrupt Act.]

We have only space for one more extract. It is from the chapter on settlements:—

"It would, however, be approaching a treatise upon 'metaphysical phenomena to endeavour any outline of 'the very diverse purposes contemplated in the limita-'tions of settlements: the practitioner ought to be cog-'nisant of the rules and decisions affecting the whims 'of his fellow-mortals, so as to direct the helm of 'their fancies steadily through the ripple of these legal 'eddies."

We have looked over the precedents in this work with some attention, and infer, from the absence of any hint of the possibility of dealing with copyholds by means of a power of appointment, that they have been principally derived from the repertories of those elder members of the Profession to whom Mr. Stansfield alludes. As powers of appointment frequently afford the means of keeping some hundreds of pounds in the pocket of the copyholder or his vendee, which would otherwise have gone to the lord, together with smaller disbursements in the shape of fees to the steward, they have naturally created much "disputation," the avoidance of which, and the observance of an inviolable courtesy towards the lord, were probably the objects Mr. Stansfield had in view when he determined to take no notice of those modern and popular innovations. But we think he should have noticed them, if only to stamp them with reprobation. For the same reason, we presume, no form is given of a bargain and sale of copyholds by trustees for sale under a will.

Some of the precedents are necessarily of a modern character; such are those relating to entailed estates. But even here we think we see indications of the intervention of some old, not to say aged, practitioner. Thus, No. 43 is a form of a surrender by tenant in tail in possession, with the consent of the protector, and contains a recital of a devise to the surrenderor and the heirs of his body in possession, with remainder over, and is expressed to be made with the consent of "the protector named in the said recited will." To a like venerable source we trace the precedents of agreements for sale and conditions for sale, without any of those modern provisions as to deduction of title, evidence, expenses, &c., which a provincial law association some years ago denounced as being detrimental to the interests of the Profession.

One hundred and fifty pages of the book consist of reprints of, or extracts from, acts of Parliament: among them we observe the Fines and Recoveries Act, the Act to render Freeholds and Copyholds Assets for Debts, the Inheritance Act, the Exchange of Lands in Common Fields Act, (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 30), the Wills Act, and the "Act to amend the Law of Real Property," (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), all in extenso; also the clauses in the stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, relating to judgments, although the stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, which repeals those enactments in favour of purchasers without notice, is omitted. The 64th section of the Bankrupt Act, (6 Geo. 4, c. 16), which does not relate to copyholds, is given; but the 68th, which does relate to copyholds, and the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 26, which superseded the 64th section of the Bankrupt Act, are omitted.

In conclusion, we congratulate those of our readers who have already purchased Mr. Stansfield's production, on the possession of a work of very peculiar merit, containing forms such as are seldom seen at the present day, and information not to be found in other books, expressed in language such as few persons, either in or out of the Profession, have the ability or the taste to employ.

A SUMMARY of the LAW of MODERN PLEADING, incident to the Rules of Hilary Term, 1834; with such of the Decisions on Practice, Evidence, and Costs, as are closely connected with that subject. Also, copious Analysis of the Cases and Pleadings. By ROBERTS PHILIP TYRWHITT, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

"The reports of the "Common-law Commissioners" suggested extensive changes in the practice on this important subject, (Pleading), which changes, whether improvements or not, were sanctioned by Parliament, and embodied by all the common-law courts in general rules, dated Hilary Term, 1834. It was then sought to adapt old principles to modern exigencies, and to link the present with the past by regulating the transition—with what success the work before us attempts to develope. It embodies in its text the pith of the decisions on "Modern Pleading," as incident to the above "rules," and condenses in the notes other valuable matter at present spread over lengthy "reports." The latter feature is adapted to render the volume more extensively useful in courts of Nisi Prius, particularly on the circuits, and in the library of country practitioners. Nor is it rigorously limited to its chief object; but includes the course of decisions on the replication de injuriâ in its extended application, as well as on the modern acts respecting land, tithes, mines, commons, ways, and easements, together with so much of the law of amendment, evidence, and costs as elucidates the new rules of pleading. On the whole, this work appears to have been prepared with much care and industry, and will be found to afford in small comparative compass a useful adjunct to the works of Stephen and Chitty."—Times, Oct. 29th, 1846.

LONDON, JULY 21, 1849.

The bill introduced into the House of Commons by the Attorney-General, for the abolition of the Palace Court and the amendment of the Small Debts Act, has already dwindled from fourteen to nine sections. The first five clauses have been for the present abandoned, but with an intimation that they will be re-introduced in a modified form on some future occasion.

This derelict portion of the bill is the most important, as regards the Small Debts Act, and is worthy of some consideration, as shewing the legislative animus upon the subject. After reciting the expediency of extending and rendering more effectual the provisions in the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, for depriving plaintiffs of costs, the 1st section repeals sects. 128 and 129 of that act, and in lieu thereof the 2nd section enacts, that, "if in any action in the superior courts of record, in covenant, debt, detinue, or assumpsit, (not being for breach of promise of marriage), the plaintiff shall recover a sum less than 20*l.*; or, in trespass, trover, or case, (not being for malicious prosecution, libel, slander, criminal conversation, or seduction), the plaintiff shall recover a sum less than 5*l.*, he shall have judgment for such sum only, and no costs, except in cases hereinafter provided, and it shall not be necessary to enter any suggestion to deprive him of costs." By the 3rd section, if he recover in any inferior court (other than a county court) less than 10*l.* in such actions ex contractu, or 5*l.* in such actions ex delicto, the same result is to follow. But, in any such action where such less sum is recovered by verdict, a judge or other presiding officer may certify that the cause appears to him to be one which could not be tried in the county court, or that there is sufficient reason for not having brought it therein; and in such cases costs shall be allowed. (Sect. 4). And if in such action, whether there be a verdict or not, the plaintiff make it appear that he comes within the exceptions now existing by sect. 128 of the Small Debts Act, or that the cause was removed by certiorari from the county court, he may obtain an order for his costs. (Sect. 5).

Such are the clauses which have been struck out from the bill. It will be seen that they would have rendered unnecessary the entering of a suggestion by the defendant, thus putting an end to those numerous applications for this purpose which have lately appeared in our reports, and which have been so frequently decided upon the most technical grounds. The onus would, in fact, have been shifted from the defendant to the plaintiff, who would have had to shew that he came within what are now the exceptions in the Small Debts Act. This would have been an advantage, and have carried out the intention of the Legislature in the passing of that statute, which certainly was not to add the costs of a fruitless application to enter a suggestion, to the costs of the action in the superior court, where the case was, in truth, within the clauses making it compulsory to sue in the county court.

Another effect of the 2nd clause of this bill would have been, to bring judgments by default within the operation of the Small Debts Act—an alteration which we advocated in a former article. (See 12 Jur. 361).

The clauses which remain are to the following effect:—

Sects. 6 and 7 provide, that persons committed to prison under the Small Debts Act shall not be committed to houses of correction, but to the common gaol, wherein debtors may be confined.

Sect. 8 declares, that in distresses under sect. 107 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, rent due is to have priority over other payments.

Sect. 9 gives power to the Secretary of State, with the consent of the Treasury, to alter fees payable on proceedings in the county courts.

This is an important clause, and, if followed out in a liberal spirit, will tend to raise the character of, and improve the procedure in, these courts.

Sects. 10 and 11 prohibit the bringing of actions in the Marshalsea and Palace Courts, and the Peveril Court; abolish them on the 31st December next; transfer causes then depending in them to the Common Pleas or County Court, as the case may require; place their records under charge of the Master of the Rolls; and provide that compensation shall be given to the officers of the abolished courts.

An amendment was proposed during the debate on this bill, for the purpose of extending the jurisdiction of the county courts to debts under the sum of 50*l.*, but, on a division, it was negatived by a majority of twenty-eight out of ninety-six votes. The Attorney-General stated that he was averse to such an extension of the jurisdiction, without providing means for reviewing and rendering uniform the decisions of the judges. It is a question deserving of serious consideration, whether the jurisdiction of the superior courts of this country should be created to a greater extent than it is at present, or whether we should not rather attempt to render such jurisdiction more available and advantageous to those who have to seek their protection. The machinery of our superior courts for the administration of justice is complete and admirable in itself, and may, by timely and proper reforms, be made to work more expeditiously and less expensively than has hitherto been the case.

It cannot, we think, be denied, that some alterations might be made which would tend to the advantage of suitors and to the promotion of justice. Among the chief of them we should rank the encouragement of a more liberal and comprehensive view of the merits of a case, and a decision in accordance therewith, rather than with its technicalities; and among minor improvements may be mentioned, a greater strictness in granting new trials, a reduction in court fees where the sum claimed does not exceed 50*l.*, the abolition of special demurrers or permission to amend on payment of a few shillings, together with other changes, having for their object the prevention of unnecessary expense and delay.

Review.

On Copyright in Design in Art and Manufactures. By T. Turner, of the Middle Temple. Small 8vo., pp. 122. [Elsworth.]

This is the first treatise of any merit on a subject of great importance to the manufacturing industry of this country, and furnishing ample scope for refined commentary. The neglect which a topic apparently so attractive to pens of a superior order has suffered is probably owing to the known incompetency of the tribunals to which questions arising on the law of copyright in designs are most frequently submitted. Distinctions as metaphysical and abstruse as any that occur in the law cannot be offered with much confidence to the consideration of two average justices of the peace, and such functionaries are naturally averse to be troubled with discussions for which they are so little qualified by education or habit. Accordingly, in one of the cases "the aldermen thought the case not proved, but, being 'asked in what respect, they 'declined going further 'into the question.' Another case was said by Mr 'Jardine to be much too important to be disposed of in 'such a summary way, and quite foreign to the genera 'business of police courts. The aldermen are often 'found spending several hours over a design case, and 'sometimes disagreeing." (Turner, p. 42). In another case mentioned by Mr. Turner, where one alderman had objected to the waste of time on so trivial a subject, his colleague replied, that in his ward there were many such rejections, and that they were highly profitable. Mr. Turner makes a valuable suggestion on this head:—

"The subject is, perhaps, somewhat more suitable t 'the county courts, and if equitable functions be here 'after extended to them, they may be an economi 'substitute for the Court of Chancery. The Frenc 'possess a highly efficient machine in the 'conseil d 'prudhommes,' composed of masters and workmen 'and having jurisdiction in all matters of a trading o 'commercial nature; its jurisdiction in piracy of trade 'marks, for instance, is obviously advantageous. Th 'promptitude, economy, and accessibility of this tri 'bunal was admitted by the committee on the arts, (i 'the year 1835, out of 3835 cases there were only 35 'appeals); and, if it were too extensive a novelty to b 'transplanted here, some body of a similar constitutio 'might advantageously assist the regular court, whe 'ther superior or inferior, acting as a kind of assesso 'like the Trinity-masters in points of technical navi 'gation; or matters of detail might be referred to them 'as accounts to a Master in Chancery. As an instanc 'of the difficulty of the discussion of technical matter 'by laymen, it is mentioned that Lord Lyndhurst, the 'Mr. Copley, spent ten days in making himself familia 'with the details of lace manufacture, previously to 'patent case on that subject." (p. 42).

Mr. Turner divides his subject into four sections.

I. The nature and value of design copyright.

II. Historical and statistical notices of the subject.

III. Principles of the legal right as now administered, and those on which it should be extended. 1. The nature of the right. 2. The formalities constituting it. 3. Its enjoyment. 4. Its violation, and remedies. 5. Its expiration, the term for which it is granted. 6. Its collision with patent right.

IV. Practical points. 1. The right before publication. 2. Advantages and mode of claiming legal right. 3. Exercise of it, and transfer. 4. Breaches of the right, and remedies.

In the 1st section, after giving some general illustrations of the value of form, Mr. Turner enters into some considerations relative to individuality in useful and ornamental design, which, we think, have been conceived and expressed with peculiar felicity. We regret that we cannot extract the whole of the section:—

"Now, as in every object of human production some 'particular means are employed, and for some parti 'cular purpose, and each means and each purpose re 'quire the restriction of the shape employed within 'certain limits, we arrive at individual and isolated 'forms capable of variation within certain limits, and 'impracticable beyond them. Thus, in a decanter, the 'centre of gravity must be kept low, and the base 'wide, to give stability; a certain height is indispen 'sable to its appearance. The grasp of the hand, 'and the facility of pouring out, and filling, cleaning, 'and stopping, regulate the neck; and the design, be 'sides fulfilling these conditions, must be practicable in

'a material which receives its first shape by blowing 'into a mould, and its surface from the grinder; and 'the number of ornamental shapes that combine all 'these requisites is very limited, and if any change, 'however trifling, be made in the limitations, the whole 'design must be completely re-cast. Suppose it is to 'hold water, and the stopper dispensed with, the har- 'mony of proportion and linear combination is gone. 'Change the material for earthenware, and the effects 'of refracted light and prismatic colour, which made 'angular forms beautiful, are lost, and other forms of 'ornament must supply their place. As the zoologist 'identifies a species by a single bone, so every portion 'of a perfect work of art requires a special adaptation, 'and each type or model of a design forms a distinct 'species; and not only must all the conditions be pro- 'vided for, but new and unforeseen contingencies may 'prove fatal; as when Davy's protection for copper- 'sheathing failed, only because it did not deter the ac- 'cumulation of sea-weed and barnacles. Among the 'conditions are a certain state of allied arts of produc- 'tion. The art of print-engraving requires an art of 'printing; this only follows an ample supply of paper, 'and this is ultimately obtained from the loom; and 'thus every age has its own novelties and inventions, 'which before were useless, if not impossible. From a 'good design any deviation is an injury, and the amount 'of injury increases in rapid ratio. A printed flower- 'pattern for a calico dress is too small for a furniture; 'if enlarged, the scale will be unnatural. In a warmer 'fabric, it will not suit the season; in a costlier one, 'it has to meet the taste of another class of buyers. 'It cannot be woven with sufficient precision of out- 'line, and still less is it fit for modelling into solid 'form; and individuality in ornament is also required 'by the demand for novelty, of all the sources of 'beauty the most indispensable. The design, like the 'animal, has a period of existence; its successor must 'exhibit a clear and distinct difference of character. 'As, however, innumerable patterns may exist in a sin- 'gle style of ornament or a single branch of art, so the 'duration of the latter includes many generations of 'individuals, and by these the perfect development of 'the style is gradually obtained. When a mode of 'combining the colours of the calico-printer is intro- 'duced, a certain number of years may elapse before 'the designer thoroughly understands the capabilities 'of the new material. He discovers this by a course 'of experiments on individual designs. Of course, very 'valuable combinations, at once simple and striking, 'are rare, as in all the arts and sciences. In calico- 'printing, it is said that there have been four styles 'distinguished by their success—the rainbow, the dio- 'rama, the wave, and the net. (Specimens of them 'are given in Mr. Tennent's work). The diorama, a 'simple arrangement of shades, sold to the amount of '25,000 pieces in one day. This principle of the unity 'of design must not be pushed to an extreme; we do 'not require a distinct pattern for every individual 'gown in the kingdom, though no two wearers of 'gowns be exactly similar in person; but, as regards 'the adaptation to the kind of article, it will cer- 'tainly be more and more appreciated as a rule of 'taste. A fashionable architect of the present day 'would hardly, like Gibbs, design a lady's dress with 'portions of the five orders, Doric, Tuscan, &c., though, 'in our own time, it is said that a calico for a dress 'was decorated with a marble pattern, an idea which 'the narrator proposed to carry out by trimming it 'with ammonites and saurians.

"All considerations of correctness, however, yield to 'that of novelty; with this to recommend it, a poor 'design will sell; without it, the best design has no 'market value. If a fashion be widely diffused, the 'more rapidly will it become tiresome by repetition, and 'then the pride of wealth comes in aid of taste to pro- 'nounce it mean and parsimonious. Some nations, as 'the oriental races, are less capricious, and the poorer 'classes are checked by motives of economy; but where 'mechanical means supply variety in cheapness and 'abundance, the love of variety quickly rises up to the 'same point. The shippers of printed goods to foreign 'markets do not send a pattern twice to the same 'place. The fashion will, of course, take a certain time 'to travel round the globe; what is unsaleable in Eng- 'land may be in time for the Indian market. Of course 'the duration of anything of a fixed nature is more 'durable than a moveable. We cannot change our 'rooms as frequently as our dresses. Not only are the 'former more costly, but, being less seen by others in 'different places, they are longer in becoming vulga- 'rised. Thus, a 'garment' calico lasts a season; a fur- 'niture pattern three or four years, or much longer." (Pp. 2—5).

In the course of the 3rd section Mr. Turner takes occasion to expose the anomalies of our present system, and makes the following suggestion for amendment:—

"The French were our examples in establishing any 'design rights at all; it would be well if we adopted 'their simple sensible arrangements for securing it. 'All kinds of design there are treated alike—all pay 'one price, and that price is not an arbitrary sum, but 'an annual tax. Two grounds only would justify our 'unequal taxation—variation in the value of the com- 'modity (protection) sold, or variation in the cost of 'affording it. Now, as to the value of protection, how 'is that to be estimated? One pattern brings in hun- 'dreds, another is a dead loss; one is designed by a 'royal academician, another by an apprentice. A pat- 'tern in metal may sell to scores of purchasers, and an 'equally meritorious design in glass to thousands. Why 'should the first pay thrice what the second does? Ob- 'jections of this kind will at once occur to those con- 'versant with the various branches of art. Why not 'one uniform charge, and that one charge a minimum?" (P. 35).

Mr. Turner discusses the important question of conflict between patents for articles of utility, and registered designs, at some length, and with great ability, but he does not seem to have arrived at, or at least does not propound, any very definite conclusion. Probably the question, as it depends upon a distinction created by an act of Parliament, framed certainly upon no scientific principle, is incapable of a satisfactory solution. Mr. Turner opposes the construction put upon the act by the patent agents, who, he says, are not very anxious to narrow the range of "principles of invention," or to extend that of inventions of forms and shapes; and he observes that an article in THE JURIST dwells on the necessity for guarding against confounding registration with patent law. If we are not mistaken, he is here referring to an article, not on the act for the registration of designs for articles of utility, but on the act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 100) relating to designs for ornamenting articles of utility. (6 Jur., part 2, p. 341). But in a much later article (11 Jur., part 2, p. 276) he will find some observations on the stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 65, leading to the conclusion, "that a colourable variation of a registered design for an article of utility, producing the useful effect by a configuration, not exactly but, substantially the same as that registered, would be a piracy, and every variation from the pattern actually registered, in a particular immaterial to the useful effect, would be deemed a colourable variation;" and "that the benefit of a mechanical invention may be secured by registration, wherever the essence of the invention is the form of the whole or of a part or parts of a thing, or the form and formal arrangement of a thing consisting of several moveable parts; and that such inventions as those of a chisel, a saw, a lathe, a lifting-pump, the dead-beat, recoil, and cylinder escapements of clocks and watches, &c., might, if they had been made after the passing of the act, have been protected under its provisions."

In the course of this discussion Mr. Turner thus notices a very serious inconvenience that sometimes arises out of the present system of conferring, by letters-patent, a present title to something to be hereafter specified by the patentee, subject only to the condition of falling within a general title of the vaguest description:—

"There is one tract of debateable land on which some 'contention has actually taken place, and which has 'attracted a considerable notice as a glaring anomaly; 'it arises out of the entire absence of harmony in the 'modes of creating patent and registration rights. The 'latter is very simple; the right commences simulta-'neously with the publication; but a patentee first ob-'tains his patent, and six months afterwards publishes a 'complete account of it. Now, during these six months, 'there is nothing (conscience apart) to prevent his 'seizing on any other invention which comes to his 'knowledge, and putting it into his specification, pro-'vided only that it come within the range of a vague 'title, such as "improvements in steam-engines;" and 'in at least two instances the patent has actually co-'vered an idea registered as new, after the period when 'the consequence of publication commenced, but before 'the actual fact. One was Butt v. The Electric Tele-'graph Company. This was not a case of fraud; there 'was said to be no imputation. The interest of the 'subject had attracted the attention and labour of dif-'ferent persons; and two individuals had, in perfect 'integrity, invented similar constructions; the plaintiff 'had obtained his patent for a percolating battery; im-'mediately after, a party in connexion with the de-'fendants, ignorant of this, (the specification being still 'to come), registered his battery, and the injunction 'obtained against him shewed that his registration was 'quite worthless. One might almost expect to hear of 'the inventor prosecuting Government for obtaining 'money under false pretences." (p. 56).

All the reported cases, including those in the inferior courts, appear to have been collected in the work, which contains all the forms, official directions, and other practical information. The only fault we have found in it is an occasional excess of terseness, which somewhat prevents the meaning from being so readily apprehended as it might be if it were more liberally fledged.

A case of Sismey v. Eli (13 Jur. 480) has somewhat added to the uncertainty in which the earlier cases have left the question, when a court of equity will interfere for the relief of a person who has executed a deed founded on an illegal consideration. In the case referred to, the bill alleged that the plaintiff had executed an instrument which was, on the face of it, for a good and legal consideration. It then went on to allege, that such instrument "was void at law, by reason of the same having been executed by the plaintiff for an illegal and immoral consideration, he having been induced and drawn in by the defendant to execute the same by the promise and expectation made and held out to him by the defendant, that, if he would execute such indenture, she (the defendant) would live with him as his mistress in unlawful cohabitation; and that such promise and expectation was, in fact, the consideration for the execution by him of the said indenture." It is to be collected from the judgment, that it appeared upon the bill that the transaction had been broken off; that, in fact, the cohabitation had not taken place, though payments had been made under the deed by the plaintiff; and the bill prayed delivery up of the deed, and an injunction to restrain proceedings at law upon it.

To this bill a demurrer was put in, and overruled on the ground, that, though the expectation mentioned in the bill was held out to the plaintiff to induce him to execute the deed, it did not appear that any illegal act had been done in consequence of that expectation; that is to say, it being admitted (as it was admitted by the demurrer) that the plaintiff had executed the deed with the purpose of defeating the policy of the law by contracting for future cohabitation, he would be entitled to some relief against his deed, because the purpose had failed—not on the ground of fraud in the defendant, as against the plaintiff personally, in failing to give the consideration intended as the consideration of the deed, but on the ground that the legal fraud on the policy of the law contemplated by the plaintiff, was not carried into effect. Now, this is certainly consistent with the doctrine of a case referred to in Curtis v. Perry, (6 Ves. 747), and with the case of Platamone v. Staple, (Coop. 250); but it is not consistent with the doctrine laid down by Lord Eldon in Curtis v. Perry, nor with the case of Brackenbury v. Brackenbury, (2 J. & W. 391), in both of which the Court considered that the fraudulent purpose of evading the policy of the law, is sufficient to deprive the party of his right to relief in equity. In the case of Batty v. Chester (5 Beav. 103) the plaintiff had entered into a deed of covenant for securing to the defendant an annuity—in fact, for future cohabitation, although that did not appear on the face of the deed. The allegation of the bill was, that the defendant did cohabit with the plaintiff for a time, and then left him, and lived with another person; and on that ground it was contended, that, the agreement not being fulfilled by the defendant, the plaintiff was released, and entitled to have the bill delivered up. A demurrer was allowed, on the ground that the plaintiff's claim to be released, because the defendant had ceased to live an immoral life with him, was a claim contaminated with the original immoral purpose. This case does not, we conceive, at all touch the question, whether illegal purpose alone is sufficient to deprive a party of his title to relief, or whether the purpose must be carried into effect; because, here, the illegal purpose had been carried into effect, and the objection to the plaintiff's equity was, that he was driven to found it on the defendant discontinuing to carry into effect the illegal purpose of the contract. There is, however, an expression of opinion of the Court to the effect that the Court has authority to relieve against an instrument which, though legal on the face of it, was, in fact, executed for an illegal or immoral purpose; whence it may be inferred, that the Court considered illegal acting to be requisite in order to deprive the party of his title to relief.

On the whole, the later authorities seem to leave the question under consideration, as we at first observed, in even a more uncertain state than it was before; and all that can now be safely asserted or advised is, that when a deed has been entered into for a secret illegal purpose, and such purpose has been carried into effect, it is clear that equity will not relieve; but it is not clear whether it will or will not relieve, where the illegal purpose alone is found, and no illegal acts.

The following return will be interesting to many of our readers:—

It appears that the gross total number of plaints entered in all the county courts of England and Wales during the year 1848 amounted to 427,611; the total number of causes tried to 259,118; the total number of days on which the courts sat to 8386; the gross total amount of the monies for which plaints were entered to 1,346,802*l.*; the total amount of monies for which judgment was obtained (exclusive of costs) to 752,543*l.*; and the amount of costs to 199,980*l.* The total amount of money paid into court was 86,292*l.*; the total amount of fees received by the officers of the court was 234,274*l.*; and the gross total amount of all the monies received was 854,950*l.* The total number of causes tried with the assistance of a jury amounted to 834, in 446 of which the party requiring the jury obtained a verdict. The amount sued for in these courts since their establishment in March, 1847, to December, 1848, was about 2,700,000*l.*

Now, from this, it appears, that only a little more than half the gross amount sued for has been recovered; that the gross amount of costs has amounted to somewhat more than a fourth (viz. one 3·75th) part of the sum recovered; that the fees to officers have been a little less than a third of the sum recovered; and that only in one case in 2931 has a jury been demanded. These results are somewhat curious, as shewing, first, the large proportion which the costs of litigation bear to its fruits, even in these popular courts; and, secondly, the extreme indifference of the people to jury trial, when they are left to choose whether they will have juries or not.

PRIVILEGES OF BUILDING SOCIETIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

Sir,—I have read with considerable satisfaction the remarks of G.S. upon the recent case of Walker v. Giles, and fully concur with the caution there given against acting too hastily upon its authority*. A very similar case came before me not many years ago, and I advised that the mortgage was liable to the stamp-duty, upon very nearly the same grounds as those stated by G.S., and I do not at present see sufficient reason to change my opinion.

It has, however, often struck me, that a mortgage (so called) to a building society might be exempted from duty, upon the ground that it is not a mortgage within the definition applied to that term by the Stamp Act; and if not strictly within the definition, must be exempt. The mortgage must be either a security for the payment of any definite and certain sum of money advanced or lent at the time, or previously due and owing, or forborne to be paid; or it must be for securing the payment of a sum hereafter to be lent. Now, it appears to me, that a mortgage to a building society does not come within the terms of this category, which, in one shape or another, embodies always the idea of one advancing money, and another securing its repayment. This does not occur in a building society's mortgage, as will appear when the purpose of the security is considered. Building societies are established upon the principle, that their members will, by small monthly payments, realise a given sum at the expiration of a certain time. When a member borrows, he discounts his expectancy; that is, he receives the present value of what he would be entitled to receive after a given number of years, if he continued making his monthly payments during that period: this money, when paid to him, is his own money, and therefore not lent or advanced, and the member is never required to repay it, or give security for its repayment. The security taken from him is for a totally different purpose. The member has anticipated the fruits of a certain number of monthly payments, and, having anticipated the result, the security is taken that such monthly payments (by which the result is arrived at) may be made; it is therefore taken merely for the payment of certain small monthly sums, and for the observance of the rules of a society to which the person giving the security belongs; and I would submit that this security does not come within the definition of "mortgage."

C. G. K.

There is considerable plausibility in our correspondent's argument, and it is supported by the case of Silver v. Barnes, (8 Scott, 209; 6 Bing. N. C. 198), where a similar transaction among the members of a friendly society was held not to be usurious. It has also been suggested that these securities are not mortgages, (see 26 Law Jeurn., O.S., 387); but a well-founded distrust in the logic of the Courts, as applied to questions of stamp law, would alone be sufficient to prevent the suggestion, in a matter certainly of some nicety,

* We omitted, in our observations on Walker v. Giles, to suggest an argument drawn from the contents of the Loan Societies Act, (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 23), and other acts of a like nature, which may be properly referred to as affording an inference with respect to the general intention of the Legislature which passed them, without furnishing any argument the other way on the ground of diversity of expression, because they were drawn by different hands and passed at different times. Now, these acts, in unequivocal terms, incorporate the provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts so far only as they relate to the framing, certifying, inrolling, and altering of the rules.

from being acted upon. In very many transactions of the kind the question is of little consequence, the difference between the ad valorem stamp and the deed stamp being seldom more than 5*s.*, and in some the ad valorem stamp is less than the deed stamp. Possibly the question may be raised in court upon some building society's mortgage-deed bearing a stamp of 1*l.* only.

There are many varieties of building societies, and there are many societies so called, and registered by the not very discriminating gentleman appointed for the purpose, which are not within the Building Societies Act; but, for our present purpose, it will be sufficient to consider the simplest form which such societies assume. The object of the societies contemplated by the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, is in that act described to be the "raising, by the monthly or other subscriptions of the several members of such societies, shares not exceeding the value of 150*l.* for each share, such subscriptions not to exceed in the whole 20*s.* per month for each share, a stock or fund for the purpose of enabling each member thereof to receive out of the funds of such society the amount of his or her share or shares therein, to erect or purchase one or more dwelling-house or dwelling-houses, or other real or leasehold estate, to be secured by way of mortgage to such society until the amount or value of his or her shares shall have been fully repaid to such society, with the interest thereon, and all fines or other payments incurred in respect thereof." This object is not literally possible. No building society can make advances on mortgage in the manner proposed, to each and every member. There must be borrowing members and lending members. The members do not associate for the purpose of encouraging each other to save up money. In a society of which the rules are now before us the shares are 120*l.*, and the subscriptions 10*s.* per month, and the reserved or minimum prices of shares at the commencement and at each succeeding half year of the society's existence are fixed by a table, calculated on the assumption, that in ten or twelve years the operations of the society will have realised 120*l.* per share on all the shares not previously advanced. As soon as the society has funds sufficient to pay 120*l.* per share in full to each member who has not previously received his share or shares in advance, the funds are to be divided among those members, and the society dissolved. Some societies are constituted so as to be capable of perpetual existence, affording a permanent investment to those members who continue in them after the amounts of their shares are realised.

The large interest (from 8*l.* per cent. upwards) required to be made on the monthly subscriptions, in order to realise the shares in so short a period, is obtained by lending, out of the subscriptions and fines from time to time in hand, as they accumulate to sufficient amounts, to each member applying for an advance and bidding the best price for it, the value of his share at the time of making the advance, (calculated at 7*l.* or 8*l.* per cent. interest), minus such further discount as the competition of other members applying for the advance obliges him to submit to. The member obtaining the advance is enabled to pay this high rate of interest by buying with it a house at twelve or ten years' purchase, which, on account of the trouble and risk incident to such kind of property, is as much as it usually fetches. He receives the advance in satisfaction of all claims upon the society in respect of the share or shares advanced, and conveys the property to trustees for the society, as a security for the due payment of his monthly subscriptions during the continuance of the society.

Now, the question is, whether the security so given for future subscriptions is a mortgage. It is, we think, sufficiently, though not very aptly, described in the Building Societies Act as a mortgage of the house to the society "until the amount or value of the share shall have been fully repaid, with interest." The society is to hold the property in mortgage until it shall have received back "the amount or value" of the share, with interest; i. e. the nominal amount of the share (120*l.*), or the present value at the time of the advance, with interest sufficient to produce the nominal amount. This the act calls "a mortgage," and we think properly. Whether it is a mortgage within the meaning of the Stamp Act is the question. That meaning is, for our present purpose, to be picked out of the following expressions introductory to the scale of duties:— "Where the same respectively shall be made as a security for the payment of any definite and certain sum of money advanced or lent at the time, or previously due and owing, or forborne to be paid being payable, not exceeding" &c.

Now, we think that the security to the members of a building society is a security that they shall receive back the amount of certain monies subscribed and advanced by them, with interest, the repayment to be made by instalments of 10*s.* per month, consisting of principal and interest, to be continued for an unascertained, but ascertainable, period. It is not a purchase of a life annuity, where the principal is sunk, and may never be repaid; nor is it the purchase of an annuity at all, (if it were, the security might be liable to the conveyance stamp); but it is a security for the repayment of money lent. "There is no case," said Bayley, J., in Doe v. Gooch, (3 B. & Ald. 666), "in which an annuity for years has been held not to be usurious, where, on calculation, it appeared that more than the principal, together with legal interest, is to be received." In Fereday v. Wightwick, (1 Russ. & My. 52), Sir J. Leach, M. R., said, "This, in effect, is an agreement to repay the principal sum of 4000*l.*, with interest, by twenty-three instalments; and, as it appears that the interest thus paid will exceed legal interest, the transaction is plainly usurious." Now, the stat. 12 Anne, st. 2, c. 16, speaks only of interest on the "loan or forbearance" of money, &c., words not more comprehensive than those in the Stamp Act. It is true that the transaction may be stated as our correspondent has stated it, and then it does not look much like a mortgage. But such a statement, though it simplifies the matter to mercantile minds, by clothing it in familiar forms of expression, is purely figurative, and does not express the ultimate facts of the case, which are these: that, at a given moment, (A.) and (B. &c.), being equally interested in a sum of money and in the expected profits of the association, (A.) relinquishes his joint interest, receives the money, and secures the repayment of it, with something more for the use, to (B. &c.) Surely this is a mortgage. (See Mosley v. Baker, 6 Hare, 98; 12 Jur. 555). It is not correct to say that the mortgagor discounts his expectancy; he abandons it; and the true statement of the case is, that the society is formed for the purpose of enabling one class of members to make a profit by lending money to another class of members, if indeed the borrowers can properly be called members at all.

Suppose that A. and B. are partners, with a capital of 1000*l.*, A. being entitled to nine-tenths and B. to one-tenth, and that they are making 10*l.* per cent. profit. They agree to dissolve partnership, to convert their joint stock into money, and to pay it to B. upon his securing to A. an annuity of 160*l.* for ten years. Does the calling of this an annuity, or the late connexion of partnership between the parties, prevent it from being a mortgage for 900*l.*?

A more important question with regard to building societies is, whether a society is within the stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, if it allows one member to acquire a larger interest than 150*l.* in respect of his share or shares. We believe that no such restriction has ever been adopted, and until this question is decided, no title can be made by the trustees of any building society without the concurrence of the mortgagor; for no purchaser can be advised to rely on the applicability of the doctrine of Silver v. Barnes (8 Scott, 300) to building societies, even if that case was rightly decided. In Outbill v. Kingdom, (1 Exch. 494), where the validity of a mortgage to one of these societies was called in question, this objection was not taken; but Pollock, C. B., and Alderson, B., suggested a doubt whether the act was intended to sanction a larger interest in one member than 150*l.*; and Parke, B., expressed an opinion that it did not. We are afraid that no other conclusion can be arrived at without rejecting the words "not exceeding the value of 150*l.* for each share, such subscriptions not to exceed in the whole 20*s.* per month for each share," as wholly insensible and inoperative. No doubt the entire clause is ill conceived and ill expressed; and, indeed, in the part in question, ungrammatical and incoherent; but, unless the entire interest of each member is limited to 150*l.*, (whether in present value or ultimate amount we need not for the present inquire), the attempted restriction on the amounts of the shares and subscriptions is inoperative. The passage bears evident traces of some legislative convulsion, and the words "shares not exceeding the value of 150*l.* for each share" are probably either an unconformable deposit in committee, or the remains of an "eocene" clause, intended in committee to be submerged and overlaid by the subsequent words, "such subscriptions" &c., which we take to be a more recent deposit. However this may be, the Courts will be unwilling to accuse the Legislature of the folly of intending to limit the value and amount of each nominal share, without intending also to limit the number of shares to be held by each member. The intention, no doubt, here, as in the Loan Societies Act, (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 23, s. 6), was to limit both the amount of the shares and the amount of the subscriptions; or, if we are right in our explanation of the nomological structure of the act, it was at one time proposed that the limit on the amount of each member's interest should be imposed with reference to the value of his share, and at another time it was proposed that the limit should be on the amount of his monthly subscriptions alone, either mode of restricting the operations of such societies being considered sufficient for the purpose; and both propositions were by mistake incorporated in the act. The preamble of the act speaks of "small periodical subscriptions," and "a small freehold or leasehold property;" and it is incredible, that the Legislature should have intended to relax the usury laws with reference to transactions conducted in the form of a building society's loan, without limitation of amount. The expression "his or her share or shares" no doubt stands in the way of this construction; but it is much more easy to explain away these words, than to reject all the words upon which we have been commenting, as destitute of meaning. In the limiting part of the clause, the expression "each share" is evidently meant to express the entire share or interest of the member in the society. In subsequent passages, his or her "share or shares" refers to a possible division of that interest, for the convenience of making small advances.

The act leaves it doubtful whether the present value of each share, or the ultimate amount to be realised for each share, is intended. A subscription of 20*s.* per month looks like a subscription rather for shares which, at the commencement of the society's operations, will be worth 150*l.*, than for shares which will ultimately realise no more; but it is difficult to assign any judicial grounds for such a construction. Our own opinion is, that the limit of the amount of the subscriptions was intended to be substituted for that of the amount of the shares, as affording a more certain criterion of the value of each share, and placing less restriction on the details of the society's operations.

As the Barrister appointed to register these societies now acts upon the doubt expressed in Outbill v. Kingdom, the question will probably soon be decided upon a motion for a mandamus.

Lastly, it has been suggested that the act does not extend to copyholds. Freeholds and leaseholds only are mentioned in the preamble. This, perhaps, is not very material, and only shews that the gentleman who drew the act was not a conveyancer. The enacting part is perfectly general, and we cannot conceive that a mortgage of copyholds would not be within the protection of the act. The 5th section, however, which enables the society, by receipt indorsed on the mortgage-deed, to revest the estate in the mortgagor without any conveyance, would no doubt not extend to copyholds, so as to prejudice the lord; i. e. would not operate so as to render unnecessary any customary assurance or ceremony which would otherwise be necessary. But, when mortgages of copyholds are properly drawn, no customary assurance is necessary to put an end to them.

SOLICITORS' AND GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 57, Chancery-lane, London.

This Society presents the following Advantages to the Assured:—

First.—The security of a large subscribed Capital.

Second.—Exemption of the Assured from all liability.

Third.—Tables of Premiums calculated on the true law of mortality, expressly for this Office, and affording particular advantages to young lives.

Fourth.—Participating and Non-participating Scales of Premiums. In the former the Assured are entitled to EIGHTY PER CENT. or FOUR-FIFTHS of the profits divided amongst them periodically, either by way of addition to the sum assured, or in diminution of Premiums, at the option of the Assured.

Fifth.—No deduction is made from the four-fifths of the profits belonging to the Assured for interest on Capital, or Guarantee Fund.

Sixth.—No Policy disputed, except in case of fraud.

Seventh.—This Society gives a much larger share of profits to the Assured, and at a lower rate of Premium, than the great majority of other Life Offices.

Eighth.—Parties wishing to assure their lives without participating in the profits can do so on a lower scale of Premiums than that of a large proportion of other Offices.

Assurances may be effected through any respectable Solicitor, or by writing to the Secretary, from whom Prospectuses and all other requisite information may be obtained.

CHARLES JOHN GILL, Secretary.

LONDON, AUGUST 4, 1849.

The elevation to the Bench of a lawyer, distinguished as well for his successful cultivation of literature as for his professional knowledge, is to the Profession and the public much more than a mere act of judicious and deserved selection of a public officer: it is a manifestation of change in public opinion in a healthy direction. Time was when any man, applying himself to the law as a profession, felt it incumbent on him, if he had been so rash as to cultivate science or literature, not merely to abandon such pursuits, but formally and ostentatiously to publish such his renunciation; for it was concluded, that, unless the lawyer expelled from his mind every thought save of law, he could not be a lawyer. If the function of a lawyer consisted merely in his head being a storehouse of law, a sort of legal dictionary, whereout law is to be picked by another hand, guided by another intellect, there might be some soundness in this opinion. But such is not the function of a lawyer: his business is not merely to know the law, but to do that much more difficult thing, to perceive and explain correctly its application to the ever-varying circumstances that exist in the business of the world. A mere lawyer is, for all purposes of business, almost useless.

Then, if that be so, the question is, how are the qualities that are essential to the formation of the accomplished and practically useful counsel best acquired and strengthened? Judgment, knowledge of mankind, clearness of apprehension, and perhaps, above all, the faculty of expressing with the lips, not only with clearness, but with persuasive influence, that which the mind comprehends—these are among the essential qualities of the counsel and advocate. How are they best acquired and strengthened? Is it by a sickening devotion to the single pursuit of legal knowledge—by storing the memory till it is overloaded with legal reading, and exercising only those functions of the intellect which are called into play by purely technical disquisitions; or is it not rather by supplying the mind from time to time with fresh ideas, fresh objects of thought—studies which, being a change, invigorate and refresh, while they inform and enlarge? Can any man say that he will read one of the higher poets, or, if science be to his taste, that he will possess himself of the knowledge of any branch of it, and not by such intellectual exercise so strengthen his general faculties, so enlarge his circle of thought, that he will be, not a more learned, but a better lawyer—better in the sense, that what learning he possesses he will better wield; that what opinion he can form he will better express? If the matter rested upon reasoning, the conclusion would, we think, be clear, that, provided a man does not so spread and extend his pursuits as to fritter away his mental strength, by passing from subject to subject without possessing any, the greater the extent of his general knowledge—the greater the polish of his mind, by the pursuit of either art or literature, the more accomplished, the more useful will he be as a lawyer. But this conclusion does not rest on reasoning alone: it is supported by facts.

Of that class of our lawyers who have been almost what are termed "black-letter lawyers"—learned lawyers, par excellence—none, for instance, have been more learned, none more practical, than Butler and Fearne; yet both of these men were cultivators, almost to devotion, of other pursuits besides law—Butler in the field of literature, especially of ecclesiastical literature; Fearne in that of practical mechanics. The names of Lord Mansfield and Lord Stowell are familiar as those of men of whom it is historical, that their cultivation of various branches of knowledge came in aid of their reputation, and, we doubt not, of their capacity, as lawyers; and to these might be added numerous names among the living. To one, at least, that of Lord Jeffrey, it may be permitted to refer.

We look, then, upon the elevation of the recently-appointed Judge as a proof that the Government of the country has perceived a change in public opinion; that it is not afraid to make a man a Judge because he has been an open worshipper at the shrine of literature; and we trust that there is, in fact, such a change in public opinion, and that henceforth lawyers may shew that they are men as well as lawyers—may love something besides reports, and pleadings, and forms—may refresh and strengthen their minds and purify their tastes with the pursuits of art, or literature, or science, without it being concluded, that, in proportion as anything else goes into their heads, law goes out.

THE duty of a magistrate to accept bail for the appearance of a person charged with a misdemeanour, if sufficient sureties be tendered, has been clearly recognised for many years. In a recent case, in which it was held, that bail in such cases are not to be rejected on account of their personal character or opinions, Lord Denman, C. J., in delivering the judgment of the Court, said, "Standing charged with a misdemeanour, O'Neil (the accused) claims the right of every man, so charged, to be released from prison and admitted to bail on producing sufficient sureties. . . . . Neither of the learned counsel who opposed the rule contended, that a magistrate can lawfully reject bail at his own discretion, or is at liberty, when bail is offered, to enter into an investigation as to the character or opinions of such bail, provided he is satisfied of their sufficiency to answer for the appearance of the party, in the amount reasonably required for that purpose. The law is clear, and is as old as the Statute of Westminster, 3 Edw. 1, c. 15. Lord Coke, in his commentary upon that statute, (2 Inst. 191), says, that 'to deny a man plevin that is plevisable, and thereby to detain him in prison, is a great offence, and grievously to be punished.' And Lord Hale (2 P. C. 135) adopts the same remarks; and Hawkins (part 2, c. 15, s. 13) speaks of refusal of bail as an indictable offence. Blackstone, (4 Com. c. 22), referring to the ancient statute, the Habeas Corpus, and the Bill of Rights, calls it 'an offence against the liberty of the subject.' If, then, such refusal took place from improper motives, it might be treated as a criminal offence." (Reg. v. Badger, 4 Q. B. Rep. 468).

This was the rule as to all misdemeanours, and magistrates had no discretion on such charges, as to refusing the sureties, when once satisfied of their sufficiency. But it is remarkable, as observed by the Court in Linford v. Fitzroy, (13 Jur. 303), that the stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 23, has drawn a distinction, and given authority to justices to admit to bail, at their discretion, persons accused of certain specified misdemeanours, although, in other cases of misdemeanour, it has directed them to receive bail.

A question has recently been mooted, (independently of the last-named statute), whether an action can be maintained against a magistrate for refusing sufficient bail tendered on a charge of misdemeanour, unless he has been actuated in his refusal by malice. (Linford v. Fitzroy, 13 Jur. 303). This, as stated by the Court, depends on a previous question, whether the acceptance be a judicial or a ministerial act. It is, in truth, an act partaking of both a judicial and a ministerial character: judicial, as to the question of sufficiency of the bail; ministerial, as to that of the acceptance of them when found to be sufficient. The Court, after "much doubt and difficulty in arriving at a conclusion on the point," decided that they could not separate this two-fold character of the act, and laid down this "broad line of distinction, that, unless the duty of the magistrate is simply and purely ministerial, he cannot be made liable to an action for a mistake in doing, or omitting to do, anything in execution of that duty, unless he can be fixed with malice."

This decision, it will be seen, goes beyond other authorities relating to judicial and ministerial acts; and probably the rule may now be stated in the following terms—that no action will lie, in the absence of malice, where the act complained of is partly of a judicial and partly of a ministerial character, although the complaint may have reference simply to that part which is ministerial.

In these reports of bad reputation* still called "modern" are two cases on this subject, which are strengthened by their having been cited by the Court in Linford v. Fitzroy. One (Muriel v. Tracey, 6 Mod. 169) was an action on the case against three persons, one of whom was a justice, for a conspiracy illegally to imprison the plaintiff; and it appeared that the justice having been persuaded by the others that the offence was not bailable, had refused to bail the plaintiff. Holt, C. J., held, that, "if from ignorance of law, and no malice of heart, he had committed the plaintiff, he ought to be acquitted." In the other, (Rex v. Tracey, 6 Mod. 179), it was said, by the Court, that "it is an offence in a justice to refuse bail in case of a common misdemeanour; and it suffices to say, in the indictment, that sufficient bail was tendered, without saying that the party knew them to be sufficient."

In Osborn v. Gough (3 B. & P. 550) the declaration, in an action against a magistrate for a similar breach of duty, alleged that it was committed "maliciously," and probably malice was proved. The allegation of malice, however, is omitted in the precedent in 2 Chitty on Pleading, (p. 634), which should be corrected in this respect.

MASTER IN CHANCERY.—The Lord Chancellor has appointed George Arnold, Gent., of Edenbridge, Kent, to be a Master Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

* In Ridoubt v. Paine, (1 Ves. 11), Lord Hardwicke said that the case of Bridgwater v. Bolton (6 Mod. 186) was well reported in a book of no repute; and on another occasion, (Middleton v. Croft, Cas. temp. Hardw. 126), that 6 Mod. was not a book of the greatest authority or correctness. And as to the other volumes, see 7 East, 239; 2 Ld. Raym. 1072; 1 Burr. 386; 3 Burr. 1326; Doug. 83.

SPECIAL VERDICTS IN CRIMINAL CASES.

Our attention has been called, by a correspondent, to the observations of a learned counsel in a case of forgery, tried before Mr. Justice Erle at the Oxford Assizes, on the subject of special verdicts in criminal cases. On the judge suggesting to the jury to find the facts specially, the prisoner's counsel is reported to have said, that "the practice of finding special verdicts in criminal cases was a novelty, and that he was not then aware of any authority for it*." Abundant authority may, however, be produced in its support, and an examination of the question will leave no doubt that the suggestion of Mr. Justice Erle had the sanction of ancient practice and express decisions of the Courts. Blackstone, in treating of verdicts in criminal cases, says, "And such public or open verdict may be either general, guilty or not guilty, or special, setting forth all the circumstances of the case, and praying the judgment of the Court whether, for instance, on the facts stated, it be murder, manslaughter, or no crime at all;" (4 Bl. Com. 361); but he cites no authority in support of his position. It is laid down by Lord Chief Baron Comyns, that a special verdict may be found "in all cases, as well upon indictments as common pleas." (Com. Dig. "Pleader," S. 2). Hawkins remarks, "It is settled that the jury may give a special verdict in any criminal case, whether capital or not capital, as well as in civil." (2 P. C., c. 47, s. 3). So, remarks Lord Hale, "if a man be indicted of murder ex malitiâ præcogitatâ, the jury may find him guilty of manslaughter, (Co. Litt. 282. a.), or that he killed him se defendendo, or per infortunium; but nota, in these cases it is not sufficient generally to find it done se defendendo, or per infortunium, but the special matter must be set down how it was done; and if, upon the special matter shewn, it shall appear to be murder or manslaughter, the Court will judge of it. And in these cases, though it be found per infortunium, or se defendendo, upon the special matter set forth, yet this special matter must be recorded; for though it be not such a felony as hath judgment of life, yet it is such an offence as gives the forfeiture of goods, and therefore they may not find a general not guilty, but must find the special matter, and leave it to the Court to judge." (2 P. C. 302). "Many special verdicts," continues Lord Hale, "have been found, as upon the statute of stabbing, so upon the point whether murder or not; but it is difficult to find them so that judgment may be given for murder, because there are so many circumstances required to be found, that if any be omitted the verdict will fall only to manslaughter. I have rarely known, upon any special verdict, where the question was murder or manslaughter, judgment to be given for murder, but commonly for manslaughter, or se defendendo. Tutius erratur ex parte mitiori." Lord Coke, also, to the same effect, and referring to numerous cases in the books, says, "And as a special verdict may be found in common pleas, so may it also be found in pleas of the Crown, or criminal causes that concern life or member." (Co. Litt. 226. b.)

In Dowman's case (9 Coke, 12. b.) it was expressly decided that a special verdict may be given in criminal cases. The jury having found the facts specially, "it was resolved, by Sir Edward Anderson, C. J., and all the justices of the bench, that the special verdict in the case at bar was well found; and they held, that in all pleas of the Crown, as in common pleas, and upon all issues joined, either between the King and the party, or between party and party, the jury may find the special matter, which is pertinent, and tends only to the issue joined, upon which, being doubtful to them in law, they may pray the opinion of the Court; and this they may do by the common law, which has ordained that matters in fact shall be tried by jurors, and matters in law by judges."

In Mackalley's case, (9 Coke, 63), where the prisoner was indicted for murder, the whole of the special verdict is set out at length, in proper form.

In Joyner's case, at the sessions for Newgate, April 20, 1664, (1 Kelynge, 29), the jury were recommended to find the facts specially; but eventually a verdict of not guilty was entered, on the ground that "it would be dishonourable for the Court, in so plain a case, to suffer the jury to find a special verdict." And in Reg. v. Mawgridge (Hil. Term, 5 Anne; Kel. 120) the jury found a special verdict, and, the record having been removed into the Queen's Bench, the matter was argued before all the judges. In Oneby's case, (Trin., 13 Geo. 1, B. R.), where the prisoner was indicted for murder, the jury also found a special verdict, on which the Court afterwards gave judgment. In Morgan's case (Bulst. 87) the jury found the facts specially, and upon the finding of the jury the Court were divided, Williams and Crooke, JJ., holding that the facts amounted to murder, and Flemming, C. J., entertaining a different opinion; and, remarks Bulstrode, "as for the verdict thus given by the jury of this curia advisare vult, and so the matter was adjourned till another day."

Beside these instances, in which special verdicts have been given in criminal cases, our attention has been pointed to the case of John Huggins. (17 St. Tr. 372, 380). The prisoner was indicted for murder, and a special verdict was returned, and afterwards a venire de novo awarded. These authorities will, perhaps, be accepted as sufficient vindication of the antiquity and propriety of the practice; it is only necessary to add, that, in a recent case before the Court of Criminal Appeal, judgment was given on a special verdict.

COUNTY COURTS.—ORDER IN COUNCIL.

At a Court holden at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, on the 30th ult., present, the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council, it was ordered—

That from and after the 1st October, 1849, the person or persons holding the office of clerk of the respective county courts hereinafter mentioned, under the provisions of an act passed in the tenth year of her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the more easy Recovery of Small Debts and Demands in England," shall be paid by salaries, instead of by fees, and that the sum of 500*l.* per annum shall be the salary attached to the office of clerk of each of the said courts, whether the same shall be filled by one or more persons; and that the sum of 500*l.* per annum shall be paid by way of salary to the person or persons holding the office of clerk of each of the following county courts, (exclusive of all salaries to his clerk or clerks employed in the business of such court, and other expenses incidental to the office of clerk, to be regulated and controlled by the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury), at such times and in such manner as the said commissioners may think fit to direct; but in case the clerk of any one of the said county courts shall have acted in the same capacity in any court mentioned in the Schedule (A.) annexed to the said act which has been abolished, and was in the receipt of a larger net income than 500*l.* per annum, then the salary of such clerk shall not be less than the average amount of the salary, fees, or emoluments of his former office during the seven years next before the passing of the said act, namely:—

A SUMMARY of the LAW of MODERN PLEADING, incident to the Rules of Hilary Term, 1834; with such of the Decisions on Practice, Evidence, and Costs, as are closely connected with that subject. Also, copious Analysis of the Cases and Pleadings. By ROBERTS PHILIP TYRWHITT, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

"The reports of the "Common-law Commissioners" suggested extensive changes in the practice on this important subject, (Pleading), which changes, whether improvements or not, were sanctioned by Parliament, and embodied by all the common-law courts in general rules, dated Hilary Term, 1834. It was then sought to adapt old principles to modern exigencies, and to link the present with the past by regulating the transition—with what success the work before us attempts to develope. It embodies in its text the pith of the decisions on "Modern Pleading," as incident to the above "rules," and condenses in the notes other valuable matter at present spread over lengthy "reports." The latter feature is adapted to render the volume more extensively useful in courts of Nisi Prius, particularly on the circuits, and in the library of country practitioners. Nor is it rigorously limited to its chief object; but includes the course of decisions on the replication de injuriâ in its extended application, as well as on the modern acts respecting land, tithes, mines, commons, ways, and easements, together with so much of the law of amendment, evidence, and costs as elucidates the new rules of pleading. On the whole, this work appears to have been prepared with much care and industry, and will be found to afford in small comparative compass a useful adjunct to the works of Stephen and Chitty."—Times, Oct. 29th, 1846.

The present State of the Law of Racing, Wagers, and Gaming. Also a few unreported Cases; the Statutes to the present Time; with some Miscellaneous Information.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"There is something eminently practical in the general aspect of the book; it is small, compact of print and law, and clearly arranged and set forth."—The Jurist.

"No turf-man, betting-man, horse-dealer, stable-keeper, or in fact any other description of horseman will be able to get on in his business without this book."—The Veterinarian.

"This a most useful book, edited by Mr. G. H. H. Oliphant, a Barrister, and embraces every matter in which the Horse is concerned. Every question is treated of with clearness and accuracy, and the law as it exists is explained and demonstrated by recent decisions in the Courts of Law. The question respecting Derby Clubs and their legality forms a prominent portion of the work, and we unfeignedly recommend its possession to all interested in the numerous subjects on which it treats."—Bell's Life.

LONDON, AUGUST 11, 1849.

In the pages of a contemporary* we find a severe criticism on a bill brought during the late Session into Parliament, which we notice, not so much with reference to the bill itself, as to the efforts made by our learned contemporary to defend and uphold the jury system. "We have never shewn," says the learned writer, "an undue disposition to oppose any alteration in the law which was recommended by a reasonable chance of benefit to the country; but we are quite unable to keep pace with the restless innovations of the Attorney-General, and we owe no apology for denouncing this new measure of his as a very needless and mischievous attack on trial by jury. On what conceivable ground does he defend this demolition of one-half of its scope and effect? For a thousand years and upwards it has been esteemed a main bulwark of public justice and popular safety. If it be useless in half the cases to which it has hitherto been extended, how came it to pass that no one ever found that out till Sir J. Jervis brought in his bill this Session for its semi-destruction?"

To this it might be answered, that for at least five hundred years coats of mail were esteemed a necessary instrument of defence; yet the time came when they ceased to be so, and ceased to be thought so, and the fact of their previous reputation was not thought to afford a sufficient ground for perpetuating their use. For centuries before the year 1833 fines and recoveries, and for centuries also before the year 1844 terms for years, were esteemed a main bulwark of safety to the landowner; yet both of these time-honoured institutions, if we may so call them, came to an end, and landowners are not the worse. Again: London was, for we know not how many hundred years, without any drainage whatever; and now, for no inconsiderable time, she has enjoyed partially her present subterranean sewerage. Was it ever a tenable argument for not giving London her present sewerage, that she had been so long without any? or is it now a tenable argument for not adopting a better system of sewerage, that London has for some very long time been in the habit of relying on the present one?

In truth, of all arguments, that ab antiquitate simply is the most irrational, the most unfit to be addressed to men. If any inference could be safely or justly drawn from the mere fact of an institution having remained unchanged for a thousand years, it should rather be that it must have ceased to be applicable, than that it is of great value. For as it is unquestionable that men, or at least Anglo-Saxon men, do not remain stationary, so that the state of society now is totally different from that of the days of Alfred, it should rather be concluded that the institutions which were created by, and adapted to, the wants of our rude forefathers, are not adapted to a state of society infinitely more complicated, infinitely more refined. In reality, however, the argument of antiquity is quite worthless for any other purpose than that of historical reverence. To shew that an institution has been maintained, by a people of any intelligence and energy, for a long time, is certainly an argument in favour of the presumption, that that institution possessed merit at some time, and probably for a long time, otherwise the people would have destroyed it; but, as an argument either for or against its actual and existing value, it is, as we have said, wholly worthless and delusive, and only fit to be addressed to persons without education and without reflection.

With regard to the actual and existing merits of the jury system of trial, we have on more than one occasion expressed our opinion in this journal. We hold it to be a relic of ruder times, which it is quite a mistake to perpetuate in our system of administering justice. We are not here to inquire when it was a beneficial institution; we assume that it has been so for some given time, but we conceive its value has long been equal to that of fines and recoveries, and coats of mail; in other words, whatever it may have been, it has long ceased to be useful. The difficult cases that have to be decided at this day—and it is only the difficult ones that test the efficiency of the tribunal—are principally cases complicated both as to the law and the facts: cases, particularly in criminal matters, in which frequently all the material evidence is circumstantial, and requiring considerable acumen and knowledge to enable the jury to elicit the truth. Matters involving medical, chemical, and general scientific knowledge; matters requiring the habit of investigation of an educated mind; matters presented to the jury by men of the most highly educated and sharpened intellects, often in a mode studiously destined to produce mystification—these are the subjects on which juries are called upon to exercise their functions. And of what sort of men are juries composed? Usually of persons with scarcely sufficient education to understand the ordinary conversational language of educated men, and quite incapable of any close or acute reasoning. But this, it will be said, is an objection to the mode of composing juries, not to juries themselves. It is; but we are dealing with the jury system as it exists, and not with an ideal jury system, which it may be impossible to conjure into existence. But, supposing juries to be formed of men of competent education and intelligence, of what use is such a body at all? It is clear that it cannot be necessary on the ground of a judge being incapable of collecting the facts; if that were so, then a jury would be as essential to courts of equity and bankruptcy as to a court of common law: to none of which it is thought or found to be necessary. But it is said to be requisite for the protection of the public—to stand, as it is called, between the Crown and the subject. To this it may be answered, in the first place, that the only sort of case in which there could be any practical necessity, for the protection of the subject, for a jury to stand between him and the Crown, would be political trials; and these may be dismissed with the observation, that, since the judges have been independent of the Crown, the danger is rather the other way, of judges leaning towards a political offender, from notions of humanity, or from a love of popularity, a thing which they may win or lose, than of leaning towards the Crown, to obtain a favour of which they are quite independent. In modern times, too, the great power of public opinion, and, we may add, the higher tone of individual integrity, combine to make judges shrink from any intentional act of injustice.

Then, with regard to all cases, other than political cases, what is meant by the jury protecting the subject? Primâ facie the judge can have no more leaning for or against one of two contending parties than a jury; and if it be said that the sympathies of a judge may be expected to be with the richer or more refined of the parties, the answer is, that the sympathies of the jury may be expected to be the other way, and therefore that the end which is pretended to be sought is not attained; the object not being that the poor or the vulgar should have an unfair advantage, any more than the rich and refined, but that all shall have justice. To this it may be added, that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred neither party is of sufficient note or importance for the judge to trouble his head about him personally; and that there is much less chance of a judge being swayed by personal or local prejudices or affections, than of a jury being so swayed, keeping particularly in mind that the chances of wrong bias are, as between a jury and a judge, as twelve to one.

As regards the feelings of the people themselves about jury trial, it is difficult at present to ascertain what they are. The fact that we noticed in our last number, relating to the small number of cases, under the County Court jurisdiction, in which resort has been had to a jury, is of some significance, as shewing, at least, no overweening reliance on the justice of juries, as compared to that of judges, in a considerable class of her Majesty's litigants. It is, of course, not conclusive. Another fact of great importance, as regards the views of litigants of the wealthier kind, may be noticed, viz. that in all the complaints that the public make against the Court of Chancery, no one has ever thought of including a complaint that it is not provided with juries to try its facts.

We believe, that in almost all cases affecting civil rights of any amount or value, the parties would themselves greatly prefer the decision of judges than of juries on the facts, relying more on their intelligence, and not less on their integrity. We believe, further, that the vitality of trial by jury is thoroughly exhausted; that it is ripe for destruction; and that when it has been destroyed, men will marvel, as they have done in regard to many other worn-out institutions, that they should so long have thought the welfare of the state depended on a thing so utterly without force.

BURN'S JUSTICE of the PEACE and PARISH OFFICER. The Twenty-ninth Edition, corrected and greatly enlarged, containing the Statutes and Cases to 7 & 8 Vict., inclusive, with a New Collection of Precedents. The Title "Poor" by Mr. Commissioner BERE, of the Exeter District Court of Bankruptcy; the rest of the Work by THOMAS CHITTY, Esq., of the Inner Temple.

On introducing a new and greatly improved edition of an old-established book, like "Burn's Justice," to the notice of the Members of the Magistracy and the Legal Profession, the Publishers need only point attention to the claims which it has upon two such large and influential bodies, to ensure a success similar to that which has attended all previous editions. Since the year 1837 (the date of the last edition) a considerable number of important Statutes have been passed; by several of these Statutes the executive power of the Magistrate has been somewhat restricted, and by others extended, while the whole duties of the office have undergone too many changes not to render a New Edition (embodying every Act and decision to the present time) a valuable and necessary addition to the Libraries of Gentlemen engaged in the Local Administration of Justice. The Six Volumes have received a thorough revision; the Forms have been re-modelled, and carefully adapted to the recent changes; several new Titles (created by modern enactments) have been introduced, and great exertions have been made to ensure a correct and full development of the Law as it now stands. The title "Poor," which occupies the whole of the Fourth Volume, has again been prepared by Mr. Commissioner Bere; and his object has been to furnish the cases at full length, being satisfied that no compendious abstract, however carefully made, would supply a satisfactory Manual for those who attend the Quarter Sessions. The Marginal Notes and the Index are, however, abridgments of the Cases, so that the general principles of the Law may be ascertained without reading the fuller statement. The great utility of the Work as an authority, presenting the cases in detail, and superseding the Reports themselves, is thereby preserved, at the same time that the necessity of reading the whole is obviated by the fulness of the Marginal Note.

SOLICITORS' AND GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 57, Chancery-lane, London.

This Society presents the following Advantages to the Assured:—

First.—The security of a large subscribed Capital.

Second.—Exemption of the Assured from all liability.

Third.—Tables of Premiums calculated on the true law of mortality, expressly for this Office, and affording particular advantages to young lives.

Fourth.—Participating and Non-participating Scales of Premiums. In the former the Assured are entitled to EIGHTY PER CENT. or FOUR-FIFTHS of the profits divided amongst them periodically, either by way of addition to the sum assured, or in diminution of Premium, at the option of the Assured.

Fifth.—No deduction is made from the four-fifths of the profits belonging to the Assured for interest on Capital, or Guarantee Fund.

Sixth.—No Policy disputed, except in case of fraud.

Seventh.—This Society gives a much larger share of profits to the Assured, and at a lower rate of Premium, than the great majority of other Life Offices.

Eighth.—Parties wishing to assure their lives without participating in the profits can do so on a lower scale of Premiums than that of a large proportion of other Offices.

Assurances may be effected through any respectable Solicitor, or by writing to the Secretary, from whom Prospectuses and all other requisite information may be obtained.

LONDON, AUGUST 18, 1849.

In the last number of The Jurist (p. 680) is reported a case of Gridley v. Austen, on the sufficiency of an attorney's bill, which appears to us singularly decided. The ground on which the learned judges held that the plaintiff could not recover appears to have been, that the defendant was not sufficiently apprised by the bill, and the letter enclosing it, that he was the person "to be charged." The question was one wholly of construction of the bill and letter, and it seems to us that the Court put on the two instruments a very strained construction against the plaintiff. The business, it seems, had been done in respect of a proposed separation between a man and his wife: the husband was in France; the wife was, at the time of the business being done, residing with her uncle in England, and the business was done in England. Whether, in terms, the attorney was employed by the wife, or whether by the uncle, does not appear. It would be too much, however, to suppose that the attorney intended to do it for the wife on her own credit; or that he intended to do, on the credit of her husband, business, the very essence of which was hostility to her husband.

The bill was headed, "In the matter of Mr. and Mrs. John Humphreys," and was enclosed in a letter addressed to the defendant, and in that letter was the passage, "I beg to hand you my account"—a mode of addressing the defendant which, if the plaintiff meant to charge Mr. Humphreys, the husband, would have been simply impertinent, unless accompanied by a request to forward the account to Mr. Humphreys. For when a man of business sends a bill or account to another, saying, "I send you my account," he always means to say, unless he qualifies his statement, that the account is the account of the person to whom he sends it. Certainly, at least, if a tradesman were to send to A. a bill for goods supplied to B., and say, "I send you my account," the party addressed would be at a loss to understand why an account should be sent to him with which he had no earthly concern. But then it was said by one of the learned judges, in Gridley v. Austen, that the inference from the language of the whole letter was, that the bill was sent to the defendant, the uncle of Mrs. Humphreys, merely because she had left him; and that if she had been still with him, it would have been sent to her. But let us look at the letter and the circumstances of the case. The uncle did not reside in London—he had come with his niece from France, after her quarrel with her husband, apparently for no other purpose than to have for her legal advice upon the separation. The attorney's letter, enclosing his bill, did not say, "I hand you my account for Mrs. Humphreys, because she is no longer with you; but because I presume, that, she having gone, you will soon go too; therefore I hand you my account." The common-sense inference to be collected from the language of this letter is, we submit, that the bill was then sent to the defendant, instead of later, because the attorney was afraid the defendant would be leaving town, and wished to have his bill settled before he did so; not that he sent it to the defendant, as the agent of the wife, to be forwarded to her. Nor was it at all consistent with the notion that the attorney intended to charge Mrs. Humphreys or her husband, that he should express, as he did, a hope to the uncle that the bill would be found satisfactory—a question with which the uncle had nothing whatever to do, if he was not intended to pay it. The internal evidence of the bill itself appears to us also to tend to the same point. If the attorney had intended to charge Mr. Humphreys, the heading would have been, not "In the matter of Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys," but, naming the husband, in the matter of "yourself and Mrs. Humphreys." The very heading of the bill shewed, therefore, that it was not intended to charge Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys, but some other person; and, coupling the terms of the bill with the fact of its being delivered to the defendant, and the language of the letter accompanying it, it appears to us that an intention was shewn, as strongly as it can be shewn by construction, to charge the defendant. Now, it is not, and was not in Gridley v. Austen, questioned, that a charge by construction is sufficient to satisfy the statute; that is, that if the bill and accompanying letter together do shew an intent to charge a particular person, that person need not be specifically named as the person charged in the bill itself.

We should, probably, not have ventured to contest the correctness of a decision in which three learned judges concurred, were it not that one of them was originally of a different opinion from that which he expressed when the case came before him in Banc. And though, of course, the deliberate opinion of a judge, after hearing a case argued in Banc, is, in general, more likely to be correct than the one formed in the hurry of Nisi Prius business, yet, on the other hand, it is more possible that he should be swayed by the influence of cunning argument and of the expressed opinion of other judges. As it is, we have thought that we might, without presumption, question the decision of the Court in this case—the more, that it turns not so much on positive law, as on the inferences to be collected from the construction of specially-worded written instruments.

STAMPS.—INDORSEMENTS AND SCHEDULES.

In the case of Weedon v. Woodbridge (13 Jur., part 1, p. 630) a landlord made some improvements in the demised property, in consideration of which the tenant agreed to pay an additional rent, and by an indenture indorsed on the original lease it was expressed, that, in consideration of the improvements, the landlord demised to the tenant the within-described premises for the residue of the term within granted, subject to the within-contained provisoes, covenants, and agreements, and yielding the yearly rent of 25*l*., in addition to the rent of 420*l*. reserved by the within-written indenture. It was held by the Court of Queen's Bench, that the second lease was not liable to any progressive duty in respect of the matter contained in the lease to which it referred, and which it bore on its back. It had been contended, that the old lease came within the description, in the Stamp Act, (Schedule, Part 1, titles DEED, LEASE), of a "schedule, receipt, or other matter put or indorsed thereon or annexed thereto." Some interlocutory remarks of the judges are not easy to be understood. Thus, Coleridge, J., is reported to have said, that "the Stamp Act assumes that the principal instrument is in existence and in force when the indorsement or annexation is made." This surely cannot be the meaning of the words in the Stamp Act. It could never have been intended, on the one hand, to charge an instrument with progressive duty on matter indorsed on it subsequently to its execution, and not referred to in it; or, on the other, to exempt from progressive duty matter indorsed on an instrument before its execution, and incorporated in it by reference. The word "receipt" certainly presents a difficulty; for it is seldom that an indorsed receipt is referred to by the principal instrument, while it would be imputing too absurd an intention to the framers of this absurd act to say that it was intended to prohibit persons, after the execution of a deed duly stamped with reference to its contents, from indorsing a receipt on it, if the stamp on the deed were insufficient to cover the indorsement, which would be the effect of the learned judge's construction. (See Bowring v. Stevens, 2 Car. & P. 337). Under the head "RECEIPT," in the Stamp Act, receipts indorsed on deeds are exempted from the receipt-stamp duty. But the import of the decision we are considering ought to be gathered from the judgment of the Court, which was pronounced by Patteson, J., to this effect:—"We think that the stamp is not insufficient, by reason of the second lease being indorsed on the original lease, to which, and to the terms of which, it referred. Nor is the stamp on the original lease affected by the second lease, because it is not indorsed on or annexed to the original lease, within the meaning of the Stamp Act, 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, Schedule, Part 1."

It is, perhaps, owing to the complication of the Stamp Act that judges so often err in stating and applying its provisions. The Stamp Act imposes no duty on an instrument indorsed on, or annexed to, another, in respect of such indorsement or annexation, but it imposes an additional duty on an instrument which refers to matter indorsed on, or annexed to, itself. So, in Warren v. Howe, (2 B. & C. 281), a question on a mortgage stamp was decided exclusively with reference to the title "Conveyance" in the schedule to the Stamp Act; and in Pooley v. Goodwin (4 Adol. & Ell. 94) the Court first treated a mortgage as an absolute assignment, and then referred to extrinsic evidence to shew what amount of mortgage-stamp duty it was liable to.

It was not contended, in Weedon v. Woodbridge, that the original lease could be liable to any further duty by reason of the indorsement; but the point was, that the second lease, by referring to it and incorporating its contents, made it a schedule to itself, indorsed or or annexed, and so became liable to the progressive duty on the aggregate number of words in both. In the absence of any expressed ground of decision on this point, we venture to suggest, that the provision in the Stamp Act was intended to apply only to words indorsed on and referred to by the deed in question, which by such reference become incorporated in the deed and are operative by virtue of such incorporation; it was not intended to apply to the contents of an instrument annexed to the deed in question, which contents are referred to by way of statement or explanation only and are not incorporated as part of the new deed, as owing to it the force and significance then attributed to them: and that, in the case under consideration, the formal repetition of the words of demise did not make the second deed a new lease, but was mere surplusage because the old lease was in effect left in force, with the single addition of a further rent. If, before the second lease was made, the first lease had been surrendered or forfeited, and so was not in force at the date of its annexation to the second, the decision must, we conceive, have been different; and it is for the purpose of pointing out the limited application of the decision in Weedon v. Woodbridge that we have noticed the case.

If a deed, after having been duly stamped and executed, is varied in a material part, so as to require a new execution, and is re-executed accordingly, it must (unless the alteration was a mere correction of a mistake and arose from no change of intention) be re-stamped. (Schumann v. Weatherhead, 1 East, 537; Hill v. Patten, 8 East, 373; Bacon v. Simpson, 3 Mee. & W. 70). It could never have been intended to allow this rule be evaded (so far as regards the progressive duty) by indorsing on the old and effete instrument another containing the variations, and referring to the old instrument for the substance of the contract. Still less could it have been intended to allow a landlord to grant to his tenant A. a lease on the terms contained in an expired lease to B., annexed to and incorporated by reference in the new lease, without covering by the stamp on the new lease the words contained in the old one. Nor is the plan of referring to the instrument in its detached state more available than that of annexing it; for under the head "SCHEDULE" a duty equivalent to the progressive duty* is imposed on every "schedule, inventory, or catalogue of any lands, hereditaments, or heritable subject, or of any furniture, fixtures, or other goods or effects; or containing the terms and conditions of any proposed sublease or tack, or the conditions and regulations for the cultivation or management of any farm, lands, or other property leased or agreed to be leased; or containing any other matter or matters of contract or stipulation whatsoever, which shall be referred to in or by, and be intended to be used or given in evidence as part of or as material to, any agreement, lease, tack, bond, deed, or other instrument charged with any duty, but which shall be separate and distinct from, and not indorsed or annexed to, such agreement," &c.

Upon the questions above suggested, as upon almost every other question on the Stamp Act, the decisions are conflicting. We shall notice first those which we conceive to be sound. In Wickens v. Evans (4 Car. & P. 359) it was held, by Bosanquet, J., that the stamp on an agreement, referring to Bowles's Map of England and Wales annexed to it, must cover all the names in that map. (See, however, as to names foreign to the agreement, Dudley v. Robins (3 Car. & P. 26) and Briggs v. Peel, (11 Jur. 611)). In Veal v. Nicholls (1 Moo. & Rob. 243) an agreement, referring to an inventory which was annexed to it and, before the annexation, had been duly stamped as an inventory, was held liable to progressive duty in respect of the inventory; Tindal, C. J., observing, that "the circumstance of the inventory being stamped as an inventory cannot make any difference in the question; the point in dispute is, whether the agreement be duly stamped." This decision followed the authority of Lake v. Ashwell, (3 East, 327), where it was held, under an old stamp act, (37 Geo. 3, c. 90), that an inventory of goods, duly stamped as such, being annexed to a bill of sale which referred to it, required to be stamped as part of the deed. In Duck v. Braddyll (13 Price, 455; M'Clel. 455) the converse point was decided, that an instrument executed for an independent purpose, and not duly stamped as such, might be read as a schedule to an instrument to which it was annexed, and which bore a stamp sufficient to cover its contents.

When a detached schedule is unstamped, the instrument which refers to it may be read alone, quantum valeat. (Sneezum v. Marshall, 7 Mee. & W. 417; Daines v. Heath, 3 C. B. 940; Dyer v. Green, 1 Exch. 71).

In Attwood v. Small (7 B. & C. 390; 1 Man. & Ry. 246) an agreement, duly stamped, was abandoned, and a substituted agreement was indorsed on it, and incorporated by reference an arbitration clause contained in the former. Lord Tenterden, C. J., held, on a motion for a new trial, that the new agreement did not require a stamp in respect of the matter comprised in the agreement on which it was indorsed and to which it referred, and said, "In Lake v. Ashwell the schedule was annexed to the deed, in the very words of the act of Parliament. In the present case the words of the clause of reference [i.e. the proviso for arbitration] were not in the instrument, nor in any schedule, instrument, or other matter put or indorsed thereon or annexed thereto." It is as useless to comment on a judgment like this as to argue against an assertion that two and two make five. It is equally contrary to common sense and to the authority of Lake v. Ashwell and Veal v. Nicholls.

In Strutt v. Robinson (3 B. & Adol. 395) an agreement for a new tenancy adopted by reference the terms contained in an expired lease, and it was held that that lease did not require a new stamp, as a schedule, inventory, or catalogue. In Pearce v. Cheslyn (5 N. & M. 653) an agreement, amounting to a lease, and duly stamped as such, referred to and adopted the stipulations contained in an abandoned lease, which was not stamped. It was argued that the abandoned lease could not be read in evidence, but the Court held that "that argument was not well founded, as the lease was incorporated with the second agreement, which was stamped with a lease stamp." It would seem that the instruments were annexed, though the report is not very clear on this point; and, if so, the decision was of course correct, no question having been raised as to the progressive duty. But, during the argument, Lord Denman, C. J., asked whether, if a lease referred to and incorporated the contents of a form in "The Attorney's Pocket-book," it would be necessary to have the Attorney's Pocket-book stamped? If a particular copy of the book were referred to, and annexed to the lease, it would be necessary that the stamp on the latter should cover so much of the book as was referred to; and if not annexed, then the book would be liable to the schedule stamp on the part referred to. But a mere reference to a published work, without specifying any copy, is a reference to an incorporeal thing, and not any piece of paper, parchment, or vellum, within the Stamp Act.

In Turner v. Power (7 B. & C. 625) a parol agreement was made between A. and B. for a tenancy in the terms contained in a written agreement between A. and C., which agreement amounted to a lease, and, being stamped as an agreement only, was rejected by the Court when offered to prove the terms of the contract between A. and B. The answer to this decision is, that the writing was referred to as a writing, and not as a lease or operative instrument, and therefore for that purpose it was as immaterial whether it was stamped as it was whether it was executed; and, being referred to by a verbal agreement, it could not be liable to duty as a schedule to any instrument charged with duty. See Drant v. Brown, (3 B. & C. 665), where the same point was properly decided, and Duck v. Braddyll, (M'Clel. 455), where it was held that an independent instrument, not properly stamped as such, may be read in evidence as a schedule to another instrument, properly stamped, to which it was annexed, and which does not refer to it as being in itself operative. So, in Wallis v. Broadbent, (4 Adol. & Ell. 877), where it was attempted to make out an implied contract of tenancy upon the terms of an expired lease, it was held, that the lease, not being properly stamped, was not admissible, for it was required not merely to prove the terms of the new parol contract, but the fact of the former existence of the old contract. But Coleridge, J., said, "I do not wish to be bound to an assertion, that, if there had been proof of an express promise to hold upon the terms contained in the original instrument, the mere production of the instrument, without proof of the execution, or stamp, might not be sufficient." And Patteson, J., expressed himself to the same effect.

Unsatisfactory as the cases are, there is enough of authority to furnish a warning against acting on the common notion, that a deed, duly stamped in respect of its own operation, may be referred to by another instrument in a distinct transaction, either as a detached or as an annexed schedule, without being covered by a new stamp.

* Except that the first stamp of 1*l.* 5*s.* on a schedule may cover 2159 words.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

Sir,—In reference to the question now so much agitated, whether the clauses of the Friendly Societies Act, 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, giving an exemption from stamp-duties on mortgages and other securities made to societies within the provisions of that act, are extended to building societies under the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, I would beg to call your attention to a case reported in your number of the 28th ult. (p. 634), Ex parte Payne, in the Bail Court, which proceeds entirely on the assumption that the clauses of the Friendly Societies Act, relating to the referring of disputes to arbitration, are clearly incorporated into the Building Societies Act. But those clauses have no more to do with the "framing, certifying, altering, or inrolling the rules" of such societies than the clauses relating to exemption from stamp-duties. In fact, Sir, there is no clause whatever, from beginning to end of the Friendly Societies Act, which is or can be applicable both to the "purpose" of a building society and to the certifying and inrolling its rules. And to limit the incorporation of the clauses of the Friendly Societies Act to those which relate only to the inrolling or certifying &c. its rules, is giving just as much a disjunctive effect to the word "and" as the incorporation of those clauses which are applicable only to the "purpose" of a building society.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

C. B.

The case cited by our correspondent furnishes a complete answer to his assertion, that "there is no clause whatever, from beginning to end of the Friendly Societies Act, which is or can be applicable both to the purpose of a building society and to the [framing,] certifying, inrolling, [and altering] its rules." (We have corrected the terms of his proposition to make them accord with those of the act). In Ex parte Payne (13 Jur., part 1, p. 634) the rules of a building society were framed with a provision for the reference of disputes to arbitration, in accordance with the 27th section of the Friendly Societies Act, which enacts, "that provision shall be made by one or more of the rules of every such society, to be confirmed as required by this act, specifying whether a reference of every matter in dispute between any such society, or any person acting under them, and any individual member thereof, or person claiming on account of any member, shall be made to such of his Majesty's justices of the peace as" &c. This rule of a building society was, we conceive, applicable to the purpose of such society, and it was framed, certified, and inrolled, and so came strictly within the terms of the incorporative clause of the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, attributing to the word "and" its proper meaning. Nor is it absolutely necessary to change the second "and" in the same clause, which precedes the word "altering," into "or," because all the incorporated clauses are collectively referred to, and described as being applicable to building societies, and to "the framing, certifying, inrolling, and altering the rules thereof." The sentence is, like the rest of the act, very ill-penned, and the second "and," if not defensible on the ground we have suggested, must suffer some violence in order to give any sense at all to the clause; but that is no reason for changing the meaning of the word in other places where there is no necessity for doing so, and least of all in the place where, as we conceive, it was used advisedly and emphatically in its proper sense.

We take this opportunity of referring, in confirmation of the dicta in Cutbill v. Kingdom, as to the limit intended by the Legislature to be placed on the operations of building societies, to the observations of the Vice-Chancellor of England in the case of Dobinson v. Hawkes, (12 Jur. 1037).

Buying, Selling, Exchanging; Unsoundness, Vice, Warranty, False Representation; Auctions, and Repositories; the Privileges and Liabilities of Innkeepers, Livery-stable Keepers, Farriers, Trainers, &c.; Hiring and Borrowing Horses; Negligent Driving; the Rule of the Road, and Trespass in Hunting. The present State of the Law of Racing, Wagers, and Gaming. Also a few unreported Cases; the Statutes to the present Time; with some Miscellaneous Information.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"There is something eminently practical in the general aspect of the book; it is small, compact of print and law, and clearly arranged and set forth."—The Jurist.

"No turf-man, betting-man, horse-dealer, stable-keeper, or in fact any other description of horseman will be able to get on in his business without this book."—The Veterinarian.

"This a most useful book, edited by Mr. G. H. H. Oliphant, a Barrister, and embraces every matter in which the Horse is concerned. Every question is treated of with clearness and accuracy, and the law as it exists is explained and demonstrated by recent decisions in the Courts of Law. The question respecting Derby Clubs and their legality forms a prominent portion of the work, and we unfeignedly recommend its possession to all interested in the numerous subjects on which it treats."—Bell's Life.

LONDON, AUGUST 25, 1849.

The case of Whiston v. The Dean and Chapter of Rochester (13 Jur., part 1, p. 694) is one of great importance, involving the consideration of that peculiar species of charity, in which there is, for some purposes, a trust, subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, and for other purposes a duty merely, not being a trust, excluding the jurisdiction of equity, and subject specially to the jurisdiction of a visitor.

We apprehend there cannot be much question, that, in the case before the Court, the plaintiff mistook his remedy for the particular grievance, and that the corporation were not trustees for the plaintiff in his personal and individual character; that is, that he had not a beneficial estate in his office of schoolmaster. But we conceive that the Court did not mean to go further than this, when it said that there was no trust. It did not mean to say that the corporation was not a trustee for the purpose of maintaining a school, and scholars, and a schoolmaster; or that, in the execution of such trust, it would not be bound by its statutes; or that the Court of Chancery would not have jurisdiction to construe and to enforce those statutes, as regards the general execution of the trust.

It is not quite apparent, from the language of the judgment, what was the opinion of the Court on this general question; and probably it was not intended by the Court that any precise expression of opinion should be collected upon it, as that was not the question before the Court. The only question actually before the Court was, whether it ought to exercise jurisdiction to restrain the corporation from dismissing the existing schoolmaster for alleged misconduct. Now, it was clear, that whether the schoolmaster had misconducted himself, or not, was a question quite independent of the question whether the funds of the corporation were trust-funds or not; and, if they were, whether they were properly distributed or not. It was a question of pure internal discipline, and for the regulation of such questions the statutes distinctly pointed out the bishop as the person to act as visitor. Unless, therefore, the plaintiff could claim individually an estate in his office, there was clearly no trust for him personally, and the jurisdiction of the visitor over him, in respect of his duty to conduct the school, and himself, with propriety, was not ousted.

The general question, whether the corporation in this case held the property given to it by the founder in trust for the objects named in the statutes—that is, whether, as distinguished from the case of The Attorney-General v. Magdalen College, (10 Beav. 402), there was a trust to maintain a school and schoolmaster, &c., on which the jurisdiction of equity attached; or whether, consistently with that case, there was merely a duty in the corporation, in respect to which the visitor alone had authority to interfere—it was not, as we again submit, necessary to decide in Whiston v. The Dean and Chapter of Rochester; and whatever fell from the Court on that subject must, therefore, (if we are correct), be taken to be extra-judicial.

Now, in The Attorney-General v. Magdalen College, the ground on which the Court proceeded expressly was, that the school was no specific part of the foundation. The instrument of foundation did not name a school at all; it declared that the founder founded a college of learning, of the sciences of divinity and philosophy, &c., according to statutes to be framed. Certain statutes were made, with power reserved to make further statutes. It did not appear when the school attached to the college was first thought of: it did appear, that, twenty-two years after the foundation, grammar scholars were taught gratis, at the charges of the founder, and in the same year a school-house was built, and subsequent entries shewed payments to a schoolmaster and usher. Finally, the statutes were settled twenty-five years after the foundation, and directed that there should be a master and usher, who should teach scholars who might come to the school-house, and salaries were directed to be paid to the master and usher. Now, in this state of things, the Master of the Rolls said, "The school is not a separate foundation. The license, which the founder obtained to found his college, contained no specific reference to a school, but gave authority to make such statutes and ordinances as were proper for the regulation of the college; and the statutes made to regulate the college, in pursuance of the license, directed that there should be a schoolmaster and usher, to be hired and removed by the president; in other words, the president had imposed on him the duty of engaging and removing a schoolmaster and usher. Certain stipends are directed to be paid to the master and usher, out of the common goods of the college, and they are to have chambers and weekly commons equal to those of the fellows of the college; but there is no other endowment of the school. A building was erected for the school, but no property is otherwise specially set apart or appropriated to the use of the school, or for its maintenance and support; and, subject to the specific payments for specific purposes, including fixed stipends to the master and usher, the revenues of the college belong to the college for its own use, subject, indeed, to the performance of all duties incumbent on the college to perform, but not subject to any trust to be executed in this court.

"The college has, no doubt, a very important duty to perform with reference to the school, and the performance of that duty may be enforced by proper authority; but, unless it be a duty founded on a trust which this Court can execute, the performance of the duty is not to be enforced here. And on the best consideration which I have been able to give to the subject, I am of opinion that this Court has no jurisdiction to give the relief which is here asked. Though there is sufficient proof of the duty or obligation, there is not, in my opinion, evidence of a trust, as the word 'trust' is understood in this court."

Now, contrast this with the case of Whiston v. The Dean and Chapter of Rochester. There, in the instrument of foundation, it is expressly declared, as one of the purposes of the foundation, that "juventus in literis liberaliter instituatur." There is a statute expressly relating to the grammar-school boys, "De Pueris Grammaticis," and it is directed that there shall be twenty boys "de bonis ecclesiæ nostræ alendi," who were to be taught, &c., and supported at the charges of the church. But, as if this were not strong enough to shew a trust for education, there is also a declaration, that, out of the funds of the church, four poor scholars should always be maintained in the Universities. In fact, the same statutes that directed the existence and sustentation of the dean and canons, directed the existence and sustentation of a given number of scholars, falling under a given description; and the existence and sustentation of a master, and of other officers, instruments for the general carrying out of the trust: so that the case is, we submit, precisely that to which, in The Attorney-General v. Magdalen College, the Court, by implication, refers as one in which there would be a trust. For the school, in Whiston's case, was, or at least the scholars were, a specific object of the original foundation, and there is, in regard to them, not merely a direction for education, but a specific appropriation of property for their sustentation. The scholars are, therefore, clearly beneficial objects of the endowment.

This we take to be the true distinction between the Magdalen College case and Whiston's case. In the former there was no property in which the scholars had a beneficial claim by the statutes. A duty was imposed on the corporation to appoint officers to teach, and poor boys might come and be taught; but the grammar scholars, as such, had no part in the corporation funds. Whereas in Whiston's case a specific object of the foundation was the grammar-school; and the twenty scholars, and, as incident to the existence of the school, the master, had a specific beneficial interest in the corporation funds: not, as we have already observed, in the sense of the Rev. Mr. Whiston, or any particular scholar, having an estate in his office or in his scholarship, but in the sense that the legal owners of the corporation property are bound by a trust to apply certain portions of that property to the maintenance of scholars and a master.

If this be once made out, then, according to all the cases, the Court of Chancery has jurisdiction to decide on the construction of the statutes, in reference to the question, which is the real and important one, whether the effect of the statutes is to direct a division of the corporation funds in the relative proportions pointed out by the specific sums directed to be paid to the different objects named in the statutes; or whether the intention of the statutes is to confine certain of those objects to the specific allowances named, leaving the increase for the others; or whether, lastly—and this is a quite possible construction—the intention is to confine all the objects named, to the specific allowances named, and to allow the surplus to revert to the founder, which would in effect be, in the case under consideration, to the Crown.

NEW LAW FOR THE AMENDMENT OF THE PROCEDURE AT SESSIONS.

Some important alterations in the procedure in Courts of General and Quarter Sessions are made by an act passed on the 28th ult.—the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45.

It is greatly to be regretted that the Legislature, instead of dealing in a comprehensive manner with some distinct branch of the law, and placing it on a settled and intelligible basis, should frame statutes as it were by piecemeal, and keep the law in a restless state, agitated to and fro by constant alterations and amendments. The present statute is intended to supply an omission in an "Act for the Removal of Defects in the Administration of Justice," (11 & 12 Vict. c. 46), and at the same time to amend the "Act to amend the Procedure in respect of Orders for the Removal of the Poor in England and Wales, and Appeals therefrom," (11 & 12 Vict. c. 31), and also to introduce some wholly new provisions respecting appeals. It would obviously have been more satisfactory if the whole law relating to appeals had been methodised, consolidated, and (as far as might be practicable) settled in one enactment. The 10th section of the new statute extends the provisions of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 4, relative to the amendment of indictments on the trial, to general and quarter sessions, they being hitherto applicable only to "any court of oyer and terminer, and general gaol delivery." Though courts of quarter sessions are authorised "to hear and determine," they are not technically courts of oyer and terminer, (Hale's Sum. P. C. 165; Com. Dig., tit. "Justices," B. 3); and the extension of the power of amendment in the cases of variances between any matters in writing or print produced in evidence, and the recital or setting forth thereof in indictments, will undoubtedly tend to remove one of the defects in the administration of criminal justice.

The preamble of the act recites, that "whereas, in cases of appeal to courts of general or quarter sessions of the peace, it is expedient that the law should be more uniform;" yet the second section excludes from the operation of this statute notices of appeal against summary convictions, orders of removal, orders under any statute relating to pauper lunatics, orders in bastardy, or against any proceeding under or by virtue of any of the statutes relating to her Majesty's revenue of excise, or customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office—in fact, the bulk of the appeals that come before sessions. In all these cases, the law with regard to notices of appeals "shall be deemed and taken to be the same as if the provisions hereinbefore contained had not been enacted." With, however, the important exceptions noticed, after the 1st November next, when this act will come into operation, in every case of appeal to any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, fourteen clear days' notice of appeal, at least, shall be given, and shall be taken to be a sufficient notice. The notice must in all cases be in writing, signed by the party, or his attorney; and the grounds of appeal must be stated in every such notice; it being provided that it shall not be lawful for the appellant on the trial of the appeal to go into or give evidence of any other ground of appeal beside those set forth in such notice. Power of amendment of grounds of appeal, in cases within this act, is given to the sessions, in nearly the same terms as those in the fourth section of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 31.

The sessions have hitherto had no power to award costs, unless where given by the particular statute under which the justices were acting at the time. By the 5th section of the present act it is provided, that in future the sessions shall have a general power to give costs in all cases of appeal—"And be it enacted, that, upon any appeal to any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, the court before whom the same shall be brought may, if it think fit, order and direct the party or parties, against whom the same shall be decided, to pay to the other party or parties such costs and charges as may to such court appear just and reasonable;" these costs to be recoverable in the manner provided for the recovery of costs upon an appeal against an order or conviction, by the 27th section of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43.

A salutary provision is made by the 7th section respecting the amendment of orders or judgments of justices on appeal, or the return to any writ of certiorari. These orders and judgments have been frequently quashed or set aside on some mere technical objection to the form of the order or judgment, irrespective of the truth and merits of the matters in question: it is therefore enacted, that if, upon the trial of any appeal against any order or judgment of justices, or upon the return of any writ of certiorari, any objection shall be made on account of any omission or mistake in the drawing up of such order or judgment, and it shall be shewn to the satisfaction of the court that sufficient grounds were in proof before the justices making such order or giving such judgment, to have authorised the drawing up thereof, free from the said omission or mistake, it shall be lawful for the court, upon such terms as to payment of costs as it shall think fit, to amend such order or judgment, and to adjudicate thereon, as if no such omission or mistake had existed. Amendment of recognisances, required as a condition of an appeal, is also, in the same way, provided for.

By the 11th section power is given, in all cases of appeal, (except in the case of an order in bastardy, or proceeding under any statutes relating to excise, customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office), to parties, at any time after notice of appeal, by consent, and by order of any judge of one of the superior courts of common law at Westminster, to state a special case without going to the sessions previously, and to agree that a judgment in conformity with the decision of such Court, and for such costs as such Court shall adjudge, may be entered, on motion by either party, at the sessions next or next but one after such decision shall have been given; such judgment to be of the same effect, in all respects, as if the same had been given by the court of general or quarter sessions upon appeal duly entered and continued.

A new principle is introduced into the procedure of sessions by the 12th section, viz. reference to arbitration of controversies and disputes, for which the remedy is by appeal to sessions; in analogy to the 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, intituled "An Act for determining Differences by Arbitration." It is enacted, "that, at any time after notice given of appeal to any court of sessions against any order, rate, or other matter, (except against a summary conviction or an order in bastardy, or against proceeding relating to excise, or customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office), for which the remedy is by such appeal, it shall be lawful for the parties, by order of a judge of the Court of Queen's Bench, to submit the matter of such appeal to the award or umpirage of any person or persons, and to agree that such submission should be made a rule of the said Court of Queen's Bench; and that every award or umpirage duly made under this act shall be as binding and effectual, to all intents, as if the same had been a regular judgment of the said court of general or quarter sessions; and shall and may, on the application of either party, be inrolled among the records of the said court of sessions." This important provision will apply to appeals against orders of removal, orders under statutes relating to lunatics, poor-rates, &c. &c. The 13th section enables courts of sessions, with the consent of the parties, to refer the matter of the appeal to arbitrators or umpires, and provides that the order of the Court may be made a rule of the Court of Queen's Bench. In the case of Rex v. The Justices of Northampton (Cald. 9; Bott, 716) it had been decided, that, in the case of a poor-rate, the justices, by the consent of both parties, might refer the matter to arbitration, and adopt the award of the arbitrators as their judgment; but, as a general rule, they had no power legally to delegate their authority.

The act, which consists of twenty-one sections, contains other provisions of minor importance, which do not call for special notice.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 1, 1849.

The law relating to artificial and subterraneous watercourses was fully discussed in the recent case of Wood and Others v. Waud and Others, (13 Jur., part 1, p. 472). The material facts on which the judgment of the Court proceeded may be thus briefly stated:—The action was on the case for fouling and diverting a natural watercourse used by the plaintiffs, and for diverting two artificial subterraneous watercourses, which had flowed more than twenty years into the natural stream above the premises of the plaintiffs. The natural stream was immemorial; the artificial streams were not so, but had existed for more than sixty years. They had not, however, been used by the plaintiffs, except as part of the natural stream, previous to the year 1838. The defendants' works, which caused the injuries, had been erected within twenty years, and they had not obtained any right by long enjoyment or grant. The pollution of the natural stream by the defendants caused no actual damage to the plaintiffs, because it was already so polluted by others, and the water was equally applicable to useful purposes as before. The water in the artificial streams was diminished only by five per cent.

Upon this state of facts the Court of Exchequer delivered judgment, from which the following principles may be deduced:—

First, it appears that the right to the use of a natural stream is founded on the law of nature, and not on any supposed grant; that it is an incident to the land through which the water flows, and is independent of the acquiescence of neighbouring owners.

Secondly, the right to artificial watercourses, as against the parties creating them, depends upon the character of the watercourse, whether it be of a permanent or temporary nature, and upon the circumstances under which it is created. "The flow of water from a drain, for the purpose of agricultural improvement, for twenty years, could not give a right to the neighbour, so as to preclude the proprietor from altering the level of his drain for the greater improvement of the land." If the water was polluted, so as to be injurious to the tenant below, the case would be different.

Thirdly, but, as between proprietors of the land through which the artificial watercourse passes, a distinction prevails where it flows into a natural stream and where it does not. In the former case, the riparian proprietors, having a right to the use of the natural stream, as incident to their property on the banks and bed of it, would be entitled to all the water "which actually formed part of that stream, as soon as it had become part, whether such water came by natural means, as from springs, or from the surface of the hills above, or from rains or melted snow, or was added by artificial means, as from the drainage of lands or of colliery works." The artificial united to the natural stream, therefore, becomes accessory to it, and subject to a like dominion. With respect, however, to an artificial not united to a natural stream, it is not given to one more than another of the proprietors of the land through which it flows; "each may take and use what passes through his land, and the proprietor of land below has no right to any part of that water until it has reached his own land; he has no right to compel the owners above to permit the water to flow through their land for his benefit, and consequently he has no right of action if they refuse to do so. If they polluted the water, so as to be injurious to the tenant below, the case would be different."

Fourthly, though no actual damage be caused by the pollution of a natural stream, yet it is an injury to the right of the parties entitled to have it flow through their land in its natural state; and as, by twenty years' user, a right thus to pollute it might be established, there is damage in point of law.

Fifthly, if a stream, to the use of which another person is entitled, be only used by the riparian proprietor above, and his family, by drinking it, or for domestic purposes, no action would lie against him; but if a mode of enjoyment quite different from the ordinary one is adopted, by which the water is diverted into a reservoir, and there delayed for the purposes of a manufacture, an action is maintainable; and so, if, by that mode of dealing with the water, it is sensibly diminished in quantity. "In America, a very liberal use of the water, for the purposes of irrigation, and for carrying on manufactures, has been allowed. In France, also, the right of the riparian proprietor to the use of the water is not strictly construed. He may use it 'en bon père de famille, à son plus grand avantage.' He may make trenches to conduct the water to irrigate his land, if he return it with no other loss than that which irrigation caused. In England, it is not very clear that such a user would be permitted, as arising out of the right to the use of the water jure naturæ."*

THE ACT (12 & 13 VICT. c. 108) TO AMEND THE JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES WINDING-UP ACT, 1848†.

We have understood that doubts are entertained whether certain orders, obtained on petitions presented under the Winding-up Act, 1848, can be acted upon since the passing of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 108, on the ground that they relate to companies to which it is declared, by the act of 1849, that the act of 1848 shall not apply. We cannot conceive what ground there can be for any doubt in the matter. The old Winding-up Act was, as to certain companies, viz. railroad companies, thought at first not applicable. It was afterwards decided, by the highest court but one, that it is applicable; and that decision is now under appeal in the highest court. That the language of the act is free from ambiguity it would be too much to assert, when a learned and peculiarly acute judge has put on it a construction different from that which is at present its received construction, and when eminent counsel have thought it advisable to carry the question beyond the court of the Lord Chancellor. Still, the act of 1848 must speak for itself: it was the law till the 1st August, 1849, and whatever companies it embraced, according to its true construction, were, if brought in due form, within its operation before the 1st August, 1849, lawfully subjected to the effect of its clauses.

What, then, has the act of 1849 done? It enacts, that, "notwithstanding anything in the act of 1848 contained importing a more limited application thereof, the same shall apply to all partnerships, associations, and companies, whereof the partners or associates are not less than seven in number, whether incorporated or unincorporated, and whether formed or subsisting before or after the passing of the said act or this act, other than and except railway companies incorporated by act of Parliament, to which companies such act shall not apply." And it further enacts, "that this act shall be taken and construed, so far as practicable, as a part of the said Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Act, 1848."

The effect of this is, not to put a construction on the act of 1848, but to enlarge or repeal it pro tanto for the future. The act of 1849 does not purport to enact that the act of 1848 shall be construed to exclude railway companies, but that it shall not apply to such companies; so that if it did or does, according to its true construction, apply to railway companies, so far its powers are repealed, and, from the 1st August, 1849, cease. But if its provisions do, according to their true construction, extend to and include railway companies, then, although they are from the 1st August, 1849, repealed, there is nothing in the act of 1849 to deprive them of their force antecedently to the 1st August, 1849; and consequently it is, as it seems to us, perfectly clear, that anything duly done under them before that date is not, by the act of 1849, nullified.

Now, if that be so, can it be rationally argued that an order, lawfully made under the act of 1848, is not to be worked out after the act of 1849, because that act repeals the act of 1848 as to the particular subject-matter? If the act of 1848 had authorised the payment of money in particular cases, and directed the giving of vouchers within a particular time, and in the interval the act of 1849 had been passed, repealing all that related to the payment of money in the particular case, could it be said that a payment of money made under the first act would be lawful, but that the party paying should be deprived of his right to have vouchers? So in the case under consideration, the order on petition for winding-up, in the matter of a railway company being lawful (assuming it to be so) under the act of 1848, are not all the subsequent stages merely completion of that entire process, which, being lawfully commenced, the subsequent act cannot be held to make it unlawful to complete, in the absence of express words?

No such express words are to be found in the act of 1849: it simply says that the act of 1848 shall not apply to certain railway companies; not that it did not apply to them; not that the machinery of the act of 1848 which it leaves undisturbed, shall not be employed to complete any matter which it was competent to the Court of Chancery to begin under the act of 1848.

The whole effect of the late act is, we conceive clearly prospective: it, in effect, repeals the former act as to certain companies, if those companies were included within it. It leaves everything up to that period as it was before; and the question will, therefore, simply remain, as to all orders made under the act of 1848, are they within the true construction of that act, looking at it as if the act of 1849 had never existed?

* We have been requested by the reporter to mention two slight errors which have occurred in the report of Wood v. Waud. At p. 475, it should have been stated that H. Hill was for the defendants, and Cowling for the plaintiffs; and at p. 478, for "Code Civil, p. 640," read "Code Civil, § 640."

† Post, p. 319. As this act is of great importance, and will be applicable to proceedings going on during the vacation, it has been thought desirable to print it at once.

Now, is there anything inconsistent with this view, in the clause enacting that the act of 1849 shall be taken and construed, as far as practicable, as a part of the act of 1848? We apprehend not. The only effect of that clause is to incorporate the enactments of the two acts, so far as they are not inconsistent. To suppose that it means this—that a provision of the later act, repealing a provision of the preceding one, shall be taken as part of it—would be to attribute to the Legislature the absurdity of saying, an act shall be read as if it said, on the face of it, "a certain thing shall be, and the same thing shall not be." The act of 1849 cannot mean, therefore, that it refers back the exclusion of railway companies to the passing of the act of 1848, or that the act of 1848 shall be held to exclude railways, unless that act does, of itself, exclude them.

The recent act contains a great many clauses of considerable importance, to the consideration of which, in connexion with the original Winding-up Act, we shall probably return in these pages during the course of the vacation.

Among them is, however, one which we cannot allow to escape immediate notice, on account of its importance, not merely as regards the business of winding up of companies, but with reference to the general simplification of Chancery proceedings. It is by the third clause enacted, "that every petition for dissolution and winding-up, or winding-up, may be verified by affidavit annexed thereto, or subscribed at the foot thereof, at the time of presenting and filing the same, in the form or to the effect set out in the Schedule (B.) annexed to this act; and that no costs of any further or additional affidavit in verification shall be allowed, unless specially allowed by the court."

The Schedule referred to is as follows:—

"Affidavit verifying Petition for Dissolution and winding-up, or winding-up.

"In the Matter of the Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Acts, 1848 and 1849, and of the —— Company.

"I, A.B., the petitioner in the above-written [or annexed, as the case may be,] petition, make oath and say, that so much of the above-written [or annexed, as the case may be,] petition as relates to my own acts and deeds is true, and so much thereof as relates to the acts and deeds of any other person I believe to be true.

"Sworn &c."

Is there any good reason why all affidavits verifying petitions and injunction bills should not be framed on this brief model?

41. Act may be amended, &c.

Whereas it is expedient to amend as after mentioned the Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Act, 1848, [11 & 12 Vict. c. 45]: Be it enacted, &c., that, notwithstanding anything in the said act contained importing a more limited application thereof, the same shall apply to all partnerships, associations, and companies whereof the partners or associates are not less than seven in number, whether incorporated or unincorporated, and whether formed or subsisting before or after the passing of the said act or this act, other than and except railway companies incorporated by act of Parliament, to which companies such act shall not apply: provided always, that upon the hearing of any petition for the dissolution of any such partnership, association, or company, the Court shall, in considering the necessity or expediency of any such dissolution, or the terms or special directions subject to which it may think fit to allow such dissolution, have regard to any articles of partnership or other contract which shall be subsisting between the members of such partnership, association, or company: provided, nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall affect the jurisdiction of the Court of Stannaries in Cornwall; and that nothing in this act nor in any act herein referred to contained shall extend or be construed to extend to any partnership, association, or company formed for the working of mines on the principle commonly called the "Cost-book Principle," within the said Stannaries and jurisdiction of the said Court, unless the owner or owners of one-tenth in value of the shares in any such mine, as shall appear on the cost-book, shall present a petition to the Lord Chancellor or to the Master of the Rolls for the dissolution and winding-up, or for the winding-up, of the affairs of such company, which petition, and the parties thereto, and all proceedings thereupon, shall be subject to the provisions of this act and the acts herein referred to; and that on such petition being so presented, and notice thereof being given to the vice-warden by the party petitioning, the court of the said vice-warden, and the registrar and officers thereof, shall cease from entertaining and dealing with any cause touching such mine, except so far as may be allowed and directed by order of the Court of Chancery, in regard to any cause then or to be thereafter brought in the court of the said vice-warden, or in regard to any proceeding to be taken in furtherance of the said petition and the purposes of this act and the acts herein referred to; and that the said vice-warden and registrar, in taking such proceedings, shall have all the powers which any district commissioner of the Court of Bankruptcy now has in any matter which by virtue of this act and the acts herein referred to may be brought before him.

2. That when any petition for dissolution and winding-up, or for winding-up, the affairs of any company, under the said recited act, shall have been presented, every subsequent petition relating to the affairs of such company shall be addressed to and marked for the same judge, and such petitions shall, in addition to the advertisement thereof in the London Gazette or in the Dublin Gazette directed by the said act, be advertised at least seven clear days before the hearing thereof, and once at least in two London daily morning newspapers, or in two Dublin daily newspapers, (as the case may be), and also (in case the head or only office of the company be not in London, Westminster, or Southwark, or in Dublin) once at least in some newspaper in general circulation in the county, city, or borough where the head or only office, or the last known head or only office, of the company, is or was situate, and such advertisement may be in the form or to the effect set out in the Schedule (A.) annexed to this act; and every contributory shall be entitled to be furnished by the solicitor presenting any petition with a copy thereof within twenty-four hours after requiring the same, on paying at the rate of 4*d.* per folio of ninety words for such copy.

3. That every petition for dissolution and winding-up, or winding-up, may be verified by affidavit annexed thereto, or subscribed at the foot thereof, at the time of presenting and filing the same, in the form or to the effect set out in the Schedule (B.) annexed to this act; and that no costs of any further or additional affidavit in verification shall be allowed, unless specially allowed by the Court.

4. That the provision in the said act contained for empowering her Majesty's High Court of Chancery in England and Ireland respectively, in any decree or order for the dissolution of a company or of any other association or partnership, as therein mentioned, to be made in any suit then pending or thereafter to be instituted, and also by any order to be made after a decree for the dissolution of a company, association, or partnership in any such suit, to order that the affairs of such company, association, or partnership should be wound up under the provisions of the said act, and that the costs of winding-up the same should be paid and recovered according to the provisions of the said act, and for that purpose to give directions as therein mentioned, any decree or order so to be made to be deemed, if the said Court should so direct, an order absolute under the said act, shall extend in all respects to any decree or order of the Court for or relating to the winding-up of the affairs of any such company, association, or partnership as therein mentioned made in any suit now pending or hereafter to be instituted, and also to any order made after a decree for or relating to the winding-up of the affairs of a company, association, or partnership in any such suit.

5. That it shall be lawful for the Master for the time being acting in the winding-up of any company under the said act in respect of which an official manager has been or shall be appointed, if he think fit so to do, from time to time to allow any surety of such official manager to withdraw from his suretyship, or to become bound in a smaller sum, from time to time, upon his procuring another surety or sureties to become bound in a competent amount, and also to allow any surety from time to time to become bound in a larger sum, and to direct any new recognisances to be entered into accordingly; and also that it shall be lawful for the Master, in any case arising under the present provision, and also upon the death, bankruptcy, or insolvency of any surety, and the appointment of any new surety in his place, to order any surety's recognisance to be vacated: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall authorise the Master at any time to allow the total amount of the recognisances of all the sureties of any official manager for the time being to fall short of the sum in which such official manager is bound.

6. That, notwithstanding the provision in the said act contained for empowering the Court to allow, increase, or diminish from time to time the salary or remuneration of the official manager, it shall be lawful for the Master to exercise the said powers and discretions so given to the Court, and that whether as respects any official manager already appointed or hereafter to be appointed: provided always, that such salary or remuneration shall not, if it be by per-centage, unless the Court otherwise direct, exceed (in addition to any allowances or salaries to clerks or officers employed by such official manager in or about the winding-up of the company, such allowance or salary to be also fixed or approved by the Master) the rates or sums hereinafter mentioned; that is to say,

In respect of all monies arising from the estate of such company received by the official managers, and paid or divided among the creditors or contributories of the same under the provisions of the said act, which shall not exceed 100,000*l.*, 5*l.* per cent;

In respect of all such further monies which shall exceed 100,000*l.*, but shall not exceed 200,000*l.*, 4*l.* per cent.;

And in respect of all further monies so divided which shall exceed 200,000*l.*, 3*l.* per cent.

7. That the provision herein contained with respect to the remuneration of an official manager, and the provisions in the said act contained with respect to passing the accounts of the official manager, and the inspection of his books by the contributories, and the evidence of his books, accounts, and documents, and all other the powers and duties of the official manager, shall apply in all respects to the remuneration of any interim or provisional manager to be appointed as in the said act mentioned, and to the passing of his accounts, and the inspection of his books, and the evidence of his books, accounts, and documents, and the powers and duties of the interim or provisional manager.

8. That for better getting in the estate of any company in respect of which an order absolute has been or shall be made under the said act, and discharging the debts thereof, and winding-up the affairs thereof, it shall be lawful for the official manager of such company, under the direction of the Master for the time being acting in the winding-up thereof, and on behalf of the company, to draw, accept, make, and indorse any bill of exchange or promissory note, and also to raise upon the security of the assets of the company from time to time such sum or sums of money and in such manner as the Master shall from time to time direct; and the drawing, accepting, making, or indorsing of every such bill of exchange or promissory note as aforesaid on behalf of the company shall have the same effect with respect to the liability of such company as if such bill or note had been drawn, accepted, made, or indorsed by such company in the course of carrying on the business thereof.

9. That the word "contributory" as used in the said act or in this act with respect to the persons who are to attend the proceedings before the Master, and to the representation of classes of contributories, and to the representation of contributories being minors or lunatics, and to the appointment by the Master of next friends, guardians, or representatives, and with respect to determining and resolving questions of law or of fact, or matters in contest arising in or about the winding-up of the affairs of any company, shall be taken to include alleged contributories.

10. That if more than one official manager of any company shall have been or shall be appointed under the said act, any one of the official managers so to be appointed shall have power to bind and conclude his co-managers to the same extent and in the same manner in all respects as any one assignee of the estate and effects of a bankrupt has power to bind and conclude his co-assignees.

11. That it shall be lawful for the Master to make or allow any arrangement which he may think fit from time to time with respect to the remuneration of any attorney or solicitor to be appointed by the official manager, and that such remuneration may be either by way of per-centage or otherwise; provided that such remuneration, if it be by per-centage, shall not, unless the Master shall otherwise specially direct, exceed (in addition to actual payments) the rates or sums hereby authorised to be allowed to the official manager for his salary or remuneration.

12. That the costs of all proceedings which shall take place in and about the winding-up, as to which the Court shall have made no order, shall be in the discretion of the Master; and that it shall be lawful for the Master to award a single sum or fee for any costs awarded by him, or otherwise to settle the principle and the scale of fees upon or according to which such costs shall be ascertained and settled.

13. That all acts and things by the said act or by this act required or authorised to be done by the official manager, with the leave or approbation or under the direction of the Master, shall, so far as respects the safety and protection of debtors and other persons not being contributories of the company, and not affected with notice of any fraud, be valid and conclusive, notwithstanding such leave or approbation have not been obtained or such direction have not been given.

14. That if any contributory or alleged contributory be a bankrupt or insolvent, he shall be entitled to attend by his assignees, and in all proceedings against his estate under the said act shall be sufficiently represented by such assignees.

15. That, notwithstanding anything in the said act contained, it shall be lawful for the Master to adjourn any proceedings before him under the said act without fixing any time or place, and to take up again and continue any proceedings under the said act from time to time, although the same have not been formally adjourned.

16. That it shall be lawful for the Master, in such cases as he thinks fit, to dispense with any advertisements required by the said act to be made of any call or of any other proceedings by or before the Master; provided that the said Master shall not dispense with the advertisement of an intended call or other proceeding until he is satisfied that notice has been given to each of the several contributories intended to be included in such call or affected by such proceeding, that it is intended to include him therein or affect him thereby; and that, notwithstanding anything in the said act contained, no proceedings in any action by a creditor shall be stayed by reason that an advertisement has not been published under the said act requiring creditors to come in and prove their debts and demands before the Master.

17. That it shall be lawful for the Master from time to time to reconsider and review any order or proceeding which may have been made by or may have taken place before him under the said act, upon such terms and in such manner as he thinks fit.

18. That, as between the contributories or alleged contributories, the lists of contributories, and all other lists required by the said act, as the same shall have been prepared by the official manager, and before the same shall have been settled by the Master, shall, except so far as the Master shall otherwise direct, be primâ facie evidence of the truth of all matters therein contained and purporting to be therein recorded.

19. That it shall be lawful for the Master, under the powers of the said act, to require any evidence to be given or discovery to be made before him respecting the estate, dealings, or affairs of any contributory or deceased contributory of the company, or respecting any other matter in which the company may be interested, and which might have been compelled or obtained in any suit in equity at the instance or on the behalf of the company; and that any person who shall be summoned before the Master for the purpose of giving any such evidence shall be deemed to be within the provisions and penalties of the said act with respect to witnesses.

20. That the district commissioners of the Court of Bankruptcy, and the judges of the county courts in England who sit at places more than twenty miles from the General Post-office, and the commissioners of bankrupt and the assistant barristers and recorders in Ireland, and in all cases relating to mines within the jurisdiction of the Stannaries Court in Cornwall the vice-warden or the registrar of the said court, shall be and they are hereby appointed commissioners for the purpose of taking and receiving evidence under the said act and this act; and it shall be lawful for the Master, by any order under his hand, to refer the whole or any part of the examination of any witnesses under the said acts to any such commissioner, although such commissioner be out of the jurisdiction of the Court by which the order absolute was made; and every such commissioner shall, in addition to any power of summoning and examining witnesses, and requiring the production or delivery of documents, and certifying or punishing defaults by witnesses, which he might lawfully exercise as a district commissioner of the Court of Bankruptcy, judge of a county court, commissioner of bankrupt, assistant barrister, or recorder, or as the vice-warden or the registrar of the Stannaries Court, have and exercise, in the matter so referred to him, all the same powers of summoning and examining witnesses, and requiring the production or delivery of documents, and certifying or punishing defaults by witnesses, and allowing costs and charges to witnesses, as are given by the said act or this act to any Master charged with the winding-up of any company under the same; and the examination so to be taken shall be returned to the Master as he shall direct.

21. That it shall be lawful for the Master, by any order under his hand, to direct the examination in Scotland of any person within Scotland, whether a contributory of the company or not, in regard to the estate, dealings, or affairs of such company, or in regard to the estate, dealings, or affairs of any person being a contributory of the company, so far as the company may be interested therein in respect of his being such contributory; and such order shall be directed to the sheriff of the county in which the person to be examined shall reside or be for the time; and the sheriff shall summon such person to appear before him at such time and place as shall be specified in the summons, for examination upon oath as a witness or as a haver, and to produce the books, papers, deeds, or documents called for which may be in his possession or power, and the sheriff may take such examination either orally or upon written interrogatories, and shall report the same in writing in the usual form to the Master, and shall transmit with such report the books, papers, deeds, or documents produced, if the originals thereof shall be required and specified by the order, or otherwise such copies thereof or extracts therefrom authenticated by the sheriff as shall be necessary; and in case any person so summoned shall fail to appear at the time and place specified, or appearing shall refuse to be examined or to make the production required, the sheriff shall proceed against such person as a witness or haver duly cited and failing to appear, or refusing to give evidence or make production, may be proceeded against by the law of Scotland; and the sheriff shall be entitled to such and the like fees, and the witness shall be entitled to such and the like allowances, as sheriffs when acting as commissioners under appointment from the Court of Session, and as witnesses and havers, are entitled to, in the like cases, according to the law and practice of Scotland: provided always, that if any objection shall be stated to the sheriff by the witness, either on the ground of his incompetency as a witness, or as to the production required to be made, or on any other ground whatever, it shall be competent for the sheriff, if he shall think fit, to report such objections to the Master, and to suspend the examination of such witness until such objection shall be disposed of by the Master.

22. That any person summoned as a witness before any commissioner under this act shall be deemed to be in all respects within the provisions and penalties of the said recited act with respect to witnesses; and that all costs and expenses of and incident to any commission, or any examination before any commissioner, under this act, shall be in the discretion of the Master, and shall be in all respects within the provisions of the said act as to the costs of winding-up the affairs of any company.

23. That any summons of a witness to be made by the Master or any commissioner under this or the said recited act in England shall be valid and effectual, and shall be enforceable in Ireland, and that any such summons so made in Ireland shall be valid and effectual in England.

24. That any affidavit, affirmation, or declaration which shall require to be sworn or made under the provisions or for the purposes of this or the said recited act shall and may be lawfully sworn in Great Britain or Ireland, or in any colony, island, plantation, or place under the dominion of her Majesty in foreign parts, before any court, judge, or person lawfully authorised to take and receive affidavits, affirmations, or declarations in such country, colony, island, plantation, or place respectively, or before any of her Majesty's consuls or vice-consuls in any foreign parts out of her dominions, and that all courts, judges, justices, masters, commissioners judicially acting, and other officers in any parts of her Majesty's dominions, shall take judicial notice of the seal or signature (as the case may be) of any such court, judge, person, consul or vice-consul, attached, appended, or subscribed to any such affidavit or declaration, or to any other document to be used for the purposes of this act.

25. That, notwithstanding anything in the said act contained, no deed of grant by the official manager shall require to be approved or certified by the Master, unless the parties differ about the same.

26. That, notwithstanding anything in the said act contained, it shall be sufficient, in any notice to be given to any person included in or proposed to be excluded from the list of contributories, or in any variation therein or addition thereto, to state for what interest such person is included or excluded, specifying the amount of the interest for which any such person is included therein, without specifying the number of shares or the amount of such shares.

27. That the power by the said act given to contributories to summon any other person to shew cause why his name should not be included in or specially excluded from the list, and the power of the Master to declare such person included in or excluded from the list, shall and may be exercised from time to time so long as the list has not been wholly settled, although the person so to be summoned have been already included or specially excluded (as the case may be) as respects any other share or interest in the company than the share or interest in respect of which he is proposed to be included in or specially excluded from the list.

28. That so much of the said recited act as is contained in the section thereof numbered "84" in the copy of the said act printed by the Queen's printer shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and in lieu thereof, that, when the Master shall think proper to raise any money by means of a call, he shall make such call from time to time upon the contributories of the company, or any of them, appearing for the time being on the list of contributories, although it may then be under consideration, or uncertain, whether other persons ought or ought not to be included in the list; and in making any such call it shall be lawful for the Master to fix such an amount per share for the same as shall in his judgment be likely to supply and bring in the whole sum for the time being intended to be raised, after taking into consideration the probability that some of the contributories upon whom the said call shall be made should partly or wholly fail to pay their respective proportions of the same.

29. That the power by the said act given to the official manager to give time, or compound, or take security for, or to abandon any balance or claim as against any of the contributories of the company, shall be deemed to extend to any claim of doubtful or unascertained amount, including the liability of any contributory to any future calls or contributions.

30. That where any contributory of the company is a bankrupt or insolvent, it shall be lawful for the official manager to prove in the matter of such bankruptcy or insolvency for any balance ordered by the Master to be proved against the estate of such contributory, and to take and receive dividends in respect of such balance in the matter of the bankruptcy or insolvency as a separate debt due from such bankrupt or insolvent, and rateably with the other separate creditors: provided always, that if any creditors of the company, not being such petitioning creditor under the fiat as after mentioned, shall have proved or shall prove against the estate of such bankrupt or insolvent contributory in respect of any debt due from the company, then the dividends received by the official manager from the estate of such bankrupt or insolvent contributory shall be paid and distributed by the official manager, under the direction of the Master, in the first instance, rateably amongst the creditors of the company so proving against the estate of such bankrupt or insolvent contributory as aforesaid, until the debts due to such creditors respectively be fully paid, and, subject thereto, such dividends shall be applied by the official manager towards the general purposes of the winding-up of the affairs of the company: provided also, that in case any such fiat shall have been issued on the petition of a joint creditor of the said company in respect of his joint debt, and he shall have proved such joint debt for the purpose of receiving dividends under such fiat, then any dividends paid to such petitioning creditor under such proof shall be set against the dividends payable to such official manager in respect of the proof so made by him as aforesaid, so far as the same will extend.

31. That it shall be lawful for the Masters, in directing any issue or question of fact to be decided by a jury under the powers of the said act, to determine whether such issue or question shall be decided by a common or by a special jury; and that it shall also be lawful for the Master to direct a new trial of any such issue or question; and also that it shall be lawful for the Master to require any contributories or alleged contributories to interplead before him in any question of liability or other matter in difference between such contributories or alleged contributories in which the company is interested, or which is necessary to be determined in order to the complete winding-up thereof, and thereupon to decide the same.

32. That it shall be lawful for the Master in any proceeding before him to make any alteration in the lists of contributories or in the accounts of the company, or to make any other order which may seem to him just as respects parties present before him, although the same may vary from the notice, if any, which may have been given with respect thereto.

33. That no notice of motion for a rehearing before the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain or Ireland respectively of any order of the Master of the Rolls in England or Ireland, or of any of the Vice-Chancellors in England, under the said act or this act, shall be given after the expiration of three weeks after the order complained of shall have been made.

34. That where any appeal shall be brought or rehearing moved for under the said act or this act it shall not be incumbent on the Court before which such appeal is brought or rehearing moved for to reverse the order or other proceeding complained of for want of form only, nor unless such Court be of opinion that the substantial merits of the case require such reversal.

35. That in lieu of all fees to be received or charged in aid of the Suitors' Fee Fund in respect of any proceedings, orders, or other matters under the said act or this act, the interim or provisional manager or the official manager of any company the affairs of which shall be wound up under the said act shall pay into the Bank of England, with the privity of the Accountant-General of her Majesty's High Court of Chancery in England or Ireland respectively, to be there placed to the credit of the Suitors' Fee Fund account, such amount by way of per-centage as shall be certified by the Master upon the monies received by the official manager, and paid or divided amongst the creditors or the contributories of such company in winding-up the affairs thereof, not exceeding the sums following; that is to say,

Upon the first monies so paid and divided, not exceeding 50,000*l.*, the sum of 10*s.* per 100*l.*

Upon all further monies above 100,000*l.*, and not exceeding 200,000*l.*, so paid and divided, the sum of 3*s.* 4*d.* per 100*l.*

Upon all further monies exceeding 200,000*l.*, so paid and divided, the sum of 1*s.* 3*d.* per 100*l.*

Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain or the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, by such rules or orders as hereinafter mentioned, to alter and vary from time to time the rates herein specified.

36. That no service under the said act shall be deemed invalid by reason of the Christian name or any of the Christian names of the person upon whom service is sought to be made having been omitted, or designated by initial letters, in the list of contributories, or in the summons, notice, order, or other document wherein the name of such contributory is contained, if the Court or Master be satisfied that such service has been in other respects sufficient; and that any summons, notice, order, or other document sent by post shall be pre-paid, except so far as the rules of the Post-office shall not allow of pre-payment; and that in proving any such service by post it shall not be necessary to shew that the document was not returned.

37. That the powers by the said act given to the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain and the Lord Chancellor of Ireland respectively, with such advice and consent as therein mentioned, of making, varying, and discharging rules and orders for the objects therein mentioned, shall extend to authorise and empower the said Lord Chancellors respectively, with the like advice and consent as in the said act mentioned, to make all such rules and orders as from time to time shall seem necessary or expedient for better carrying into effect the purposes of the said act or of this act, by her Majesty's High Courts of Chancery in England and Ireland respectively, and from time to time to alter, vary, and discharge any such rules or orders.

38. That this act shall be taken and construed (so far as practicable) as a part of the said Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Act, 1848.

39. That in citing this act in other acts of Parliament, and in legal instruments and in legal proceedings, it shall be sufficient to use the expression "The Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Amendment Act, 1849."

40. That this act shall not apply to Scotland, except so far as by this act or by the said Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Act, 1848, is specially provided.

41. That this act may be amended or repealed by any act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

BURN'S JUSTICE of the PEACE and PARISH OFFICER. The Twenty-ninth Edition, corrected and greatly enlarged, containing the Statutes and Cases to 7 & 8 Vict., inclusive, with a New Collection of Precedents. The Title "Poor" by Mr. Commissioner BERE, of the Exeter District Court of Bankruptcy; the rest of the Work by THOMAS CHITTY, Esq., of the Inner Temple.
On introducing a new and greatly improved edition of an old-established book, like "Burn's Justice," to the notice of the Members of the Magistracy and the Legal Profession, the Publishers need only point attention to the claims which it has upon two such large and influential bodies, to ensure a success similar to that which has attended all previous editions. Since the year 1837 (the date of the last edition) a considerable number of important Statutes have been passed; by several of those Statutes the executive power of the Magistrate has been somewhat restricted, and by others extended, while the whole duties of the office have undergone too many changes not to render a New Edition (embodying every Act and decision to the present time) a valuable and necessary addition to the Libraries of Gentlemen engaged in the Local Administration of Justice. The Six Volumes have received a thorough revision; the Forms have been re-modelled, and carefully adapted to the recent changes; several new Titles (created by modern enactments) have been introduced, and great exertions have been made to ensure a correct and full development of the Law as it now stands. The title "Poor," which occupies the whole of the Fourth Volume, has again been prepared by Mr. Commissioner Bere; and his object has been to furnish the cases at full length, being satisfied that no compendious abstract, however carefully made, would supply a satisfactory Manual for those who attend the Quarter Sessions. The Marginal Notes and the Index are, however, abridgments of the Cases, so that the general principles of the Law may be ascertained without reading the fuller statement. The great utility of the Work as an authority, presenting the cases in detail, and superseding the Reports themselves, is thereby preserved, at the same time that the necessity of reading the whole is obviated by the fulness of the Marginal Notes.

COLLYER'S LAW OF PARTNERSHIP.

In 1 thick vol., 12mo., price 25s. boards,

A SUMMARY of the LAW of MODERN PLEADING, incident to the Rules of Hilary Term, 1834; with such of the Decisions on Practice, Evidence, and Costs, as are closely connected with that subject. Also, copious Analysis of the Cases and Pleadings. By ROBERTS PHILIP TYRWHITT, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

"The reports of the "Common-law Commissioners" suggested extensive changes in the practice on this important subject, (Pleading), which changes, whether improvements or not, were sanctioned by Parliament, and embodied by all the common-law courts in general rules, dated Hilary Term, 1834. It was then sought to adapt old principles to modern exigencies, and to link the present with the past by regulating the transition—with what success the work before us attempts to develope. It embodies in its text the pith of the decisions on "Modern Pleading," as incident to the above "rules," and condenses in the notes other valuable matter at present spread over lengthy "reports." The latter feature is adapted to render the volume more extensively useful in courts of Nisi Prius, particularly on the circuits, and in the library of country practitioners. Nor is it rigorously limited to its chief object; but includes the course of decisions on the replication de injuriâ in its extended application, as well as on the modern acts respecting land, tithes, mines, commons, ways, and easements, together with so much of the law of amendment, evidence, and costs as elucidates the new rules of pleading. On the whole, this work appears to have been prepared with much care and industry, and will be found to afford in small comparative compass a useful adjunct to the works of Stephen and Chitty."—Times, Oct 29th, 1846.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 8, 1849.

We return to the examination of the Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Amendment Act of the 1st August, 1849. We have already noticed the brevity of the affidavit prescribed in verification of any petition for a winding-up order. It will be noticed also that such brevity is rendered nearly compulsory in the best manner, by disallowing (unless specially ordered) the costs of any other affidavit in verification. (Sect. 3).

The 9th section appears to us to have a good effect: by it the word "contributory" is directed, as regards the persons who are to attend before the Master, and the representation of classes, &c.—in fact, in regard to those cases where parties may have, unless specially disallowed, their costs out of the estate—to include alleged contributories. The practice under the act of 1848 has been, not to allow any persons to represent classes, or generally, it may be said, to appear under the clause entitling them to the protection of costs out of the estate, unless they were proved or admitted themselves to be actually contributories. This rule was theoretically sound, because it seemed improper that persons, disputing their liability to be on the list at all, should be allowed to appear in support of classes, with whom, if their own contention to be discharged from the list was well founded, they would have no community of interest. But, without searching for arguments to rebut this reasoning, it may be safely asserted, that, practically, the rule was mischievous; because the effect was, that in many cases no persons could be found to represent absent classes, who were in a position to be allowed their costs, and without that guarantie none would incur the risk of attending personally, at their own cost, to watch the interest of others; so that frequently there was not an adequate representation of all the interests intended to be protected.

Under the 12th section the Master may settle the principle and scale of fees, according to which any costs are to be ascertained. It would be very desirable, if under this section, the Masters were to settle, and issue at the earliest possible period, a complete scale of fees. At present there are many points on which uncertainty prevails, to the great inconvenience of all concerned.

The 17th section seems somewhat superfluous. The Masters have considered (and, having regard to the 96th section of the act of 1848, we should humbly conceive have correctly so considered) that they had power to reconsider and review any order made by them. However, if there was any doubt on the point, the 17th section of the present act puts an end to it.

The 18th section carries still further into effect the fundamental principle of the original act of 1848, viz. that of simplifying the process of arriving at the truth, by acting upon the results obtained by the official manager as primâ facie correct, and putting it upon the parties charged, to discharge themselves, instead of putting it first upon the official manager to prove their liability. There can be no doubt that this is a proceeding very inconsistent with the great rule of English jurisprudence, that no one is to be held guilty till he is proved so. Practically, it is possible that occasional inconvenience may result from the rule laid down by these acts, but, speaking generally, they will prevent an immense quantity of captious litigation and expense. It would, however, be very desirable if some rule were laid down, by which the official manager, in charging parties as contributories, were to assign shortly his reasons, or state the facts on which he relies; because, according to the present practice, (in at least some of the offices), a person is called upon to shew that he is not a contributory, without having the slightest notion on what particular grounds he is alleged to be one. His name is put on the list, and he is simply called upon to shew cause why he should not be charged, or to be chargeable. The books are all in the possession of the official manager—and it is well known, that three-fourths of the persons who have rendered themselves primâ facie liable as contributories, especially in what are known in the Profession by the term of abortive companies, are profoundly ignorant of what acts they have done or omitted. Hence their Solicitor has to search through the intricacies of all the companies' books, and journals, and documents, to know why his client is charged. A great saving of time and expense would be effected if the official manager, whose duty it is, of course, to know why he puts any person's name on the list, or otherwise charges any one, were bound to give him something in the nature of particulars of demand, and reasons.

To the same effect as the 18th are the 32nd and 36th sections, by which proceedings, substantially correct, will not be vitiated by reason of technical inaccuracies. The practitioner must not, however, suppose that there is any probability of the Masters allowing these sections to be the foundation of looseness of practice traceable to mere carelessness. They are obviously intended only to loosen the hands of the Masters, so as to enable them to do substantial justice, when otherwise mere form might prevent it—not to enable parties to impose any substantial hardship or danger upon others, and to call upon the Master to give them the benefit of their own carelessness. It will still, therefore, be the duty of the cautious practitioner, to see that his notices do embrace all the objects on which he desires adjudication, and that services are made with as strict a regard to accuracy, in all respects, as he can attain.

We have now cursorily reviewed the principal provisions of this act, which will probably be found most materially to facilitate the working of the act of 1848.

But these acts must be looked at not merely as the machinery for winding up companies. There is much in them that contains the germ of general reform in Chancery proceedings. Their principle is the abolition of separate pleadings by the persons severally interested in the settlement of the affairs of any great body, and the concentration of the several interests in one person, empowered to act individually, as representing the interests of the body, against every person, belonging or not belonging to it, claiming any right inconsistent with the rights of the body. This principle is not applicable merely to companies, but to every case where there are many and conflicting interests in outstanding estates, more especially wherever there is matter of complicated account. In the working out of this principle, the winding-up acts have prescribed many modes of proceeding in detail, which, if they are found to answer their purpose in reference to the winding-up of companies, will soon be found to be much more extensively applicable. Of this class of alterations are the abolition of states of facts; the regular use, on the Master's authority, of vivâ voce evidence; the substitution, already noticed, of short general affidavits, by way of verification of petitions, instead of affidavits echoing every allegation; and many others, which our present space prevents us from enumerating. Each of these may be a trifle, but, in the aggregate, they amount to the abolition of an enormous quantity of useless writing and form; and, consequently, they have the effect of leaving much more of the time of professional men applicable to the full investigation of the law affecting the rights of the parties whom they represent.

Reviews.

A Selection of Leading Cases in Equity, with Notes. By Frederick Thomas White and Owen Davies Tudor, of the Middle Temple, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law [A. Maxwell & Son, 1849.]

Fonblanque's Equity is now somewhat out of date Story's Equity, though it reads smoothly enough, and has much appearance of being, what the plan of Mr Fonblanque's valuable notes prevented them from being systematic, and is in truth, in many respects, a useful book, does not altogether supply to the English practitioner what Mr. Fonblanque's notes, somewhat systematised and brought down to the present time, would have been. Even Mr. Spence's learned work, as far as it has yet gone, can hardly, we think, be said to have exhausted the subject of English equity *. In this state

* Mr. Spence's second volume has just appeared. As far as we have yet been able to examine his work, it certainly does not supersede that of Messrs. White and Tudor, who, in one important point, that of the conversion of real estate employed in a partnership business, have stated the law (in their note on Lake v. Craddock, pp. 130, 137) more exactly than Mr. Spence has done. At p. 209 of his second volume, Mr. Spence (following Mr. Collyer) has given the following statement of the present state of the law on this point:—"From what Lord Eldon repeatedly said, it would appear that it was his opinion that, where persons engaged in trade as partners (and some of his expressions would seem to include any partnership concern) purchase, or acquire in any way, real estate, all such real estate belonging to them jointly, which is appropriated to carrying on the trade, becomes so completely stamped with the character of stock-in-trade, that it must be considered to have been in the contemplation of the parties that on the dissolution it should be sold, together with the rest of the stock, for the purposes of satisfaction of creditors and division, and to have thus become, equally as the rest of the stock-in-trade, personal estate for all purposes, unless that character has been taken away." And to this passage is subjoined the following note:—"Crawshay v. Maule, (1 Swanst. 508, 518, 521, 523); Silkrig v. Davies, (2 Dow, 242; 7 Sim. 283, 284). In Fereday v. Wightwick, (1 Russ. & My. 49), and in Phillips v. Phillips, (1 My. & K. 663), and Broom v. Broom (3 My. & K. 444), Sir J. Leach expressed his opinion to be that such was the law in his time, and he acted upon it accordingly: and see Morris v. Kearsley, (Collyer on Partnership), where Mr. Baron Alderson followed those cases; and see Jackson v. Jackson, on appeal, (supra, p. 297)."

Now, Sir J. Leach's authority is confined to the second branch of Mr. Spence's proposition, viz. that real estate which is partnership property for the purpose of satisfying partnership demands is also, primâ facie, distributable as personal estate; and does not sanction the other part of it, that real estate held by partners jointly for partnership purposes, however acquired, is to be treated as personalty.

In the report of Phillips v. Phillips, in 1 My. & K., the Honor is made to say, "I confess I have for some years notwithstanding older authorities, considered it to be settled that all property, whatever might be its nature, purchased with partnership capital for the purposes of the partnership trade, continued to be partnership capital and to have, to every intent, the quality of personal estate: and in the case of Fereday v. Wightwick (1 Russ. & My. 45) I had no intention to confine the principle to the payment of the partnership demands. Lord Eldon has certainly, upon several occasions, expressed such an opinion. The case of Townsend v. Devaynes (1 Mont. Law of Partn., Append., p. 97) is a clear decision to that effect; and general convenience requires that this principle should be adhered to."

But there were other points decided in Phillips v. Phillips according to a note of that case in a recent work on partnership, which Mr. Spence has overlooked. "In the published report of this case of Phillips v. Phillips, in 1 My. & K. the only point that appears as determined is, that real estate, purchased with partnership capital for partnership purposes, is personal estate, and as such goes to the personal representative of a deceased partner. But it appears of things there was certainly room for a good practical book on the present state of that branch of the English system of jurisprudence which has received the name of Equity. The appearance, therefore, of Messrs. White and Tudor's "Selection of Leading Cases in Equity, with Notes," may be considered as well-timed.

The plan of the work before us, suggested by the justly celebrated "Leading Cases" of the late Mr. John William Smith, neither requires nor admits of a systematic treatise on equity. The work will not, however, on that account, be found less useful, either to the student or to the lawyer engaged in actual business. To the student such a work is a guide to the cases which it is most important for him to read, and the notes subjoined to each case will help him not only to understand the principal case, but will put him in possession of the result of the subsequent decisions on the same subject, and direct him to the various reports where such decisions are to be found at large. With regard to the lawyer engaged in actual practice, though the reason assigned by Mr. J. W. Smith, that the lawyer would willingly carry a selection of leading cases round the circuit with him, does not, perhaps, apply so strongly to leading cases in equity, still we apprehend that practising lawyers of every denomination, including county court judges, would be glad to have a good selection of such cases, with useful notes, in their libraries. In the Preface the editors thus explain the plan of their work, and the mode in which they have carried it out:—

"The plan of this work was suggested by the very 'able volumes of the late Mr. John William Smith, 'which contain a selection of leading cases, princi-'pally taken from the common-law reports; and it was 'thought that it might be useful to the Profession to 'have, within a small compass, a selection of leading 'cases decided in courts of equity.

"Each of the cases chosen will, it is believed, be 'found either to be frequently referred to in practice, 'or to enunciate clearly, for the first time, some import-'ant principle of equity.

"A chronological arrangement of the cases has not 'been observed, because it has been in the present, and 'may be in a subsequent volume, found useful to print 'together cases on the same subject, decided at different 'periods.

"The notes, or abstracts prefixed to the cases, have 'occasionally, when inaccurate or defective, been al-'tered; and, in some instances, the arguments and 'judgment in the same case are taken from different 'reports. Thus, in the well-known case of Fox v. 'Mackreth, the arguments are taken from Brown's 'Chancery Cases, and the judgment from Cox's Re-'ports; and in the celebrated case of Garth v. Cotton '(a complete report of which is not to be found else-'where) the arguments are taken from two different 'places in Vesey senior's Reports, the judgment from 'Dickens' Reports, and the decree from Atkyns' Re-'ports.

"In the notes, an attempt has been made to de-'velope the principles laid down or acted upon in the 'cases, and to collect the recent authorities; but, as the 'nature of the work would not permit that the notes 'should be complete essays upon the different subjects 'treated of, they have been principally confined to the 'points decided in the cases, to which, in fact, they are 'only intended to be subsidiary.

"It will be seen, that, in the notes, some cases of 'importance are stated at considerable length, and that, 'when it was convenient or practicable, the very words 'of the judges have been preserved."

The following is a list of the leading cases reported in full in this volume. We have added the subject treated in each case, and in the notes subjoined. A table of contents, specifying the subjects as well as the cases, would be found very useful:—

Ackroyd v. Smithson—Resulting trust, on failure of the purposes for which conversion has been directed.
Aleyn v. Belchier—Fraud upon a power.
Ancaster (Duke of) v. Mayer—Primary liability of personal estate to the payment of debts.—Exoneration.
Chesterfield (Earl of) v. Sir Abraham Janssen—Post obit securities.—Catching bargains with heirs, expectants, and reversioners.—Confirmation.
Cuddee v. Rutter—Specific performance of agreements relating to personal property.
Dering v. Earl of Winchelsea—Contribution between co-sureties.
Dyer v. Dyer—Purchase in the name of a son.—Advancement.
Elibank (Lady) v. Montolieu—Wife's equity to a settlement.
Elliot v. Merryman—Liability of a purchaser to see to the application of his purchase-money.
Ellison v. Ellison—Voluntary trusts.
Fletcher v. Ashburner—Conversion.
Fox v. Mackreth—Purchase by a trustee for sale.
Garth v. Sir John Hind Cotton—Equitable waste.
Glenorchy (Lord) v. Bosville—Executed and executory trusts.
Hulme v. Tenant—Wife's separate property.
Keech v. Sandford—Renewal of a lease by a trustee.
Lake v. Craddock } —Joint purchasers.
Lake v. Gibson }
Legg v. Goldwire—Executed and executory trusts.

pears from the MS. notes of Mr. Williamson, one of the counsel for the plaintiffs in the case, which are now before me, that the following important points were also determined:—1. Public-houses devised by the uncle, who was a brewer, to the two nephews, who carried on the brewery as partners, were held not to be partnership property, though they were used exactly as the former. The defendants, on attempting to argue this, were stopped by the Master of the Rolls. 2. So, where the uncle had mortgages of public-houses, whether in fee or for years, which he devised to his nephews, and the nephews purchased the equity of redemption out of partnership funds, the equity of redemption was held to follow the mortgage, and not to become partnership property. The decision in Phillips v. Phillips was followed in Broom v. Broom, (3 My. & K. 443), and in Morris v. Kearsley, (2 You. & C. 139)." (Bisset on Partnership, p. 50).

In the same work (pp. 55, 56) the result of all the cases is thus stated:—"1. That, in the absence of a specific agreement to the contrary, real estate, purchased with partnership funds for partnership purposes, is converted out and out into personal estate, and therefore goes to the personal representative, and not to the heir of a deceased partner. 2. That real estate, purchased with partnership property, but not for partnership purposes, is not converted into personalty. 3. That real estate, brought into partnership by a partner under an agreement that during the partnership, and if necessary for partnership purposes after the expiration of the partnership, it should be considered as personal estate, but not purchased with partnership funds, and not required to be sold for payment of debts, or for any of the other purposes of the partnership, is not converted into personal estate, as between heirs and personal representatives. 4. That real estate, devised to partners is not partnership property, though used for partnership purposes. 5. That though partners purchase, with partnership funds, the equity of redemption of mortgages devised to them, the equity of redemption follows the mortgage, and does not become partnership property."

In Phillips v. Phillips the houses in question belonged to the partners as tenants in common; so that the case does not contradict Mr. Spence's proposition, which relates to real estate vested in the partners jointly. But we are not aware of any authority in its favour. Messrs. White and Tudor cite Mr. Bisset's note of Phillips v. Phillips, but they do not notice that the second point (as to the mortgaged public-houses) was erroneously decided, if, as is to be inferred, the houses were used in the trade. (See 11 Jur., part 2, p. 100).

It will be seen that this list embraces a large and most important range of subjects. The notes subjoined to each of the cases, which are intended to exhibit the present state of the law on each subject treated in the principal case, display much learning and ability, and bear evidence of being the result of a careful and conscientious examination of all the cases on the subjects discussed. They are, in general, written very much in the style in which such notes should be written; that is, in a style combining the greatest degree of brevity that is compatible with clearness. As a specimen of the style we extract a portion of the valuable note on Executed and Executory Trusts:—

"It is proposed in this note to consider the distinction between trusts executed and executory, and the consequences which result from it with reference to the limitation of estates.

"A trust is said to be executed when no act is necessary to be done to give effect to it, the limitation being originally complete; as where an estate is conveyed or devised unto and to the use of A. and his heirs, in trust for B. and the heirs of his body.

"A trust is said to be executory where some further act is necessary to be done by the author of the trust, or the trustees, to give effect to it; as in the case of marriage articles, and as in the case of a will where property is vested in trustees, in trust to settle or convey; in both which cases a further act, viz. a settlement or conveyance, is contemplated.

"It is now clearly established, as laid down by Lord Talbot in Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville, that a court of equity, in cases of executed trusts, will construe the limitations in the same manner as similar legal limitations. If, for instance, an estate is vested in trustees and their heirs, in trust for A. for life, without impeachment of waste, with remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, with remainder in trust for the heirs of A.'s body, the trust being an executed trust, A., according to the rule in Shelley's case, which is a rule of law, will be held to take an estate tail. (See Wright v. Pearson, 1 Eden, 119; Austen v. Taylor, Id. 361; Jones v. Morgan, 1 Bro. C. C. 206; Jervoise v. The Duke of Northumberland, 1 J. & W. 559, clearly overruling the opinion expressed by Lord Hardwicke in Bagshaw v. Spencer, 2 Atk. 577, when he erroneously reversed the decision of Sir Joseph Jekyll, M. R. See also Boswell v. Dillon, 1 Dru. 291).

"In cases, however, of executory trusts, where, according to Lord Talbot's observation in Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville, something is left to be done, viz. the trusts are left to be executed in a more careful and more accurate manner, a court of equity is not, as in cases of executed trusts, bound to construe technical expressions with legal strictness, but will mould the trusts according to the intent of the creator of the trusts.

"It is observed, by Lord Talbot, in Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville, that the rule is not generally true, that in articles and executory trusts (meaning executory trusts in wills) different constructions are to be admitted. This is correct with the qualification or distinction, that, in executory trusts under marriage articles, the intention of the parties may fairly be presumed à priori from the nature of the transaction; in executory trusts in wills, it must be gathered from the words of the will alone. Lord Eldon seems to have denied this distinction in The Countess of Lincoln v. The Duke of Newcastle, (12 Ves. 227, 230); but see his explanation in the case of Jervoise v. The Duke of Northumberland, (1 J. & W. 574). The distinction has been well put by Sir W. Grant, M. R., in Blackburn v. Stables, (2 Ves & B. 369). 'I know,' observes his Honor, 'of no difference between an executory trust in marriage articles and in a will, except that the object and purpose of the former furnish an indication of intention, which must be wanting in the latter. When the object is to make a provision, by the settlement of an estate, for the issue of a marriage, it is not to be presumed that the parties meant to put it in the power of the father to defeat that purpose, and appropriate the estate to himself. If, therefore, the agreement is to limit an estate for life, with remainder to the heirs of the body, the Court decrees a strict settlement, in conformity to the presumable intention; but if a will directs a limitation for life, with remainder to the heirs of the body, the Court has no such ground for decreeing a strict settlement. A testator gives arbitrarily what estate he thinks fit; there is no presumption that he means one quantity of interest rather than another—an estate for life rather than in tail or in fee. The subject being mere bounty, the intended extent of that bounty can be known only from the words in which it is given; but if it is clearly to be ascertained, from anything in the will, that the testator did not mean to use the expressions which he has employed, in their strict proper technical sense, the Court, in decreeing such settlement as he has directed, will depart from his words in order to execute his intention.' In Lord Deerhurst v. The Duke of St. Alban's, (5 Madd. 260), Sir J. Leach, V. C., observes, as to the distinction between marriage articles and a will, ''You are guided to the meaning of articles by the plain object of consideration in them, the issue of the marriage; but you know nothing of the motive and object of a will but what you collect from the language of it.' (See also Maguire v. Scully, 2 Hog. 113; Stratford v. Powell, 1 Ball & B. 25).

"In consequence of the distinction adverted to, it will be most convenient to consider executory trusts under marriage articles and executory trusts under wills separately." (Pp. 18, 19).

With regard to the question, whether, since the passing of the stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, a limitation to trustees to preserve contingent remainders is necessary, the editors, in their note on the important case of Garth v. Cotton, (a case which is well worth the careful perusal not only of every student of law, but of every man who wishes to see a chain of reasoning that carries the mind along almost with the force of a mathematical demonstration, and that, too, couched in nervous, plain, and idiomatic English), after discussing it, though with somewhat too great brevity, conclude, we think, rightly, that, "where the legal fee is not vested in trustees, a limitation to trustees to support contingent remainders is still necessary, when there is only a previous estate for years; and it is conceived, that, even where there is a previous estate of freehold, it may still be useful, as the trustees to support contingent remainders can, by an application for an injunction before the contingent remainder-man comes into esse, protect his estate from waste." (P. 497).

We shall make one more extract, which appears to us to be extremely well done. In the note on the case of Fox v. Mackreth—which established the rule, that a purchase by a trustee for sale from his cestui que trust, although he may have given an adequate price, and gained no advantage, shall be set aside at the option of the cestui que trust, unless the connexion between them has been dissolved, and all knowledge of the value of the property acquired by the trustee has been communicated to his cestui que trust—the editors, after giving an enumeration of cases which come under the prohibitory rule, and also of the cases wherein a trustee can purchase from a cestui que trust, thus proceed:—

"It remains to consider the nature of the relief a court 'of equity will grant against a trustee or other person 'who has made a purchase which is improper, according to the rules before laid down, and upon what terms 'that relief will be granted.

"The cestui que trust, if he wishes it, can insist upon 'a re-conveyance of the estate from the trustee who 'purchased, if it remains in his hands unsold; (The 'York Buildings Company v. M'Kenzie, 8 Bro. P. C. 42, 'Toml. ed.; Lord Hardwicke v. Vernon, 4 Ves. 411; 'Randall v. Errington, 10 Ves. 423); or from a person 'who has purchased from him, with notice. (The At'torney-General v. Lord Dudley, Coop. 146; Dunbar v. 'Tredennick, 2 Ball & B. 304). But the re-conveyance 'will only be decreed upon the terms of his repaying 'the purchase-money, with interest at 4*l.* per cent., 'and all sums which may have been expended in re'pairs and improvements of a permanent and lasting 'nature, and also such as have a tendency to bring the 'estate to a better sale. On the other hand, there 'must be an allowance for acts that deteriorate the value 'of the estate, and the trustee must account for all rents 'received by him, and for all profits, such as money 'arising from the sale of timber; and he must also pay 'an occupation rent for such part of the estate as may 'have been in his actual possession. (Hall v. Hallet, '1 Cox, 134; Ex parte Hughes, 6 Ves. 624, 625; Camp'bell v. Walker, 5 Ves. 682; Ex parte Bennett, 10 Ves. '400, 401; Robinson v. Ridley, 6 Madd. 2; Ex parte 'James, 8 Ves. 351; Ex parte Lacey, 6 Ves. 630; Wat'son v. Toone, 6 Madd. 153; The York Buildings Com'pany v. M'Kenzie, 8 Bro. P. C. 42, Toml. ed.)

"If the cestui que trust does not wish for a re-con'veyance of the estate, an order will be made, that the 'expense of repairs and improvements, not only sub'stantial and lasting, but such as have a tendency to 'bring the estate to a better sale, after making an al'lowance for acts that deteriorate the value of the estate, 'shall be added to the purchase-money, and that the 'estate shall be put at the accumulated sum: if any one 'makes an advance upon that sum, the trustee shall not 'have the estate; if no one does, he will be held to his 'purchase. (Ex parte Reynolds, 5 Ves. 707; Ex parte 'Hughes, 6 Ves. 617; Ex parte Lacey, Id. 625; Lister 'v. Lister, Id. 631; Ex parte Bennett, 10 Ves. 381; Ex 'parte Hewitt, 2 M. & A. 477). But where the trustee 'has bought the estate in one lot, and the cestuis que 'trust are desirous of having it sold in several lots, the 'cestuis que trust must first repay him all the money 'he has advanced, with interest, he accounting for the 'rents received by him, or paying an occupation rent, 'if he actually occupied the estate. (Ex parte James, '8 Ves. 351).

"Although the purchaser has paid the purchase-'money into court, and it has been invested in the 'funds, he will not be entitled to any benefit from any 'advance in the funds, but to his purchase-money and 'interest only; for, if the stock had fallen, instead of 'advancing, he could not have been compelled to take 'it. (Ex parte James, 8 Ves. 351).

"Where the trustee has re-sold the estate, the ces'tui que trust can, as in the principal case, make him 'account for what he has received over and above the 'purchase-money he himself paid, with interest at 4*l.* 'per cent. (Ex parte Reynolds, 5 Ves. 707; Hall v. 'Hallet, 1 Cox, 134).

"The costs of the suit, where the sale is set aside, 'must be paid by the trustee, (Sanderson v. Walker, '13 Ves. 601; Hall v. Hallet, 1 Cox, 141; Whichcote v. 'Lawrence, 3 Ves. 740; Dunbar v. Tredennick, 2 Ball '& B. 304; see, however, Baker v. Carter, 1 You. & C. 'Exch. Cas. 250), unless there has been great delay on 'the part of the cestui que trust. (The Attorney-Ge'neral v. Lord Dudley, Coop. 146). And even if the 'cestui que trust fails to set aside the sale on account 'of his own delay, the Court may refuse the trustee 'his costs. (Gregory v. Gregory, Coop. 201; Champion 'v. Rigby, 1 Russ. & My. 539).

"Acquiescence for a long time in an improper sale 'will disable a person from coming into a court of equity 'to set it aside. (Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. 355; Price v. 'Byrne, cited with approbation by Lord Alvanley in 'Campbell v. Walker, 5 Ves. 681; Champion v. Rigby, '1 Russ. & My. 539; Roberts v. Tunstall, 4 Hare, '257). But 'to fix acquiescence upon a party, it should 'unequivocally appear that he knew the fact upon 'which the supposed acquiescence is founded, and to 'which it refers.' (Per Sir William Grant, M. R., in 'Randall v. Errington, 10 Ves. 428). (See also Chal'mer v. Bradley, 1 J. & W. 51; Trevelyan v. Charter, '4 Law Journ., Chanc., 209; S. C., 11 Cl. & Fin. 714). 'And the distress of the cestui que trust may be an ex'cuse for acquiescence. (Gregory v. Gregory, Coop. 201; 'Roche v. O'Brien, 1 Ball & B. 342). But it has been 'held that laches do not apply to a body of creditors, 'to whom relief will be granted, when it would be re'fused to an individual. (See case in the Exchequer, 'cited 6 Ves. 632; Whichcote v. Lawrence, 3 Ves. 740; 'The York Buildings Company v. M'Kenzie, 8 Bro. 'P. C. 42, Toml. ed.)

"A cestui que trust may confirm an invalid sale, so 'that he cannot afterwards set it aside. (Morse v. Royal, '12 Ves. 355; Roche v. O'Brien, 1 Ball & B. 353). 'But, in order to constitute a valid confirmation, a 'person must be aware that the act he is doing will 'have the effect of confirming an impeachable transac'tion. (Murray v. Palmer, 2 S. & L. 486; Dunbar v. 'Tredennick, 2 Ball & B. 317; Malony v. L'Estrange, '1 Beat. 413; Adams v. Clifton, 1 Russ. 297; Cocke'rell v. Cholmeley, 1 Russ. & My. 425; Chalmer v. 'Bradley, 1 J. & W. 51). Nor will the act of con'firmation be valid, if it be done in distress and diffi'culties, under the force, pressure, and influence of the 'former transaction. (Crowe v. Ballard, 3 Bro. C. C. '120; Wood v. Downes, 18 Ves. 128; Roche v. 'O'Brien, 1 Ball & B. 330). And it must be an act 'separate and distinct from the impeachable transac'tion, and not, as in the principal case, a conveyance 'executed in consequence of a former contract or cove'nant. (Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. 373; Wood v. Downes, '18 Ves. 124, 128; Roche v. O'Brien, 1 Ball & B. '338). A confirmation of an invalid sale, by the ma'jority of the creditors of a bankrupt, will not be bind'ing upon the minority. (See Ex parte Lacey, 6 Ves. '628; Sir G. Colebrooke's case, cited in Ex parte Hughes, '6 Ves. 622, overruling Whelpdale v. Cookson, cited 'in Campbell v. Walker, 5 Ves. 682; S. C., 1 Ves. 9; 'Ex parte Thwaites, 1 M. & A. 323)." (Pp. 115—117).

There are leading and misleading cases, and it seems to fall strictly within the province of an editor of cases belonging to the former class to warn his readers against such of the latter kind as, not having been overruled, may fall in his way. This part of their duty the learned editors have not, in our opinion, sufficiently discharged. They have used research and judgment in the selection and application of their illustrations, but they have seldom undertaken the responsibility of discussing doubtful or erroneous decisions. Possibly they adopt an opinion which is not uncommon, that "we should avoid throwing doubts on decisions; for it is better that the law should be settled imperfectly, than that it should be ever unsettled and in the course of improvement." But it is a fallacy to call the upholding of anomalous decisions a settlement of the law. Judges follow precedents, but, as no two cases agree in the concrete, they necessarily follow precedents as principles; and when they follow an anomalous precedent, though they may settle the law for a small nucleus of cases in which the erroneous precedent must either be followed or be flatly overruled, they unsettle it for a much larger number of cases lying round about, in which the almost endless distinctions, qualifications, and exceptions must be debated and established, that at length constitute rather a nebulous margin between truth and error, than a limit to either. An erroneous decision is like a bad act of Parliament—it may be overruled or repealed with, at most, a trifling temporary inconvenience; if it remains law, it is the parent of endless litigation. We have only space shortly to refer to a single example of the defect we complain of. In the note to Elliot v. Merryman the learned editors state Lord Lyndhurst's decision in Forbes v. Peacock, (1 Ph. 717), that executors having authority to sell real estate for the payment of debts, and also for other purposes, can, by force of the charge of debts, give a good discharge for the purchase-money, although they so behave as to give to the purchaser notice (and notice from themselves, which is the important point) that they know of no unpaid debts, and are not selling for the payment of debts. Messrs. White and Tudor cite this judgment without comment, and without referring to the construction put upon it in a note by the reporter, apparently sanctioned by Lord Lyndhurst—a construction strikingly at variance with the terms of the decision. That the judgment, both according to its literal purport, and according to Mr. Phillips's explanation of it, is unsound, and has unsettled a doctrine which previously was well defined and well established, a contributor has endeavoured to shew at large elsewhere, (11 Jur., part 2, pp. 110, 124), and we shall content ourselves with referring to his argument.

CAP. XVIII.

An Act for the holding of Petty Sessions of the Peace in Boroughs, and for providing Places for the holding of such Petty Sessions in Counties and Boroughs.

[11th May, 1849.]

Sect. 1. Petty Sessions of the Peace in Boroughs.
2. Justices at General or Quarter Sessions, or the Council in Boroughs, may provide Places for holding Petty Sessions. The Justices or Council may agree for the Use of the County Court for that Purpose.
3. Justices of the Peace of different Counties may provide Places for holding Petty Sessions at the joint Expense of such Counties.

Whereas certain meetings of justices of the peace called petty sessions of the peace are holden in and for certain divisions of the several counties of England and Wales called petty sessional divisions, and important duties have lately been assigned to the justices attending at such petty sessions, and to their clerks, by certain acts of Parliament, and it is desirable to declare and enact that the sittings of justices of the peace, or of a stipendiary magistrate, in and for every city, borough, or town corporate having a separate commission of the peace, or for any part thereof, shall be deemed a petty sessions of the peace within the meaning of such acts, and that buildings or places at which such petty sessions may be holden shall, where necessary, be provided: be it therefore enacted, &c., that every sitting and acting of justices of the peace, or of a stipendiary magistrate, in and for any city, borough, or town corporate having a separate commission of the peace, or any part thereof, within England and Wales, at any police court or other place appointed in that behalf, shall be deemed a petty sessions of the peace, and the district for which the same shall be holden shall be deemed a petty sessional division, within the meaning of any acts of Parliament, already made or hereafter to be made, having relation to such petty sessions, or to any business to be transacted thereat.

2. That in all cases where at present there are not, or where hereafter there shall not be, any fit or proper place for the holding of such petty sessions within any such petty sessional division as aforesaid, in any county, riding, liberty, or division within England and Wales, or within any city, borough, or town corporate within the same, it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace for any such county, riding, liberty, or division, in general or quarter sessions assembled, and for the council or other governing body in any such city, borough, or town corporate having a separate commission of the peace, respectively, if they shall respectively think fit, from time to time to direct that fit and proper places be hired or otherwise provided for the holding of such petty sessions of the peace within any such petty sessional division as aforesaid, and that the expenses thereof and attendant thereon be paid out of the county rate or borough fund respectively, as the case may be: provided always, that no such direction for hiring or otherwise providing any place for the holding of such petty sessions shall be given by the justices for any such county, riding, liberty, or division, so assembled as aforesaid, unless an application in writing for that purpose, signed by the justices of the peace acting in such petty sessional division, or the major part of such justices, shall have been transmitted to the clerk of the peace six weeks at the least before the holding of the general or quarter sessions at which such direction shall be given; and the clerk of the peace shall cause notice of such application to be published in some newspaper circulating in the same county, riding, liberty, or division, and in which the advertisements of county business are usually inserted, fourteen days at the least before the holding of such general or quarter sessions: provided always, that in every such case when it may be so required to provide a fit and proper place for the holding of such petty sessions as aforesaid, if it shall appear to the justices so assembled as aforesaid, or to the council of such city, borough, or town corporate, respectively, that the county court for the district is holden in any building or place which would be appropriate for the holding of such petty sessions, it shall be lawful for such justices or council respectively to contract with the treasurer of such county court for the use and occupation thereof or of so much thereof as may be needed for the purposes of such petty sessions, for such time or times, weekly or otherwise, and at such annual rent, and subject to such conditions as to repairs, alterations, or improvements of such building or place, as may be agreed upon.

3. Provided always, and be it enacted, that where justices of the peace, acting as such for two or more adjoining counties, ridings, liberties, or divisions, hold petty sessions on or near the common boundaries of such counties, ridings, liberties, or divisions, it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace of each of such counties, ridings, liberties, or divisions, upon such application as hereinbefore provided, to agree with the justices of the peace of the other or others of such counties, ridings, liberties, or divisions, that a place for the holding of such petty sessions be hired or otherwise provided within either of such counties, ridings, liberties, or divisions, and that the same be so hired or otherwise provided at the joint expense of such counties, ridings, liberties, or divisions, in such manner and proportions as in the said agreement shall be specified; and all the provisions of an act of the last session, [11 & 12 Vict. c. 101], intituled "An Act to provide for the Expenses of erecting and maintaining Lock-up Houses on the Borders of Counties," concerning the appointment and re-assembling of committees, filling up vacancies in committees, the proceedings of committees, the agreement to be drawn by them (except so far as respects the appointment and salary of a superintendent constable), and the powers of the court of general or quarter sessions and of committees in relation to such agreement, and the executing the same, and doing all necessary acts consequential upon such agreement, shall extend and be applicable to every agreement to be made under this act by and between the justices of two or more such counties, ridings, liberties, or divisions as aforesaid, as if such provisions had been here repeated, and the agreement to be made as aforesaid under this act, and the place to be provided for the holding of such petty sessions as aforesaid, had been substituted in such provisions for such agreement and lock-up house as in the said act mentioned.

TO SOLICITORS.—INSOLVENTS' SCHEDULES and BALANCE-SHEETS prepared by a Gentleman, who has been, and continues to be, employed by those of the Profession who cannot devote their attention to Insolvency and Bankruptcy matters. Address, A. B., care of Mr. W. Parkins, Stationer, 25, Oxford-street.

ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE, A. D. 1720.—Incorporated by Charter of his Majesty George the First. CHIEF OFFICE, in the ROYAL EXCHANGE. Branch Office, No. 29, PALL MALL.

LIFE, FIRE, and MARINE ASSURANCES may be effected on the most advantageous terms with this Corporation, which has transacted business in all departments during a period exceeding a Century and a Quarter, and affords unquestionable Security by its Capital Stock.

The following Table shews the amount of BONUS on British Life Policies, for the Sum of 1000*l.* each, which had been Seven Years in force on the 31st December, 1848:—

Age when Assured.	Amount of Premiums paid.	Bonus by Addition to Sum Assured:
		Amount of Addition.	Per Cent. per Ann. on Sum Assured.	Per Cent on the Amt. of Prems. paid.

70	771 15 0	244	3·49	31·6
Average	..	..	2·04	46·3

Equivalent reductions have been made in the Annual Premiums payable by those of the Assured who desired that their share of profit should be so applied.

The practice of the Corporation in deciding promptly upon Proposals, in registering and acknowledging Notices of Assignment, and in furnishing information with regard to prior notices, is calculated to promote the convenience of the Members of the Legal Profession; while the regulation which admits of Assurances being granted to the extent of 10,000*l.* on the same life may save trouble to their clients, by obviating the necessity of appearance and examination at different offices. The usual allowance is made on the introduction of Life Assurances, and is reserved for the original recipient, notwithstanding that the Premiums may subsequently be paid by another individual or firm.

Prospectuses will be forwarded on application.

CONSULTING ACTUARY.

FRANCIS G. P. NEISON, Esq., F.L.S.

This Society transacts the usual business of Life Assurance, and presents the following Advantages to the Assured:—

First.—The security of a large subscribed Capital.

Second.—Exemption of the Assured from all liability.

Third.—Tables of Premiums calculated on the true law of mortality, expressly for this Office, and affording particular advantages to young lives.

Fourth.—Participating and Non-participating Scales of Premiums. In the former the Assured are entitled to EIGHTY PER CENT. or FOUR-FIFTHS of the profits divided amongst them periodically, either by way of addition to the sum assured, or in diminution of Premium, at the option of the Assured.

Fifth.—No deduction is made from the four-fifths of the profits belonging to the Assured for interest on Capital, or for a Guarantee Fund.

Sixth.—No Policy disputed, except in case of fraud.

Seventh.—This Society gives a much larger share of profits to the Assured, and at a lower rate of Premium, than the great majority of other Life Offices.

Eighth.—Parties wishing to assure their lives without participating in the profits can do so on a lower scale of Premiums than that of a large proportion of other Offices.

The Directors meet on Thursdays, at 2 o'clock. Assurances may be effected by applying on any other day, between the hours of 10 and 4, at the Office of the Society, 57, Chancery-lane, London, where Prospectuses and all other requisite information can be obtained.

CHARLES JOHN GILL, Secretary.

MONEY.—From 4000*l.* to 15,000*l.* WANTED, upon MORTGAGE of first-rate LEASEHOLD PROPERTY, for long terms, of ample value, in the best parts of London, held direct from the Freeholder. No application will be attended to but from Solicitors of undoubted respectability, with whom liberal terms will be made. Address, A. D., 24, Old Cavendish-street, Oxford-street.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 15, 1849.

We rejoice to see the subject of improvement in the mode of preparing acts of Parliament taken up by so powerful a pen as that of Lord Brougham. Possibly, now, some attention may actually and really be paid to it.

Many people wonder how it is that acts of Parliament are worded in language so obscure and so often contradictory, and many more solve the difficulty by throwing the whole blame upon the lawyers. "It is," they say, "the lawyers in and out of the House who contrive to have acts of Parliament made obscure, in order that the Profession may profit by the litigation generated by that very obscurity." The wonder should be, on the contrary, that acts of Parliament (seeing the process they go through) are ever intelligible at all; and the truth is, as to the share of the lawyers in the matter, that, whether they do or do not profit by the obscurity of acts of Parliament, they are so far from being the causes of it, that to them is due the little light which occasionally glimmers through an act.

The obscurity of acts of Parliament results principally from two causes: firstly, the structure of legislative language; secondly, the parliamentary practice of altering detached parts of a bill without reference to the rest, and not subjecting the whole bill afterwards to the general consideration of any skilful and responsible person.

The principle of the structure of legislative language will be perceived, by any one who will take the pains to examine a few acts, to be to adopt always the most inverted form of phrase that the subject will admit of, and to proceed always, if possible, by way of negation of the opposite of the affirmative enactment intended, instead of by the simple affirmative enactment. How this came to be the pet structure of legislative language we know not, but so it is, and the consequence is, of course, a style unnecessarily involved, and carrying in itself an unnecessary principle of obscurity. To illustrate our meaning, let us take the 34th clause of the Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Amendment Act, 1849—a rather favourable specimen of the lucidity of an act—which enacts, "that, where any appeal shall be brought or rehearing moved for under the said act or this act, it shall not be incumbent on the Court before which such appeal is brought or rehearing moved for to reverse the order or other proceeding complained of for want of form only, nor unless such Court be of opinion that the substantial merits of the case require such reversal."

Now, this is not unintelligible, but it would be of much more complete clearness if it stated positively, instead of negatively, what is meant. What is meant is, that defect of form shall not of itself vitiate an order; and that, on appeal, the Court may disregard any defect of form, and reverse or sustain the order, according to the substantial merits of the case.

Again, take the 6th clause, which is, in part, as follows:—"That, notwithstanding the provision in the said act contained for empowering the Court to allow, increase, or diminish from time to time the salary or remuneration of the official manager, it shall be lawful for the Master to exercise the said powers and discretions so given to the Court, and that whether as respects any official manager already appointed or hereafter to be appointed."

Now, it is impossible to say, and that merely by reason of the complex style of the Legislature, whether this means to give to the Master a power overri that of the Court, or only additional to that power. The act of 1848 gives powers to the Court to allow, increase, or diminish &c. the salary or remuneration of the official manager, and gives no such powers to the Master. The power now given to the Master is, "notwithstanding the provision in the said act," to exercise the powers given by it. This is an instance of the involved style, which, stating nothing positively, but something by reference to something else, opens, of course, the door to much doubt.

Now, is it not an extraordinary style of language to say, (referring to an act which gives certain powers to A. and none to B.), "notwithstanding the powers given to A., B. may exercise the same powers?" If it is meant to abrogate the powers given to A., is it not a most circuitous and infelicitous mode of doing so? If it is not, what is there in the exercise of the powers by B. inconsistent with or notwithstanding the provision giving the powers to A.? If the present act had said, "The Master may fix the salaries, subject to the approbation of the Court"—if that was meant, or independently of such approbation if that was meant, the thing would have been clear. As it is, the "for and notwithstanding" style has introduced perfectly uncalled-for obscurity.

Next, as to the second cause of obscurity: to this it is that Lord Brougham's remedy addresses itself. We say Lord Brougham's remedy, because his Lordship is now powerfully urging its adoption. But we need not say, that, for years, the necessity of having bills originally prepared and finally settled by a few persons of legal knowledge and skill, has been familiar to the Profession, and has been pointed out in this Journal, as well as, we believe, in many others. On this branch of the subject we shall not here say much. It is too evident, both on principle and from the result of observation, that such documents as acts of Parliament ought to be settled so that all their clauses should be in harmony with each other, and all as precisely expressed as possible, and as nearly as possible in a uniform style of language. That this result can be obtained under the present practice, of every one enforcing such alterations in the passage of the bill through Parliament as he desires and can enforce, not only by striking out and adding clauses, but by altering the wording of clauses, and then, without any final revision of the mutilated bill, of presenting it to Parliament to be passed, is out of all question.

A practicable remedy is that so often suggested, and now enforced by the eloquence of Lord Brougham; and if the country paid 5000*l.* a year for a competent revision of bills before they became acts, we verily believe, that, in two or three years, it would save, in the shape of preventing unnecessary law expense, the capital that would produce 5000*l.* a year.

CASES UPON THE JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES WINDING-UP ACT, 11 & 12 VICT. c. 45.

Jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery against Creditors of a Company.]—A very important question was raised on the construction of this act in the case of The India and Australia Mail Steam-packet Company, (13 Jur., part 1, p. 689). A winding-up order had been made against the company, previously to which proceedings had been taken by a creditor of the company in the Lord Mayor's Court, the result of which was, that by a certain day the creditor would be able to seize the funds of the company in the hands of their bankers. The directors thereupon filed a bill, and obtained an ex parte injunction restraining the creditor from proceeding. On a motion to dissolve this injunction, the Court was of opinion, that, by the 58th clause, it was precluded from interfering generally against the rights of creditors before the appointment of an official manager, and that there was nothing in the special circumstance of the proceedings being in the Lord Mayor's Court which entitled it to interfere. It would seem, from the language of the Vice-Chancellor, that his Honor meant to intimate, that, after the appointment of a manager, it would be different. The clause which affects the latter question is the 73rd, but by that clause it does not seem that the act intends to limit the effect of the 58th, beyond this, that a creditor shall not proceed in any action until he shall have proved his debt before the Master, as prescribed by the act; but, having once proved his debt, there seems nothing in the act to prevent him from commencing or proceeding in any action. And if we recollect that the act has been repeatedly held to be intended to regulate the liabilities as between contributories, not to determine anything as between the company, or shareholders, and third parties, it seems to follow that the Court should not interfere to prevent creditors pursuing such remedies as they might have pursued before the act, except in so far as the act itself prescribes or permits interference. Now, the 73rd section, only forbidding a creditor to proceed at law until he has proved his debt before the Master, by implication, intends him to be at liberty to use any of his remedies after he shall have proved before the Master. Moreover, the 73rd section points out a specific remedy against the creditor, by giving power to the judge of the court where the action is commenced, not to the Court of Chancery, to stay proceedings; and though, unquestionably, such a special remedy does not oust the general jurisdiction of Chancery, yet it may be anticipated that the Court of Chancery would not stay an action by injunction, under the 73rd section of the Winding-up Act, unless it appeared that the court of law either would not or could not interfere, so as to do complete justice. The latter part of the 16th section of the Winding-up Amendment Act, 1849, seems intended to have some bearing on this question; but it is so obscurely worded, that we confess ourselves unable to understand what it does mean.

Practice.]—Where a party was put on the list of contributories, and duly received notice to attend on settling the list, but did not, and allowed the time for appealing, under the 78th section, to pass, although he was not allowed strictly to appeal, he was permitted to read evidence to explain why he had not attended; and such evidence being satisfactory, he was allowed to go in before the Master to dispute his liability to be on the list. (Ex parte Ashburner, re The Liverpool and Manchester Saw-mills and Timber Company, 13 Jur. part 1, p. 691; Ex parte Holt, re the same Company).

Power of Master to order Delivery of Papers to the Official Manager.]—In The Oxford and Worcester Extension and Chester Junction Railway, &c. Company (13 Jur., part 1, p. 691), it was contended, that the power of the Master extends, under the 28th and 66th sections, to ordering the solicitor of a company to deliver up papers in his hands to the official manager although he claims a lien upon them for a bill of costs not disputed; but the Court held, that there was nothing in the act to deprive the solicitors of their lien.

* The Editor, in inserting this and the two preceding papers on this subject, does not, of course, profess to give more to the readers of THE JURIST than a classification of the cases, and a short statement of their results. But this, he believes, will be found convenient to those whose practice leads them into the Master's office under the Winding-up Act.

As to Trustees being Contributories.]—A widow was entitled, as residuary legatee of a will of which she was executrix, to shares in a banking company. She received the dividends for several years by her agent, Hall. She re-married, but previously dealt with her shares as in her own right, by assigning them to Hall, as a trustee for her on the trusts of her marriage settlement. Notice of the trust-deed was given to the bank. The bank never returned Hall as registered owner to the Stamp-office; and Hall continued to receive the dividends, as agent for the widow, by the widow's name; and, in fact, did not comply with the requirements of the company's deed. The question was, whether Hall was a contributory; and it was held, that he was, but liable only from the date of the assignment to him. (Ex parte Hall, re The North of England Joint-stock Banking Company, 13 Jur., part 1, p. 691).

What Companies are within the Statute.]—Where a company had been dissolved, and its business transferred to another company, but there remained a sum of money in the hands of trustees for the benefit of the members of the dissolved company, it was held clearly within the act. (In re The London and Westminstre Mutual Life Assurance Company, 13 Jur., part 1, p. 721).

Generally what constitutes Parties Contributories.]—The case of Ex parte Davidson, re The Marylebone Joint-stock Banking Company, (13 Jur., part 1, p. 722), decides, that, if the managers of a company use the name of a party as that of a shareholder for the proved or implied purpose of holding out his accession as an inducement to the public to join the company, and he permits his name so to be used, under an indemnity from the managers of the company, but without the knowledge of the general shareholders, he is liable as a contributory, although he has never acted as a shareholder, either by paying calls, or receiving dividends, or otherwise. The ground of the decision is the participation in, or active sanction of, the intention to deceive; and it appears from the judgment, that, in such a case, it is not necessary to shew that any persons have been actually deceived; the intention to deceive, and the fact proved or assumed that persons became shareholders after the transaction, being sufficient.

On this subject it is material to observe, that a person may be a contributory under the Winding-up Act, although he may be, as between himself and certain members of the company, or as between himself and creditors of the company suing him separately, entitled to say he is not liable. This distinction is alluded to by Knight Bruce, V. C., in Ex parte Parbury, re The Direct London and Exeter Railway Company, (13 Jur., part 1, 725), and would seem proper to be kept in view in reference to the case of Ex parte Sharpus, re The Universal Salvage Company, (13 Jur., part 1, 723). In the case last mentioned, Mr. Sharpus applied for and had allotted to him shares in the company, on which he paid the deposit, and received the scrip certificates, but he did nothing more. The certificates referred to certain conditions, some of the most material of which, particularly the conditions that a certain number of shares should be allotted, and a certain capital should be subscribed, were not fulfilled. The question was, whether Sharpus was a contributor or not. The Master referred to the cases of Walstab v. Spottiswoode (15 Mee. & W. 501) and Wontner v. Shairp (11 Jur., part 1, 373), and earlier cases, as shewing, that, as against creditors, or as between subscribers, a party, situated as Sharpus was, might have said that the company, in respect of which he was sued, was not the company which he agreed to join and become a member of; but, on appeal, Knight Bruce, V. C., reversed the decision. His Honor did not, in that case, give his reasons; at least, none are reported. But in the other case mentioned, (Ex parte Parbury), which contained much the same elements, viz. an allotment of shares upon conditions which were never fulfilled, his Honor held the allottee a contributory, carefully avoiding to decide whether he had or had not been deceived by certain members of the company, or whether he had not a remedy against those who deceived him. The result of these cases, and of the case of Ex parte Morgan, referred to in the judgment in Ex parte Parbury, is, we apprehend, that, in determining whether a party is a contributory, the Court inquires whether a contract exists between the alleged contributory and other persons, under which he may be co-liable with any of such persons; and, if it finds that there is such a contract, holds him a contributory, although there may be an equity between him individually and some of the parties to the contract, and, perhaps, (though this is not so clearly involved in the decision), between him and the public, entitling him to say, that, as between him and such persons, the contract cannot be enforced.

Where, by the deed of settlement of a company, no power is reserved to the company to buy the shares of shareholders, such a sale to the company is invalid; and as a consequence, if a shareholder transfers his shares to another person, with notice that that person only purchased for the company, (the company having no power so to purchase), and then dies, the executors of the deceased shareholder, and not the nominal purchaser, will be placed on the list of contributories. (Ex parte Morgan, re The Vale of Neath Brewery, 1 Hall & T. 320, and Ex parte Richmond's Executors, re The Vale of Neath Brewery, 13 Jur., part 1, p. 727).

Where a person agreed to purchase the shares of another in a company, and paid for them, and the vendors gave the proper notice to the company, who assented to the transfer, and made out new certificates in the name of the purchaser, but no legal transfer was ever executed, and the purchaser never did anything beyond the contract and payment, he was held, nevertheless, a contributory, but liable only from the day of his contract. (Ex parte Sanderson, re The North of England Joint-stock Banking Company, 13 Jur., part 1, p. 740).

CAP. XXVI.

An Act for granting Relief against Defects in Leases made under Powers of Leasing, in certain Cases.

[26th June, 1849.]

Sect. 1. Interpretation of Terms.
2. Leases invalid, owing to Deviation from Terms of the Power, to be deemed Contracts in Equity for such Leases as might have been granted under the Power. Proviso where the Grantor or Reversioner is willing to confirm.
3. Acceptance of Rent to be deemed a Confirmation.
4. Leases invalid at the granting thereof may become valid, if the Grantor continue in the Ownership until the Time when he might lawfully grant such a Lease.
5. What shall be deemed an intended Exercise of a Power.
6. Saving the Rights of the Lessees under Covenants for Title and for quiet Enjoyment, and the Lessor's Right of Re-entry for Breach of Covenant, &c.
7. Act not to extend to certain Leases. Pending Suits not to be prejudiced.
8. Act not to extend to Scotland.
9. Act may be amended &c.

Whereas, through mistake or inadvertence on the part of persons granting leases, and through ignorance on the part of lessees of the titles of persons from whom leases are accepted, leases granted by persons having valid powers of leasing are frequently invalid, as against the successors in estate of such persons, by reason of the non-observance or omission of some condition or restriction, or by reason of some other deviation from the terms of such powers: and whereas leases granted in the intended exercise of such powers are sometimes invalid, as against the successors in estate of the persons granting the same, by reason that, at the time of granting the same, the person granting the lease could not lawfully grant such lease, although at a subsequent time, and during the continuance of his estate in the hereditaments comprised in such lease, he might have granted the same in the lawful exercise of such power: and whereas it is expedient that provision should be made for granting relief in the cases aforesaid, in manner after mentioned: be it enacted, &c., that, in construing this act, words importing the singular number shall include the plural number, and words importing the plural number shall include the singular number, and words importing males shall extend to females, and the word "person" shall include corporations aggregate or sole, unless, in any of the cases aforesaid, there be something in the context repugnant to such construction.

2. That where, in the intended exercise of any such power of leasing as aforesaid, whether derived under an act of Parliament or under any instrument lawfully creating such power, a lease has been or shall hereafter be granted, which is, by reason of the non-observance or omission of some condition or restriction, or by reason of any other deviation from the terms of such power, invalid as against the person entitled, after the determination of the interest of the person granting such lease, to the reversion, or against other the person who, subject to any lease lawfully granted under such power, would have been entitled to the hereditaments comprised in such lease, in case the same have been made bonâ fide, and the lessee named therein, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, (as the case may require), have entered thereunder, shall be considered in equity as a contract for a grant, at the request of the lessee, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, (as the case may require), of a valid lease under such power, to the like purport and effect as such invalid lease as aforesaid, save so far as any variation may be necessary in order to comply with the terms of such power; and all persons who would have been bound by a lease lawfully granted under such power shall be bound in equity by such contract: provided always, that no lessee under any such invalid lease as aforesaid, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, shall be entitled, by virtue of any such equitable contract as aforesaid, to obtain any variation of such lease, where the persons who would have been bound by such contract are willing to confirm such lease without variation.

3. That the acceptance of rent under any such invalid lease as aforesaid shall, as against the person so accepting the same, be deemed a confirmation of such lease.

4. That where a lease, granted in the intended exercise of any such power of leasing as aforesaid, is invalid by reason, that, at the time of the granting thereof, the person granting the same could not lawfully grant such lease, but the estate of such person in the hereditaments comprised in such lease shall have continued after the time when such or the like lease might have been granted by him in the lawful exercise of such power, then and in every such case such lease shall take effect, and be as valid as if the same had been granted at such last-mentioned time, and all the provisions herein contained shall apply to every such lease.

5. That when a valid power of leasing is vested in or may be exercised by a person granting a lease, and such lease (by reason of the determination of the estate or interest of such person or otherwise) cannot have effect and continuance according to the terms thereof, independently of such power, such lease shall, for the purposes of this act, be deemed to be granted in the intended exercise of such power, although such power be not referred to in such lease.

6. Provided always, and be it enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to prejudice or take away any right of action or other right or remedy to which, but for the passing of this act, the lessee named in any such lease as aforesaid, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, would or might have been entitled, under or by virtue of any covenant for title or quiet enjoyment contained in such lease on the part of the person granting the same, or to prejudice or take away any right of re-entry or other right or remedy to which, but for the passing of this act, the person granting such lease, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, or other the person for the time being entitled to the reversion expectant on the determination of such lease, would or might have been entitled, for or by reason of any breach of the covenants, conditions, or provisoes contained in such lease, and on the part of the lessee, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, to be observed and performed.

7. That this act shall not extend to any lease by an ecclesiastical corporation or spiritual person, or to any lease of the possessions of any college, hospital, or charitable foundation, or to any lease where, before the passing of this act, the hereditaments comprised in such lease have been surrendered or relinquished, or recovered adversely by reason of the invalidity thereof, or there has been any judgment or decree in any action or suit concerning the validity of such lease, and shall not prejudice or affect any action or suit already commenced and now pending in any court of law or equity, but every such action and suit may be proceeded with, and such relief had therein, as if this act had not passed.

8. That this act shall not extend to Scotland.

9. That this act may be amended or repealed by any act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

17. Levying and Recovery of Fines, Issues, and Amerciaments.
18. Enforcing Orders of Sessions.
19. Not to extend to Scotland or Ireland.
20. Commencement of Act.
21. Act may be amended, &c.

Whereas, in cases of appeal to courts of general or quarter sessions of the peace, it is expedient that the law should be more uniform: be it therefore enacted, &c., that in every case of appeal (except as hereinafter mentioned) to any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace fourteen clear days' notice of appeal at least shall be given, and such shall be sufficient notice, any act or acts, or any rule or practice of any court or courts, to the contrary notwithstanding; and such notice of appeal shall be in writing, signed by the person or persons giving the same, or by his, her, or their attorney on his, her, or their behalf, and the grounds of appeal shall be specified in every such notice: provided always, that it shall not be lawful for the appellant or appellants, on the trial of any such appeal, to go into or give evidence of any other ground of appeal besides those set forth in such notice.

2. That none of the provisions hereinbefore contained relating to notices of appeal shall be construed to affect or alter the law as to notice of appeal against a summary conviction, or against an order of removal, or against an order under any statute relating to pauper lunatics, or against an order in bastardy, or against any proceeding under or by virtue of any of the statutes relating to her Majesty's revenue of excise or customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office, but the law with regard to notices of all such appeals shall be deemed and taken to be the same as if the provisions hereinbefore contained had not been enacted.

3. And whereas a statement of the grounds of appeal, when required by this or any other statute, is for the purpose of enabling the party receiving it to inquire into the subject of such statement, and, if need be, to prepare for trial: be it therefore enacted, that upon the hearing of any appeal to any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace no objection on account of any defect in the form of setting forth any ground of appeal shall be allowed, and no objection to the reception of legal evidence offered in support of any ground of appeal shall prevail, unless the court shall be of opinion that such ground of appeal is so imperfectly or incorrectly set forth as to be insufficient to enable the party receiving the same to inquire into the subject of such statement, and to prepare for trial: provided always, that in all cases where the court shall be of opinion that any objection to any ground of appeal, or to the reception of evidence in support thereof, ought to prevail, it shall be lawful for such court, if it shall so think fit, to cause any such ground of appeal to be forthwith amended by some officer of the court, or otherwise, on such terms as to payment of costs to the other party, or postponing the trial to another day in the same sessions or to the next subsequent sessions, or both payment of costs and postponement, as to such court shall appear just and reasonable.

4. That if in any notice of appeal the appellant or appellants shall have included any ground or grounds of appeal which shall in the opinion of the court determining the appeal be frivolous or vexatious, such appellant or appellants shall be liable, if the court shall so think fit, to pay the whole or any part of the costs incurred by the respondent or respondents in disputing any such ground or grounds of appeal, such costs to be recoverable in the manner hereinafter directed as to the other costs incurred by reason of such appeal.

5. That, upon any appeal to any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, the court before whom the same shall be brought may, if it think fit, order and direct the party or parties against whom the same shall be decided to pay to the other party or parties such costs and charges as may to such court appear just and reasonable, such costs to be recoverable in the manner provided for the recovery of costs upon an appeal against an order or conviction by an act passed in the 11 & 12 Vict. [c. 43], intituled "An Act to facilitate the Performance of the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions within England and Wales, with respect to summary Convictions and Orders."

6. And for the more effectual prevention of frivolous appeals, be it enacted, that any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, upon proof of notice of any appeal to the same court having been given to the party or parties entitled to receive the same, though such appeal was not afterwards prosecuted or entered, may, if it so think fit, at the same sessions for which such notice was given, order to the party or parties receiving the same such costs and charges as by the said court shall be thought reasonable and just to be paid by the party or parties giving such notice, such costs to be recoverable in the manner last aforesaid.

7. And whereas in many cases, where justices of the peace are by law empowered to make orders or to give judgments great expense and frequent failures of justice have been occasioned by reason that such orders or judgments have, on appeal to the general or quarter sessions of the peace, or on removal by certiorari into the Court of Queen's Bench, been quashed or set aside upon exceptions or objections to the form of the order or judgment, irrespective of the truth and merits of the matters in question: for remedy thereof be it enacted, that if, upon the trial of any appeal to any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace against any order or judgment made or given by any justice or justices of the peace, or if, upon the return to any writ of certiorari, any objection shall be made on account of any omission or mistake in the drawing up of such order or judgment, and it shall be shewn, to the satisfaction of the court, that sufficient grounds were in proof before the justice or justices making such order or giving such judgment to have authorised the drawing up thereof, free from the said omission or mistake, it shall be lawful for the court, upon such terms, as to payment of costs, as it shall think fit, to amend such order or judgment, and to adjudicate thereupon, as if no such omission or mistake had existed: provided always, that no objection on account of any omission or mistake in any such order or judgment brought up upon a return to a writ of certiorari shall be allowed, unless such omission or mistake shall have been specified in the rule for issuing such certiorari.

8. And whereas the statutes giving a right of appeal against orders or summary convictions frequently require a recognisance or recognisances to be entered into as a condition of such appeal, and appellants are liable to be prevented from trying their appeals upon the merits in consequence of imperfections in the taking of such recognisances: be it enacted, that where any recognisance or recognisances which shall have been entered into within the time by law required, before any justice or justices, for the purpose of complying with any such condition of appeal, shall appear to the court before which such appeal is brought to have been insufficiently entered into, or to be otherwise defective or invalid, it shall be lawful for such court, if it shall so think fit, to permit the substitution of a new and sufficient recognisance, or new and sufficient recognisances, to be entered into before such court, in the place of such insufficient, defective, or invalid recognisance or recognisances, and for that purpose to allow such time, and make such examination, and impose such terms, as to payment of costs, to the respondent or respondents, as to such court shall appear just and reasonable; and such substituted recognisance or recognisances shall be as valid and effectual, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been duly entered into at any earlier time or times, as required by any statute or statutes for that purpose.

9. That the decisions of the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace upon the hearing of any appeal, as to the sufficiency of the statement of any ground or grounds of appeal, and as to the amending or refusing to amend any order or judgment of a justice or justices appealed against, or the statement of any ground or grounds of appeal, and as to the substitution of any new recognisance or recognisances as aforesaid, shall be final, and shall not be liable to be reviewed in any court, by means of a writ of certiorari or mandamus, or otherwise.

10. That every court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, on the trial of any offence within its jurisdiction, whenever any variance or variances shall appear between any matter in writing or in print produced in evidence and the recital or setting forth thereof in the indictment, shall have the same power in all respects to cause the indictment to be amended which is given to courts of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery with regard to offences tried before such last-mentioned courts by virtue of an act of the 11 & 12 Vict. [c. 46], intituled "An Act for the Removal of Defects in the Administration of Criminal Justice;" and after such amendment the trial shall proceed in the same manner in all respects, both with regard to the liability of witnesses to be indicted for perjury and otherwise, as if no such variance or variances had appeared.

11. That at any time after notice given of appeal to any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace against any judgment, order, rate, or other matter, (except an order in bastardy, or a proceeding under or by virtue of any of the statutes relating to her Majesty's revenue of excise or customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office), for which the remedy is by such appeal, it shall be lawful for the parties, by consent, and by order of any judge of one of the superior courts of common law at Westminster, to state the facts of the case in the form of a special case for the opinion of such superior court, and to agree that a judgment in conformity with the decision of such court, and for such costs as such court shall adjudge, may be entered on motion by either party at the sessions next or next but one after such decision shall have been given; and such judgment shall and may be entered accordingly, and shall be of the same effect in all respects as if the same had been given by the court of general or quarter sessions upon an appeal duly entered and continued.

12. And whereas by a statute passed in the 9 & 10 Will. 3, [c. 15], intituled "An Act for determining Differences by Arbitration," provision was made for rendering more effectual the awards of arbitrators in the case of controversies and disputes for which there is no other remedy but by personal action or by suit in equity: and whereas it is expedient in like manner to facilitate and render more effectual references to arbitration of controversies and disputes for which the remedy is by appeal to a court of general or quarter sessions of the peace: be it enacted, that at any time after notice given of appeal to any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace against any order, rate, or other matter, (except a summary conviction, or an order in bastardy, or any proceeding under or by virtue of any of the statutes relating to her Majesty's revenue of excise or customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office), for which the remedy is by such appeal, it shall be lawful for the parties, by themselves or their attornies, and by order of a judge of her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, to submit the matter or matters of such appeal to the award or umpirage of any person or persons, and to agree that such submission should be made a rule of the said Court of Queen's Bench, and to insert such agreement in their submission or the condition of the bond or promise whereby they oblige themselves respectively to submit to the award or umpirage of such person or persons; and thereupon such and the like proceedings in all respects shall and may be taken with regard to submissions under this act, and to enforcing awards or umpirages thereupon, and to setting aside the same, as are authorised by the said act of King William III with regard to the cases therein provided for; and every award or umpirage duly made under this act shall be as binding and effectual to all intents as if the same had been a regular judgment of the said court of general or quarter sessions, and shall and may, on the application of either party, be inrolled among the records of the said court of sessions.

13. That it shall be lawful for any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace before which any appeal (except against a summary conviction, or an order in bastardy, or any proceeding under or by virtue of any of the statutes relating to her Majesty's revenue of excise or customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office) shall be brought, to order, with consent of the parties or their attornies, that the matter or matters of such appeal be referred to arbitration to such person or persons and in such manner and on such terms as the said court shall think reasonable and proper; and such order may be made a rule of the Court of Queen's Bench, on the application of either party; and the award of the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpirage of the umpire, may, on motion by either party at the sessions next or next but one after such award or umpirage shall have been finally made and published, or after the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench on any motion for setting aside the same, be entered as the judgment of the court of general or quarter sessions in the appeal, and shall be as binding and effectual to all intents as if given by the said court: provided always, that the Court of Queen's Bench may, if it think fit, on application within the term next after the making and publication of such award or umpirage, either refer the case back again to the same arbitrator, arbitrators, or umpire, or wholly set aside the award or umpirage already made, and may in the latter event order the court of general or quarter sessions to enter continuances and hear the appeal.

14. That if, upon any reference to arbitration under this act, it shall be made to appear to the Court of Queen's Bench that, either from the death of the arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire, or from any other cause, it has become impossible that an award or umpirage can be made, it shall be lawful for the said court to order the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace to enter continuances and hear the appeal.

15. That the several provisions relating to arbitrations contained in an act of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, [c. 42], intituled "An Act for the further Amendment of the Law and the better Advancement of Justice," shall be deemed and taken to be applicable to arbitrations under this act; and in every such arbitration the arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire shall have the same powers of amendment which the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace would have had on the trial of the appeal.

16. That no recognisance entered into pursuant to any statute or statutes for the prosecution and trial of any appeal shall be deemed to be forfeited by such agreement as aforesaid for the statement of a special case without previously going to the court of general or quarter sessions, or by any submission to arbitration under the provisions of this act.

17. And whereas by an act passed in the 3 Geo. 4, [c. 46], intituled "An Act for the more speedy Return and levying of Fines, Penalties, and Forfeitures and Recognisances estreated," provision is made for authorising the levying and recovery of fines, issues, amerciaments, and forfeited recognisances set, imposed, lost, or forfeited by or before any justice or justices of the peace in England: and whereas it is expedient that the subsequent proceedings in such cases should be uniform: be it enacted, that the proceedings subsequent to such authority given for so levying and recovering as aforesaid shall and may be the same in all respects, in the case of such fines, issues, and amerciaments, as are by the said act provided, permitted, and required in the case of such forfeited recognisances.

18. That in all cases where any order shall be made by any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace it shall be lawful for the Court of Queen's Bench, or for any judge of that court at Chambers, either in term or vacation, upon the application of any person entitled to enforce such order, and upon the production of a copy of such order under the hand of the clerk of the peace or his deputy, and upon proof of refusal or neglect to obey such order, to order and direct such order of the court of general or quarter sessions to be removed into the said Court of Queen's Bench, and thereupon such order shall be of the same force and effect, and may be enforced in the same manner, as a rule made by the said Court of Queen's Bench; and all the reasonable costs and charges attendant upon such application and removal shall be recoverable in like manner as if the same were part of such order.

19. That nothing in this act contained shall extend to Scotland or Ireland.

20. That this act shall come into operation on the 1st day of November, 1849.

21. That this act may be amended or repealed by any act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 22, 1849.

The stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, known and to be cited as "The Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849," comes into operation on the 11th of next month. It is not only a codification of the law relating to bankruptcy, which, scattered through many statutes, was in existence at the time of its enactment, but it also introduces some important alterations.

The following may be enumerated as the principal changes which will be effected by it:—The fiat is abolished, and in its place a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy is substituted, (sect. 4). Such petition is to be filed in the Bankruptcy Courts, (sect. 90), in the commissioners of which a primary jurisdiction is vested, while there is to be only an appellate jurisdiction in the Vice-Chancellor and Lord Chancellor, (sect. 12). Stamps are to be imposed on documents used in bankruptcy proceedings, in lieu of direct payment by fees, (sect. 48). Execution against the goods and chattels of the bankrupt, so as to be protected, must be by seizure and sale, (as well as bonâ fide, before filing of petition, and without notice of prior act of bankruptcy); while, as against his lands, it is sufficient if executed by seizure only, (sect. 133). Leave of the Court is required for the assignees to commence or defend an action at law, and to defend a suit in equity, as well as to commence such suit, (sect. 153). Outstanding debts of the bankrupt may, after a certain time, be sold by the assignees, under the order of the Court, (sect. 188). A bankrupt is not to be liable upon any promise to pay a debt from which he has been discharged by his certificate, (sect. 204). Private arrangements between debtors and creditors may be carried out under the superintendence and control of the Court, (sects. 211—223). A clear distinction is made between the honest and the fraudulent debtor, by enabling an insolvent trader, under certain circumstances, to wind up his affairs without the stigma of bankruptcy, and by empowering the Court to grant either a first class certificate, which declares the trader's inability to pay his debts to have arisen from misfortune only; or a second class, in which it is declared to have arisen partly from misfortune; or a third class, in which it is declared not to have arisen from misfortune, (Ib., sect. 198, and Schedule (Z)). Increased facilities are given for the service of a notice of debt whereon to found an act of bankruptcy, (sect. 78). The time for appearance of a debtor summoned before the Court is reduced from fourteen days to seven, (sect. 80). Voluntary petitions are restricted, by requiring debtors applying for them to shew that they are able to pay 5*s.* in the pound, (sect. 93). Judges' orders, as well as warrants of attorney and cognovits, are to be filed, (sect. 137); and in certain cases are to be wholly void, (sect. 135). The assignees and the creditors who have proved are to be deemed judgment creditors for the whole amount of proof and the separate proofs respectively; and the Court, having refused further protection to the bankrupt, or having refused or suspended his certificate, may grant a certificate of such proofs, upon which a ca. sa. may be issued either by the assignees or any of such creditors, and the bankrupt, if arrested thereon, cannot be discharged under a year, except by order of the Court, (sects. 257—259). The number of London commissioners is to be reduced from six to four, and the Courts are to sit daily throughout the year (except on certain named days) for the despatch of business, (sects. 7, 10).

Such appear to be the principal new provisions introduced by this statute, which are intended to facilitate an honest surrender of the property of insolvent debtors for equal distribution among their creditors, to increase the control of creditors over the persons and property of their debtors, and to add to the general efficiency of Courts of Bankruptcy. They appear to have given satisfaction to the trading community, as represented by the committee appointed to promote the amendment of the bankrupt law. They conclude their last report upon the subject by expressing an opinion, that, "although the full benefit of this act cannot be immediately realised, yet, as soon as it comes into operation, the Court of Bankruptcy will afford the quickest, cheapest, and most efficient means of winding up estates, especially when fraud is believed to exist, or when the assent of three-fifths of the creditors cannot be obtained to the offer made by the debtor; but when the assent of three-fifths of the creditors can be obtained, then the facilities for the settlement of estates under the control of the Court, but without bankruptcy, will be equally beneficial to the creditor as to the debtor: so that the Court will no longer be used as hitherto by the debtor, to compel his creditors to accept any offer he pleases to make, however fraudulent it may be, but will henceforth be resorted to by the unfortunate but honest debtor, as a court in which he can obtain relief, and secure the equal distribution of his assets among his creditors; satisfied, that, whatever may be the pecuniary result, he will, if he act honestly, have public testimony borne thereto by the Court; and will not, as heretofore, be dismissed on equal terms with the most fraudulent bankrupt."

JURISDICTION OF COUNTY COURTS TO ORDER A NEW TRIAL.

By the 118th section of the County Courts Act (the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95) it is enacted, "that if any claim shall be made to or in respect of any goods or chattels taken in execution under the process of any court holden under this act, or in respect of the proceeds or value thereof, by any landlord for rent, or by any person not being the party against whom such process has issued, it shall be lawful for the clerk of the court, upon application of the officer charged with the execution of such process, as well before as after any action brought against such officer, to issue a summons calling before the said court as well the party issuing such process as the party making such claim, and thereupon any action which shall have been brought in any of her Majesty's superior courts of record, or in any local or inferior court, in respect of such claim, shall be stayed, and the court in which such action shall have been brought, or any judge thereof, on proof of the issue of such summons, and that the goods and chattels were so taken in execution, may order the party bringing such action to pay the costs of all proceedings had upon such action after the issue of such summons out of the county court; and the judge of the county court shall adjudicate upon such claim, and make such order between the parties in respect thereof, and of the costs of the proceedings, as to him shall seem fit, and such order shall be enforced in like manner as any order made in any suit brought in such court."

And by the 89th section it is enacted, "that every order and judgment of any court holden under this act, except as herein provided, shall be final and conclusive between the parties; but the judge shall have power to nonsuit the plaintiff in every case in which satisfactory proof shall not be given to him entitling either the plaintiff or defendant to the judgment of the court, and shall also in every case whatever have the power, if he shall think fit, to order a new trial to be had upon such terms as he shall think reasonable, and in the mean time to stay the proceedings."

Now, we understand that it has been held, in a county court, that the court has no jurisdiction, under the 89th section, to grant a rehearing of a case heard upon an interpleader summons under the 118th. The circumstances of the case had in them nothing very peculiar, as it appears to us; however, they may be shortly stated as follows:—

An insolvent trader, at a meeting of his creditors, authorised three of them to sell his effects, being his stock-in-trade, and divide the money amongst his creditors, equally, in proportion to their respective debts. The authority was verbal only; but the insolvent left his house and shop, and gave possession thereof to the parties authorised to sell the effects. They advertised them for sale in the public newspapers, and A. agreed to purchase them by private sale. For the purchase-money he gave a joint and several promissory note, of himself and an approved surety, payable four months after the date. Possession of the effects was given to A.; he hired the house and shop, was rated, and carried on there his trade. Shortly afterwards one of the creditors sued the insolvent in the county court, and obtained execution, and the bailiff seized some of the effects purchased by A., who thereupon gave notice to the bailiff of his claim, and the question was brought before the Court under the 118th section of the act. Evidence of the facts above mentioned was given. A. had not obtained a legal receipt for his payment, and therefore he procured, for the trial, a receipt on stamp, signed by the three persons authorised to sell the effects, and this receipt was also produced in evidence. The bill or note was not produced, but one of the witnesses said it was in his possession at home. On this evidence, the judge thought the transaction suspicious, and held that the sale to A. was not bonâ fide. On the following court-day, A. applied for a rehearing of the case, under the 89th section of the act; but the application was refused, on the ground of the Court having no jurisdiction to grant a rehearing of an interpleader summons.

On the merits of the question, whether the evidence shewed the sale to be bonâ fide or not, we do not purpose here to comment; but the question is, whether the ruling of the Court as to the construction of the 89th and 118th sections of the act was not altogether incorrect.

No words can be larger than those of the 89th section. "Every order and judgment," says the first part, "shall be final," except as excepted. There is nothing to shew that the word "order," or "judgment," refers to any particular kind of proceeding; but whatever order or judgment the Court has jurisdiction to make, shall be final, subject to the exception; and the exception is, that in every case whatever the judge may order a new trial. Now, unless anything turn on the word "trial," as not applicable to the proceedings under the 118th section, it is clear that the Court must have power to order a new trial under that section, as well as in any other case, since the decision pronounced under it, by the Court, is certainly either a judgment or an order. Indeed, the judge is expressly required by that section to make an order.

The clause directs that the judge shall adjudicate upon the claim made, and make such order between the parties in respect thereof, &c., as to him shall seem fit. If the word "trial" could have any peculiar technical meaning under the act, possibly it might be said, such a hearing is not a trial, as by a trial is generally understood a jury trial. But, as the causes under the act are not all jury causes, that cannot be the sense of the word "trial" under the act. In Chancery a cause is more correctly said to be heard than to be tried; but there is no substantial distinction; and wherever the facts and law of a case are adjudicated upon, the cause must be said to have been tried. If it be said that the proceedings under the 118th section are not a cause, the answer is, that the 89th section does not speak of a cause; it speaks of any order or judgment, and it explains afterwards in reference to what proceedings the words are used, by saying, that in every case—not in every cause, but in every case, on which the judge has power to adjudicate, he may order a new trial. The 74th clause, it is true, does use the word "try" in reference, apparently, to an ordinary cause between demandant and defendant; but that clause is merely directory as to the mode of proceeding in such a cause, and does not appear intended to determine any question of jurisdiction.

We are, we confess, on the whole, much surprised at the county court decision that has been reported to us, and have very little doubt that it is quite wrong.

19. Act may be amended &c.

Whereas by an act passed in the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95], intituled "An Act for the more easy Recovery of Small Debts and Demands in England," power is given to the judge in the cases therein mentioned to order that a party summoned in respect of an unsatisfied judgment or order, or a defendant in any suit, may be committed to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, district, or place in which such party or defendant is resident, or to any prison which should be provided as the prison of the court, for any period not exceeding forty days: and whereas it is inexpedient that persons should be committed under the said act to houses of correction: be it therefore enacted, &c., that from and after the 31st day of August, 1849, so much of the said act as authorises any judge to order any such party or defendant to be committed as hereinbefore mentioned shall be repealed; and it shall be lawful for any judge who would have been authorised under the said act to order any party or defendant to be committed as aforesaid for any such period as aforesaid, to order such party or defendant to be committed for the like period to the common gaol wherein the debtors under judgment and in execution of the superior courts of justice may be confined for the county, city, borough, or place in which such party or defendant is resident, or to any other gaol or debtors prison for the same county, city, borough, or place which shall, by any declaration of one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, be allowed as a place of imprisonment for persons committed under the said act, so long as such declaration shall remain in force and unrevoked, or to any prison which has been or shall be provided as in the said act mentioned as the prison of the court by the judge of which such order may be made; and all the provisions of the said act applicable to and consequent upon the order for commitment under the power hereinbefore repealed, and to the prisons to which persons might be committed under such order, shall apply to and be construed with reference to any order made under the power hereinbefore contained, and the prisons to which persons may be committed under such order.

2. And whereas by the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] it was enacted, that if any person should wilfully insult the judge, or any juror, or any bailiff, clerk, or officer of the court for the time being, during his sitting or attendance in court, or in going to or returning from the court, or should wilfully interrupt the proceedings of the court, or otherwise misbehave in court, the judge should be empowered, if he should think fit, by a warrant under his hand, and sealed with the seal of the court, to commit any such offender to any prison to which he had power to commit offenders under the said act for any time not exceeding seven days, or to impose upon any such offender a fine not exceeding 5*l.* for every such offence, and in default of payment thereof to commit the offender to any such prison as aforesaid for any time not exceeding seven days, unless the said fine were sooner paid: be it enacted, that from and after the 31st day of August, 1849, so much of the last-recited enactment as authorises the judge to commit any such offender to any such prison as therein mentioned shall be repealed, and in any case in which any judge would under such enactment have been authorised to commit any such offender to any such prison as therein mentioned for such period as therein mentioned, such judge shall be empowered, if he think fit, by warrant, as therein mentioned, to commit such offender for the like period to any common gaol wherein the debtors under judgment and in execution of the superior courts of justice may be confined for any county, city, borough, or place wholly or in part within any district of such judge, or to any other gaol or debtors prison for any such county, city, borough, or place which shall by declaration as aforesaid be allowed as a place of imprisonment for persons committed under the said act so long as such declaration shall remain in force and unrevoked or to any prison which has been or may be provided, as in the said act mentioned, as the prison of the court by the judge of which such offender shall be committed.

3. Provided always, and be it enacted, that where, by reason of any common gaol wherein debtors under judgment and in execution of the superior courts of justice may be confined being situated at an inconvenient distance, or of the crowded state of any such gaol, or otherwise, it shall appear to one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State expedient so to do it shall be lawful for such Secretary of State, by order under his hand, to authorise to be used for the purposes of commitment under the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] any house of correction or common gaol in which such debtors as aforesaid may not be confined, (to be mentioned in such order), and to make orders for altering the regulations of such house of correction or gaol as last aforesaid, so far as respects the treatment of persons to be committed under this act, in order that such persons may be treated as nearly as may be in like manner as if they had been committed to a gaol in which such debtors as aforesaid may be confined, notwithstanding the regulations in force in such house of correction or gaol to which such person may be committed; and every such order may from time to time be revoked or varied by such Secretary of State as occasion may require.

4. Provided also, and be it enacted, that where, under the provisions hereinbefore contained, persons might be committed to any gaol or prison not now used for the purposes of the said act which by reason of the tenure of any liberty or franchise or otherwise, is maintained at the private charges of the lord of such liberty or franchise, or of any other private person, such gaol or prison shall not be used for the purposes of commitments under the said act until such lord or person as aforesaid shall have given his consent in writing to such gaol or prison being so used.

5. And whereas by the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] it was enacted, "that it should be lawful for any court holden under that act, with the approval of one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, to use as a prison for the purposes of that act any prison then belonging to any court holden under any of the acts cited in the Schedules (A.) and (B.) to that act, in all cases where it should appear to the said Secretary of State that the common gaol or house of correction of the county, district, or place in which the court was established was inconveniently situated, or was not applicable for the use of the said courts; and whenever any such prison should be so allowed to be used, it should be deemed one of the common gaols of the county for which it should be used, as if it had been provided after presentment of the insufficiency of one common gaol for such county under the provisions of an act passed in the 5 & 6 Vict. [c. 98], intituled 'An Act to amend the Laws concerning Prisons:'" and whereas a prison used under the said recited enactment for a division of a county may be deemed a gaol for the county at large: be it declared and enacted, that where a prison allowed to be used with the approval of such Secretary of State shall be so used for any riding, parts, or division of a county having a distinct commission of the peace, or a distinct rate in the nature of a county-rate applicable to the maintenance of a prison for such riding, parts, or division, (and not for the county at large), such prison shall be deemed one of the common gaols for the riding, parts, or division for which it is so used, (and not for the county at large), as if it had been provided after presentment of the insufficiency of one common gaol for such riding, parts, or division under the said act of the 5 & 6 Vict. [c. 98].

6. That it shall be lawful for one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, with the consent of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, from time to time to regulate or vary, lessen or increase, the fees or sums in the name of fees now payable, or which from time to time may be payable, on the several proceedings in the courts holden under the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] to the judges, clerks, and high bailiffs of such courts, and such fees or sums may be so regulated from time to time by way of per-centage on the amount of the demand; and such Secretary of State, with such consent as aforesaid, may from time to time appoint, instead of all or any of the fees or sums in the name of fees now payable or which may from time to time be payable as aforesaid, other fees or sums by way of per-centage or otherwise, and to be payable on such proceedings under such last-mentioned act as such Secretary of State, with such consent as aforesaid, may direct.

7. That so much of the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] as directs that the clerk of every court holden under the said act shall pay over to the treasurer of the court, quarterly or oftener in every year, by order of the court, the monies remaining in his hands over and above his own fees, and such balance as he shall be allowed by order of the court to retain for the current expenditure of the court, shall be repealed; and the clerk of every court holden under the said act shall pay over to the treasurer of the Court, quarterly or oftener in every year, as he may be directed by the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, the monies remaining in his hands over and above his own fees, and such balance as he shall be allowed by order of the said commissioners to retain for the current expenditure of the court.

8. That so much of the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] as enacts that the clerk of every court, under the directions of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, and subject to such regulations as they may require to be enforced, shall make all necessary contracts or otherwise provide for repairing and furnishing, and for cleaning, lighting, and warming, the court-house and offices of such court, and for supplying the said court and offices with law and office books and stationery, and for defraying all other necessary expenses not otherwise provided for incident to the holding of the said court, and as provides that no payment for any charge shall be allowed in the clerk's accounts until allowed under the hand of the judge, shall be repealed; and it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury to provide for the several purposes and for defraying the several expenses aforesaid in such manner, and by the agency of such officers of the court, or otherwise, as to them shall seem fit.

9. That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, if they shall think fit, to direct that the whole or part of the expenses incurred or to be incurred in the performance of the duties required by the act passed in the 10 & 11 Vict. [c. 102], intituled "An Act to abolish the Court of Review in Bankruptcy, and to make Alterations in the Jurisdiction in the Courts of Bankruptcy, and Court for Relief of Insolvent Debtors," to be performed by the officers of the courts established by the said act of the 10 & 11 Vict. [c. 102], shall be paid out of "The General Fund" of such respective courts, and that the surplus for the time being of the general fund of each such court, after defraying the expenses of such respective court, shall be applicable, under the directions of the said Commissioners of the Treasury, to the payment of the expenses of any other of the said courts of which the general fund may be insufficient for that purpose.

10. That it shall be lawful for the judge of any court holden under the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95], by any writing under his hand, to authorise any of the bailiffs appointed by the high bailiff under the said act to act as brokers or appraisers for the purpose of selling or valuing any goods, chattels, or effects taken in execution under the said act; and the bailiffs so authorised by the judge may, without other license in this behalf, do and perform all the duties and shall be entitled to the poundage which sworn brokers or appraisers may now do and perform and are entitled to under the said act.

11. That so much of the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] as requires that notice of the intention of her Majesty to take into consideration the propriety of making any order in council for the purposes of the said act shall be published in the London Gazette one calendar month at least before any such order shall be made, shall be repealed.

12. That it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor to appoint and authorise five of the judges of the courts holden under the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] to frame such general rules and orders as to them shall seem expedient for and concerning the practice and proceedings of the courts holden under the said act, and for the execution of the process of such courts, and in relation to any of the provisions of the said act as to which there may have arisen doubts or have been conflicting decisions in the said courts; and all such rules and orders as aforesaid as shall be certified to the Lord Chancellor, under the hands of the judges so appointed or authorised, or any three of them, shall be submitted by the Lord Chancellor to three or more of the judges of the superior courts of common law at Westminster, of whom the Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench or Common Pleas, or the Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, shall be one; and such judges of the superior courts may approve or disallow, or alter or amend, such rules and orders, or any of them; and such of the rules as shall be so approved by such judges of the superior courts shall forthwith after the approval thereof be laid before both Houses of Parliament, if Parliament be then sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within five days after the next meeting thereof; and no such rule or order shall have effect until six weeks after the same shall have been so laid before both Houses of Parliament; and any rule or order so approved shall from and after the expiration of such time as last aforesaid be of the same force and effect as if the same had been enacted by authority of Parliament.

13. And whereas it is expedient to abolish the Court of the Marshalsea of Household of the Kings of England, and the Court of our Lady the Queen of the Palace of the Queen at Westminster, and her Majesty's Court of Record for the Honour of Peveril and additional limits of the same: be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this act no action or suit shall be commenced in any of the said courts.

14. That from and after the 31st day of December, 1849, all the power, authority, and jurisdiction of the said Court of the Marshalsea, and of the said Court of the Palace of the Queen at Westminster, and of the said Court for the Honour of Peveril and additional limits of the same, and of the judges of the said courts respectively, shall cease and determine; and that all actions and suits then depending in the said courts respectively shall be transferred, with all the proceedings thereon, to her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, if the debt or damages sought to be recovered in such actions or suits respectively shall exceed the sum of 20*l.*, and to the county court for the district in which the respective defendants shall then reside, if the debt or damages sought to be recovered in such actions or suits respectively shall not exceed the sum of 20*l.*; and such actions and suits so transferred shall be dealt with and decided according to the practice of those courts respectively, or of the court whence the same shall be transferred, according to the discretion of the court to which the same shall be transferred, which court shall, for the purpose of such actions or suits only, be deemed and taken to have all the power and jurisdiction to all intents and purposes possessed before the passing of this act by the court whence such action or suit shall be transferred.

15. Provided always, and be it enacted, that all judgments obtained in any of the courts hereby abolished on or before the 31st day of December, 1849, shall, notwithstanding the passing of this act, be as valid and effectual, and as capable of being enforced by the process of the court in which such judgments shall respectively have been obtained, as if this act had not been passed.

16. That the records, muniments, and writings of the several courts abolished by this act shall, as soon as conveniently may be after the 31st day of December, 1849, be placed under the charge and superintendence of the Master of the Rolls for the time being, to be deposited and kept in such place or places as the said Master of the Rolls shall direct; and such records, muniments, and writings shall thenceforth be deemed to be in the custody of the Master of the Rolls under the authority of an act passed in the 1 & 2 Vict. [c. 94], intituled "An Act for keeping safely the Public Records;" and, until such records, muniments, and writings shall be so placed under the charge and superintendence of the said Master of the Rolls as aforesaid, the same shall be respectively kept by the same persons and in the same places as before the passing of this act.

17. That every person who is legally entitled to any franchise or office in any of the courts abolished by this act shall be entitled to make a claim for compensation to the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury within six calendar months after the passing of this act, and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, in such manner as they shall think fit, to inquire what was the nature of the office, and what was the tenure thereof, and what were the lawful fees and emoluments in respect of which such compensation should be allowed; but any increase of such fees or emoluments which shall have happened after the passing of the said act of the 9 & 10 Vict. [c. 95] shall not be taken into account in estimating the amount of such compensation; and the commissioners in each case shall award such gross or yearly sum, and for such time, as they shall think just to be awarded, upon consideration of the special circumstances of each case; and all such compensations shall be paid out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland: provided always, that if any person holding any office in any of the said courts shall be appointed after the passing of this act to any public office or employment, the payment of the compensation awarded to him under this act, so long as he shall continue to receive the salary or emoluments of such office or employment, shall be suspended, if the amount of such salary or emoluments be greater than the amount of such compensation, or, if not, shall be diminished by the amount of such salary or emoluments.

18. That no privilege shall be allowed to any attorney, solicitor, or other person, to exempt him from the provisions of this act or the said "Act for the more easy Recovery of Small Debts and Demands in England."

19. That this act may be amended or repealed by any act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

A SUMMARY of the LAW of MODERN PLEADING, incident to the Rules of Hilary Term, 1834; with such of the Decisions on Practice, Evidence, and Costs, as are closely connected with that subject. Also, copious Analysis of the Cases and Pleadings. By ROBERTS PHILIP TYRWHITT, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

"The reports of the "Common-law Commissioners" suggested extensive changes in the practice on this important subject, (Pleading), which changes, whether improvements or not, were sanctioned by Parliament, and embodied by all the common-law courts in general rules, dated Hilary Term, 1834. It was then sought to adapt old principles to modern exigencies, and to link the present with the past by regulating the transition—with what success the work before us attempts to develope. It embodies in its text the pith of the decisions on "Modern Pleading," as incident to the above "rules," and condenses in the notes other valuable matter at present spread over lengthy "reports." The latter feature is adapted to render the volume more extensively useful in courts of Nisi Prius, particularly on the circuits, and in the library of country practitioners. Nor is it rigorously limited to its chief object; but includes the course of decisions on the replication de injuriâ in its extended application, as well as on the modern acts respecting land, tithes, mines, commons, ways, and easements, together with so much of the law of amendment, evidence, and costs as elucidates the new rules of pleading. On the whole, this work appears to have been prepared with much care and industry, and will be found to afford in small comparative compass a useful adjunct to the works of Stephen and Chitty."—Times, Oct. 29th, 1846.

Railway and other Joint-stock Companies requiring the Authority of Parliament, and within 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, for some Purposes. 5. Banking Companies. By ANDREW BISSET, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.

"We should not have believed, had we not witnessed the success of the experiment, that the Law of Partnership could be thoroughly expounded within the compass of 176 pages, which is the extent of the first part of the work, devoted to the law of ordinary partnerships. . . . . The style, to give it the highest praise that a text-writer can desire, reminds us of 'The Compendium of the Law of Real Property.'"—Jurist, No. 532.

The present State of the Law of Racing, Wagers, and Gaming. Also a few unreported Cases; the Statutes to the present Time; with some Miscellaneous Information.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"There is something eminently practical in the general aspect of the book, it is small, compact of print and law, and clearly arranged and set forth."—The Jurist.

"No turf-man, betting-man, horse-dealer, stable-keeper, or in fact any other description of horseman will be able to get on in his business without this book."—The Veterinarian.

"This a most useful book, edited by Mr. G. H. H. Oliphant, a Barrister, and embraces every matter in which the Horse is concerned. Every question is treated of with clearness and accuracy, and the law as it exists is explained and demonstrated by recent decisions in the Courts of Law. The question respecting Derby Clubs and their legality forms a prominent portion of the work, and we unfeignedly recommend its possession to all interested in the numerous subjects on which it treats."—Bell's Life.

ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE, A. D. 1720.—Incorporated by Charter of his Majesty George the First. CHIEF OFFICE, in the ROYAL EXCHANGE. Branch Office, No. 29, PALL MALL.

LIFE, FIRE, and MARINE ASSURANCES may be effected on the most advantageous terms with this Corporation, which has transacted business in all departments during a period exceeding a Century and a Quarter, and affords unquestionable Security by its Capital Stock.

The following Table shews the amount of BONUS on British Life Policies, for the Sum of 1000l. each, which had been Seven Years in force on the 31st December, 1848:—

Age when Assured.	Amount of Premiums paid.	Bonus by Addition to Sum Assured: Amount of Addition.	Per Cent. per Ann. on Sum Assured.	Per Cent. on the Amt. of Prems. paid.

Average	..	..	2·04	46·3

Equivalent reductions have been made in the Annual Premiums payable by those of the Assured who desired that their share of profit should be so applied.

The practice of the Corporation in deciding promptly upon Proposals, in registering and acknowledging Notices of Assignment, and in furnishing information with regard to prior notices, is calculated to promote the convenience of the Members of the Legal Profession; while the regulation which admits of Assurances being granted to the extent of 10,000l. on the same life may save trouble to their clients, by obviating the necessity of appearance and examination at different offices. The usual allowance is made on the introduction of Life Assurances, and is reserved for the original recipient, notwithstanding that the Premiums may subsequently be paid by another individual or firm.

Prospectuses will be forwarded on application.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 29, 1849.

The House of Lords, in entertaining bills for annulling marriages, on the ground of abduction, or of their having been procured by force or undue pressure, is generally supposed to be acting, if not strictly in its judicial character, at least upon judicial grounds, so that it regulates itself by the principles on which such bills have been previously entertained.

This being so, we have been much struck by the perusal of a case reported in the last number of Clark & Finnelly's Reports, (Field's Marriage Annulling Bill, Vol. 2, N. S., 48), in which the House of Lords rejected a divorce bill under circumstances which we should have thought made a case as strong as was ever brought before their Lordships' House.

The lady, Miss Field, was the daughter of a deceased gentleman, under whose will she was entitled to a fortune worth about 25,000*l*., or rather more; she was only eighteen at the time of the marriage, and was under the actual guardianship of a Mr. John Brown, a farmer and brewer, one of her father's executors. Mr. John Brown had a brother, Samuel Brown, fifty-two years old, who had been a lady's butler, and came to reside with his brother John, assisting him in his business. It does not appear in what station of life Miss Field's father had been; but, as it did appear that she had known the Browns all her life, it must be presumed that his rank in life was not such as to prevent him treating them as associates. Under these circumstances, the young lady treated Samuel Brown naturally with the familiarity due to the brother of her guardian, and in the manner in which a young girl of eighteen would treat a man old enough to be her father. In her evidence she says that she looked upon him the same as her guardian. Accordingly they rode and walked together, and were much in each other's society. After a short time Samuel Brown availed himself of these opportunities to make her an offer of marriage, which she declined of course, with considerable surprise at it having been made. Her own expression is, "that she laughed at him." He did not, however, relinquish the pursuit, but pressed her continually. At length she told him, that, in addition to her disinclination to marry him personally, she had another and more insuperable objection, viz. that she was attached to another man, a Mr. Montague Smith, the son of a gentleman who had been the sole and intimate friend of her father, and at whose house she had been a frequent guest. Samuel Brown then resorted to attempts to terrify her, and threatened, if she did not marry him, not only to kill himself, but to injure the young man to whom she was attached. All this brought her into so agitated a state of mind that at length she yielded, and on the 18th June (being, as she stated in her evidence, in so excited and bewildered a state of mind that she scarcely knew what she did) she consented to marry Samuel Brown, and they were married on the 19th. She, however, never lived with her husband; and evidence was tendered (if necessary) to prove that the marriage had not been consummated. At the end of six days, during which period the marriage was not made known to any one, she went to the house of Mr. Smith, and then informed his son Montague of the marriage, and how it had been brought about. So far all the evidence is to shew a case of gross fraud and pressure, and a total want of all substantial consent. The only positive evidence to the contrary was that of the clerk of the parish, who said Miss Field went through the ceremony with coolness; that of the clerk's wife, who proved that the marriage luncheon, at which no one but Brown and the lady were present, was eaten, but by whom she did not know; and that of the clergyman, who merely proved that the parties had certified the correctness of the entry in the registry, whereas such entry was not, it appeared, correct; and the only inferential evidence was the fact of Miss Field not having spoken to her guardian or his wife, and having remained for six days before she communicated the marriage to Mr. Smith. Under these circumstances, the House of Lords thought there was not enough to support the bill, and it was accordingly withdrawn.

Now, certainly, unless the rule is, that nothing short of dragging a woman by main force, or under the influence of immediate terror, to the altar, will be sufficient, this seems a most extraordinary decision. There were all the ingredients of a marriage forced upon a minor of weak intellect, by that degree of fraud and pressure which amounts to the exclusion of all notion of free consent in the woman: she was without guidance, except that of a guardian, who, by even permitting a person, in such a station of life as that of his brother, to be an inmate of his house, grossly neglected his duty, and was, in fact, her enemy, instead of her guardian. That she was weak, to a degree just short of imbecility, is obvious; for what girl not so weak could have been worked upon by such threats, from such a person, in the way the evidence shewed that she was? That, upon the face of them, Samuel Brown's threats were absurd, would have been obvious to any young woman not thoroughly bewildered and mystified. She appears, indeed, from the evidence, to have been put, by the continual harassment and terror to which Brown subjected her, much in the state that is described by travellers as that of birds under the fascination of the rattle-snake. Her evidence shews a vacillation of mind, a terror so absolutely childish, and at the same time so absolutely paralysing, that it is of itself, if she was to be believed, (and there was nothing whatever to shake her credit), conclusive proof, as we humbly conceive, of that degree of weakness in her, and that degree of pressure on the part of Brown, that bring her case, as closely as it is possible to imagine, within the doctrine of Miss Turner's case. There was not a particle of evidence to shew that Brown was a man of a character to be, at the age of fifty-two, passionately in love, or to intend really to shoot either himself or Mr. Smith. In the absence of any such evidence, it is, of course, to any cool and moderately strong mind, obvious that he never did intend anything of the kind; that the young lady must have been weak and excitable to a very high degree to have believed him; and that he well knew her weakness, and practised upon it by these very threats. In other words, that his threat to kill himself and Mr. Smith was as gross and deliberate a fraud as the statements made by Mr. Wakefield, with reference to the bankruptcy of Miss Turner's father, were in her case.

The judgment or opinion delivered by Lord Devon*, in the present case, is most unsatisfactory, as it gives no reasons, and leaves it quite uncertain, on what ground he advised the bill to be rejected.

We can only repeat, that if, in such a case, the Legislature will not interfere, it is most difficult to imagine a case, delivered from the presence of actual force or immediate intimidation, in which it will interfere.

* His Lordship is stated, in the report, to have been the only law Lord present after the first day, and during the summing up of the evidence. It is not quite correct, we apprehend, to describe his Lordship as a law Lord. A law Lord is generally understood to be one who has owed his elevation to his distinction as a lawyer—not merely a peer who has practised the law. Lord Devon was, it is true, bred a lawyer, practised in early life not without success; but we believe Lordship never attained any higher office than that of a Mas in Chancery; and his peerage—an ancient one—he inhe descent.

Whereas it is expedient to amend and consolidate the laws relating to bankrupts: be it therefore enacted, &c.,

Sect. 1. That from and after the commencement of this act the several acts and parts of acts set forth in the Schedule (A.) to this act annexed, to the extent to which such acts or parts of acts are by such schedule expressed to be repealed, and every other act or acts, and such parts of every other act or acts, as shall be inconsistent with this act, shall be repealed, except so far as the said acts or parts of acts, or any of them, whether mentioned or included in the said schedule or not, repeal any former act or part of an act, and except also so far as may be necessary for the purpose of supporting any proceedings taken or to be taken under and after the commencement of this act upon any trading, act of bankruptcy, petitioning creditor's debt, fiat, or other proceeding in bankruptcy before the commencement of this act, and except as to the recovery and application of any penalty for any offence which shall have been committed before the commencement of this act.

2. That in citing this act in other acts of Parliament, or in any instrument, document, or proceeding, it shall be sufficient to use the expression, "The Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849."

3. That this act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland, except where otherwise expressly provided.

4. That this act, unless where otherwise specially provided, shall commence and take effect from and after the 11th day of October next; and that from and after the commencement of this act no fiat in bankruptcy shall be issued, but all proceedings in bankruptcy or to found an act of bankruptcy shall, and proceedings for arrangement between debtors being traders liable to become bankrupt and creditors may, be by virtue of and according to the provisions of this act; and that all proceedings in bankruptcy, and every fiat in bankruptcy, and petition for such arrangement, depending at the commencement of this act, shall be proceeded in and brought to a conclusion under the provisions of this act: provided that every trading, act of bankruptcy, petitioning creditor's debt, or other matter or thing which before the commencement of this act would have authorised proceedings in bankruptcy, shall after the commencement of this act be sufficient to authorise proceedings in bankruptcy under this act, and nothing in this act contained shall render invalid any proceedings in bankruptcy, or any fiat in bankruptcy, or any petition for arrangement, depending at the commencement of this act, or any proceedings which may have been instituted or taken under or by virtue of such bankruptcy, fiat, or petition, or lessen or affect any right, title, claim, demand, or remedy which any person now has or hereafter may have under or by virtue thereof, or lessen or affect any right, title, claim, demand, or remedy which any person now has or hereafter may have upon or against any bankrupt against whom any fiat has or shall have been issued, or against any such trader who may or shall have presented such petition, except as in this act is hereafter specially provided: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall affect the provisions of the "Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Act, 1848," or any of the acts therein recited, or of any act amending such act, except so far as regards the abolition of the fiat in bankruptcy and the substitution of a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy.

5. That where, in any act of Parliament, instrument, document, or other proceeding passed, executed, or made before the commencement of this act, mention shall have been or shall be made of any commission of bankruptcy or fiat in bankruptcy, such act, instrument, document, or proceeding shall be construed with reference to the proceedings under a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, as if such commission or fiat had been actually issued at the time of filing such petition.

And with respect to the court, and the jurisdiction thereof, be it enacted,

6. That the Court of Bankruptcy shall continue to be a court of law and equity for the purposes of this act, and shall continue to be a court of record; and the records and proceedings of every kind at the commencement of this act in the said court in London, and in the several districts in the country, shall be kept as such records and proceedings in like manner in the court so continued; and the said court and every commissioner thereof shall have and use all the powers, rights, incidents, and privileges of a court of record, and all other rights, incidents, and privileges, as fully to all intents and purposes as the same are used and enjoyed by any of her Majesty's courts of law or judges at Westminster; and each and every of the commissioners for the time being acting in London and in the several districts in the country shall, singly and simultaneously, or otherwise as occasion may require, be and form the court for every purpose under this act, or in execution of any duty which may hereafter be imposed on the court, except where otherwise in this act specially provided.

7. That upon the next two occasions of a vacancy in the office of any commissioner of the court acting in London the vacancies shall not be filled up, and the commissioners acting in London shall in such manner be reduced to four; and the Lord Chancellor shall have power to direct before which commissioner or commissioners those matters shall be prosecuted which were theretofore prosecuted before the commissioner whose death, resignation, retirement, or removal shall have occasioned the vacancy.

8. That the commissioners of the court continued under this act, or any eight or more of them, of whom the senior commissioner shall be one, may from time to time make such rules and orders as they may think fit for the better carrying this act into execution, and as regards the duties to be performed by the chief and other registrars, the accountant, master, clerk of inrolments, official assignees, registrar of meetings, and clerks, and by the messengers, ushers, and other under officers of the court, and generally for regulating the practice of the court and the forms of proceedings where not provided for in this act: provided always, that no such rules or orders shall be of any force or effect until they shall have been approved by the Lord Chancellor.

9. That the limit and extent of the district of the Court of Bankruptcy acting in London shall be and remain the limit and extent of such district at the time of the passing of this act, and the limit and extent of the districts of the courts acting in the country respectively shall be the limit and extent of such districts respectively as the same are settled and determined at the time of the passing of this act, unless and until such last-mentioned districts shall be altered as hereinafter provided: provided always, that it shall be lawful for her Majesty, with the advice of her Privy Council, from time to time to alter the limit and extent of such last-mentioned districts, or any of them, or to increase the number of the same, as to her Majesty, with the advice aforesaid, shall seem fit.

10. That the court shall sit for the dispatch of business daily throughout the year, (Sunday, Christmas-day, Good Friday, Monday and Tuesday in Easter week, and days appointed for public fast or thanksgiving, excepted), and in London, and in each district in the country, the commissioners of the court, or such of them as occasion may require, shall attend for that purpose: provided always, that in each district in the country in which there is only one commissioner of the court, such commissioner, or, in his absence from illness or other reasonable cause, the registrar of the court in such district, shall so attend: provided also, that during the time appointed by order of the Lord Chancellor for vacations in the several offices of the High Court of Chancery, the commissioners of the court in London and in the several districts in the country respectively shall have full power and authority to regulate the sittings of the court, and appoint the attendance of such of them as vacation commissioner or commissioners for that purpose as shall appear fit and necessary for the due administration of justice in the said court.

11. The Lord Chancellor may from time to time attach the commissioners and registrars acting in the country to such districts as he shall think fit, and, whenever it shall appear to him to be expedient, may order any commissioner acting for any district, whether in town or country, to hold sittings at such places within his district as the Lord Chancellor may think fit, and may give all necessary directions in that behalf.

12. That the court, in the exercise of its primary jurisdiction by virtue of this act, shall have superintendence and control in all matters of bankruptcy, and shall hear, determine, and make order in any matter of bankruptcy whatever, so far as the assignees are concerned, relating to the disposition of the estate and effects of the bankrupt, or of any estate or effects taken under the bankruptcy and claimed by the assignees for the benefit of the creditors, or relating to any acts done or sought to be done by the assignees in their character of assignees by virtue or under colour of the bankruptcy, and also in any matter of bankruptcy whatever as between the assignees and any creditor or other person appearing and submitting to the jurisdiction of the court; and also in any application for a certificate of conformity, and in any other matter (whether in bankruptcy or not) where the court by virtue of this act has jurisdiction over the subject of the petition or application, save and except as may be by this act otherwise specially provided, and subject in all cases to an appeal to such one of the Vice-Chancellors of the High Court of Chancery as the Lord Chancellor shall from time to time be pleased to appoint to sit in bankruptcy: provided always, that if no such appeal shall be entered within twenty-one days from the date of any decision or order of the court, and be thereafter duly prosecuted, every such decision or order shall be final; and that every appeal shall be subject to such regulation in regard to deposit of costs as shall by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed.

13. That the Vice-Chancellor appointed and sitting in bankruptcy as aforesaid shall be and form a court of record, and shall have all the powers of and incident thereto, and may adjourn any sitting from time to time and for such time as may be requisite, and shall have the like power of summoning and compelling attendance, and of examination, and of enforcing obedience to examination and to any order duly made, whether relating to any examination or to any other matter, and of requiring and compelling the production of books, papers, deeds, writings, and other documents, and shall have the like power of commitment, as is by this act given to the Court of Bankruptcy.

14. That all appeals from decisions or orders of the commissioners shall be brought on by way of petition, motion, or special case, subject to any general rule or order to be made by the Vice-Chancellor or by the Lord Chancellor relating to such appeals.

15. That the Vice-Chancellor may, if he think fit, direct any question of fact arising before him to be decided by a jury in London or Westminster, or by a jury before a judge of assize, in manner and form provided in lieu of a feigned issue by an act passed in the Parliament holden in the 8 & 9 Vict. [c. 109], intituled "An Act to amend the Law concerning Games and Wagers;" and after any question so authorised shall have been decided, a new trial thereof may be moved for in the court out of which the writ of summons sued out under that act shall have been issued.

16. That all decisions and orders of the Vice-Chancellor shall be subject to an appeal to the Lord Chancellor on matters of law and equity, or on the refusal or admission of evidence, and on such only; and in all cases of appeal to the Lord Chancellor such appeal shall be on a special case, and in no other mode whatsoever, except the Lord Chancellor shall in any case otherwise direct; and such special case shall be approved and certified by the Vice-Chancellor, and his determination on the settlement of such case shall be final and conclusive: provided always, that all appeals to the Lord Chancellor by virtue of this act shall be heard by the Lord Chancellor only, and not by any other judge of the High Court of Chancery; and that if no petition of appeal be entered within twenty-one days from the date of the decision or order of the Vice-Chancellor, and thereafter duly prosecuted, every such decision or order shall be final.

17. That all appeals to the Vice-Chancellor or Lord Chancellor, and all affidavits and documents to be used on the hearing of any such appeal, shall be entered in the office of the chief registrar; and the Vice-Chancellor sitting in bankruptcy shall on the hearing of such appeals be attended by some one of the registrars of the Court of Bankruptcy.

18. That if the Lord Chancellor shall in any case deem any matter of law or equity brought before him by way of appeal to be of sufficient difficulty or importance to require the decision of the House of Lords, or in case both parties in any proceeding before the Vice-Chancellor shall desire that any such matter may be determined in the first instance by the House of Lords, and not by the Lord Chancellor, then and in such case the whole facts whereupon such question of law or equity shall arise shall be stated in the form of a petition of appeal to the House of Lords, and the party appealing may carry an appeal to the House of Lords, in like manner as other appeals are preferred to that House: provided always, that the cases to be lodged by the parties in the House of Lords shall be confined in matter of fact, in cases of appeal from the Lord Chancellor, to setting forth the special case brought up to the Lord Chancellor from the Vice-Chancellor, and in cases of appeal from the Vice-Chancellor to setting forth a special case, to be approved and certified by the Vice-Chancellor, and to such arguments on the point of law as the parties may be advised to state.

19. That during the illness, or absence from any reasonable or unavoidable cause, of any commissioner acting in the country, the Lord Chancellor (as occasion may require, and for such time as he shall think fit to allow) may authorise and direct any of the commissioners acting in London to act in any district in the country for or in aid of any of the commissioners, and so vice versâ, and in the same manner may authorise any of the commissioners appointed to act in any one district in the country to act for or in aid of any of the commissioners authorised to act in any other district in the country; and any commissioner so acting shall have all the power, jurisdiction, and authority, and perform all the duties, of the commissioner for or in aid of whom such commissioner shall so act.

20. That any of the commissioners acting in London may, during vacation, or during the illness or unavoidable absence of the senior commissioner, exercise and perform the duties imposed upon the senior commissioner by this act.

21. That the court in London, and in the several districts in the country, shall be auxiliary to each other for proof of debts and for the examination of persons or witnesses on oath, or for any or either of such purposes: provided always, that all such examinations shall be taken down in writing, and shall be annexed to and form part of the proceedings in the matter to which the same shall relate, and that no such proof or examination shall be taken without the request in writing of the commissioner before whom the matter is being prosecuted.

22. That all power, jurisdiction, and authority of the commissioners named in any fiat issued on or prior to the 11th day of November, 1842, shall be deemed to have ceased and determined on that day; and every such fiat not already transferred or removed into the Court of Bankruptcy shall be transferred and removed into the court in such manner as may by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed.

23. That all proceedings before the court in any district in the country, or any part of such proceedings, or copies or minutes thereof, shall be transmitted to the chief registrar at such time and in such manner as may by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed, and be by him kept among the records of the court.

24. That every warrant issued by the court shall be under the seal of the court and the hand of one of the commissioners; and every summons shall be in writing under the hand of one of such commissioners, or in his absence under the hand of one of the registrars, and under the seal of the court.

25. That the court shall cause to be sealed with the seal of the court all records, proceedings, documents, and copies of the same as are by this act expressly required to be so sealed, and such other records, proceedings, documents, and copies of the same as the court shall at any time direct.

And with respect to the registrars, be it enacted,

26. That upon the next two occasions of a vacancy in the office of any registrar of the court acting in London (other than the chief registrar) the vacancies shall not be filled up, and the number of registrars acting in London (other than the chief registrar) shall in such manner be reduced to four.

27. That any registrar of the court may, during vacation, or during the illness or absence from any other reasonable cause of any commissioner thereof, act for and as the deputy of such commissioner; and any such registrar so acting shall have and exercise all power vested in the court, except the power of commitment, the hearing of any disputed adjudication, or the hearing or determining of any question of the allowance or suspension of any bankrupt's certificate.

28. That whenever it shall seem expedient to any court to direct a registrar to act in the prosecution of any bankruptcy for proof of debts, or for the examination of persons or witnesses on oath, or for either of such purposes, it shall be lawful for such court so to direct, and the travelling expenses of such registrar and of any clerk or other officer attending him, incurred in so acting, shall be settled by such court, and paid out of the estate of the bankrupt; and such registrar so acting shall have and exercise all power vested in such court for proof of debts and examination of persons or witnesses, except the power of commitment: provided always, that all depositions and examinations of persons and witnesses taken before such registrar, and all acts done by him, shall be reduced to writing, and shall be annexed to and form part of the proceedings.

29. That the chief registrar shall provide a seal for himself and each of the other registrars of the court, on which shall be engraven the style of the court, and the name of the district in which such registrar is acting; and every such seal shall be kept by the chief and other registrars respectively for the time being in trust for the purposes of the court; and such seal shall be and shall be deemed and taken to be the seal of the court.

30. That any registrar of the court may act for the chief registrar or for any other registrar thereof, and during the illness, or absence from any reasonable or unavoidable cause, of any registrar acting in the country, the Lord Chancellor (as occasion may require, and for such time as he shall think fit to allow) may authorise and direct any of the registrars acting in London to act in any district in the country for or in aid of any of the registrars, and so vice versâ, and in the same manner may authorise any of the registrars appointed to act in one district in the country to act for or in aid of any of the registrars appointed to act in any other district in the country; and any such registrar so acting shall have all the power, jurisdiction, and authority, and perform all the duties, of the registrar for or in aid of whom he shall so act.

And with respect to the accountant in bankruptcy, be it enacted,

31. That the accountant in bankruptcy shall superintend and control the care and management of the funds belonging to bankrupts' estates, and of all funds which may come into the court under any matter to be prosecuted therein under and by virtue of this act, and shall conduct the business of it in such manner as may by the Lord Chancellor, or by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act, be directed; and the salary of the accountant shall be in lieu of all fees and emoluments whatsoever, and he shall not, directly or indirectly, receive any further sum, either for commission, brokerage, or otherwise; and the brokerage business of the accountant's office shall be transacted upon such terms as any two of the commissioners of the court acting in London shall determine, and the sum paid to the broker shall be charged by the accountant to the estate for which the investment or sale shall be made, and when such sum shall be determined the commissioners aforesaid may direct the payment of it in such manner as to them may seem just.

32. That all monies and securities which at the commencement of this act may be standing in the books of the Bank of England in the name of the accountant in bankruptcy to the credit of the accounts intituled respectively "The Secretary of Bankrupts Account," "The Secretary of Bankrupts' Compensation Account," and "The Interest arising from Bankruptcy Fund Account," and all monies and securities which shall be standing to the credit of the account intituled "Fund arising from Fees in Bankruptcy," or which shall be so standing in the name of the "Registrar of Meetings," shall be transferred and carried to an account to be opened therein, and intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account;" and all monies and securities which shall thereafter stand to the credit of the account to be so opened and intituled shall be subject to all the orders theretofore made in regard to monies paid or directed to be paid in to those accounts.

33. That the account kept at the Bank of England in the name of the accountant, and called "The Bankruptcy Fund Account," and the account to be opened as mentioned in the preceding article, and intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account," and each such account, shall be subject to such general orders touching the payment in, investment, accounting for, and payment out of the same for the purposes mentioned in this act, as the Lord Chancellor shall from time to time think fit to prescribe.

34. That out of the cash now lying or which shall hereafter lie dead and uninvested in the Bank of England in the name of the accountant, to the credit of any account kept by him as such accountant, any sum or sums of money shall and may, by virtue of any order or orders of the Lord Chancellor to be made for that purpose, from time to time be placed out and invested, in one entire sum or in parcels, in the name of the accountant, on such Government or Parliamentary securities as in and by such order or orders shall be directed, and such securities shall be carried to the accounts respectively on account of which they were so purchased; and the interest and dividends of all securities so purchased shall from time to time be received by the governor and company of the Bank of England, and be carried to the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account."

35. That if at any time hereafter the whole or any part of the money placed out on securities shall be wanted to answer any demands due in respect of any bankrupt's estate, or if it shall at any time appear that the balance of cash remaining to the credit of the accountant is not so large as it ought to be, having regard as well to the convenience of the suitors as to the necessity of affording a fair remuneration to the Bank of England for keeping the accounts, the Lord Chancellor may direct the whole or any part of such securities to be sold and disposed of, and the money arising from such sale to be paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the accounts to which they respectively belong.

36. That on or before the 1st day of March in every year, if Parliament be then sitting, or, if not, within fourteen days from the commencement of the then next session of Parliament, there shall be laid before Parliament, by the accountant, a return shewing the total amount of monies paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the accountant during the year preceding and up to the 31st day of December in that year, and distinguishing therein the amount paid over by her Majesty's Commissioners of Inland Revenue under the provisions hereinafter contained; the total amount of monies paid out during the same period by orders of the Lord Chancellor, the Vice-Chancellor, or the Court of Bankruptcy or any commissioner thereof; the balances on the said 31st day of December in the Bank of England standing to the credit of the accountant; and shewing also the net amounts standing at the Bank of England to the credit of the accountant on the 1st day of January on each of the following distinct accounts, viz. first, the Bankruptcy Fund Account; second, the Unclaimed Dividend Account; and third, the Chief Registrar's Account; and the return in respect of the last-mentioned account shall have an appendix attached thereto, detailing all payments made from such account, and to whom made, and whether as salaries, compensations, annuities, services, or travelling or other expenses or allowances; and the said return shall specify the amount transferred and paid out as dividends out of the Dividend Account, and shall also shew the balance then existing on such account.

37. And with respect to the master, be it enacted, that the duties of the master shall be the taxation of all such bills of fees, costs, charges, and disbursements as may by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed, subject to review of the court; and the place, time, and manner in which his duties shall be conducted shall be such as shall be specified in such general rule or order; and all sums and fees which now or at any time before the commencement of this act are directed to be paid by the master into the Bank of England to the account intituled "The Secretary of Bankrupts Account," and all sums and fees received by the master after the commencement of this act, shall be paid into the Bank of England to the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account."

And with respect to the official assignees, be it enacted,

38. That the official assignees of the Court of Bankruptcy shall give such security, and be subject to such rules, and act in such manner, as may by the Lord Chancellor, or by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act, be from time to time directed.

39. That one of such official assignees shall in all cases be appointed by the court an assignee of each bankrupt's estate and effects to act with the assignee or assignees to be chosen by the creditors; and all the personal estate and effects, and the rents and profits of the real estate, and the proceeds of sale of all the estate and effects, real and personal, of the bankrupt, shall in every case be possessed and received by such official assignee alone, save where it shall be otherwise directed by the court; and all stock in the public funds or of any public company, and all monies, Exchequer bills, India bonds, or other public securities, and all bills, notes, and other negotiable instruments, shall be forthwith transferred, delivered, and paid by such official assignee into the Bank of England, to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy, to be subject to such order and regulation for the keeping of the account of the said monies and other effects, and for the payment and delivery in, investment, and payment and delivery out of the same, as the Lord Chancellor or as the Vice Chancellor, or any commissioner of the court if authorised so to do by any order of the Lord Chancellor, shall direct.

40. That until assignees shall be chosen by the creditors of the bankrupt the official assignee shall, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, be deemed to be the sole assignee of the bankrupt's estate and effects, and, if the court shall so order, may, before assignees shall be chosen by the creditors, sell or otherwise dispose of any property of a bankrupt which shall be of a perishable nature, or the holding possession whereof until the choice of assignees would in the judgment of the court be prejudicial to the bankrupt's estate: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to authorise any official assignee to interfere with the assignees chosen by the creditors, in the appointment or removal of a solicitor or attorney, or, after such choice, in directing the time and manner of effecting any sale of a bankrupt's estates or effects.

41. That no official assignee shall be personally responsible or liable for any act done by him, or by his order or authority, in the execution of his duty as such official assignee, by reason of the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or act of bankruptcy upon which any adjudication of bankruptcy shall have been grounded, or of any or either of such matters, being insufficient to support such adjudication; and no official assignee shall be deemed personally answerable for or by reason of his having received any money, bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments under any bankruptcy in his character of official assignee, provided he shall have paid and deposited such money, bills, notes, and other negotiable instruments during the prosecution of the bankruptcy to and in the Bank of England to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy for the particular estate for which such money, bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments shall have been received, and shall have given notice of such payment or deposit (as the case may be) to any person claiming such money, bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments of the official assignee, and provided also that the official assignee, after such payment or deposit, shall not have dealt with such money, bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments otherwise than in the execution of his duty as official assignee, and under the order of the court; and if any action shall be brought against the official assignee, either solely or jointly with the creditors' assignee, in respect of such money, bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments, it shall be lawful for a judge of the court in which the same shall be brought, upon application of the official assignee, and upon an affidavit of facts, to set aside the proceedings in such action so far as the official assignee is concerned, with such costs, or without costs, as to the judge shall seem meet.

42. That on the death or removal of any official assignee who shall have been appointed to act in any bankruptcy, the court shall have power to appoint another official assignee to act in such bankruptcy.

43. That the court may, at discretion, appoint an official assignee to act with the existing assignees, if any, under any fiat which has been or may be removed into court, and may direct the existing assignees to pay and deliver over to such official assignee all monies, books, papers, and effects whatsoever in their possession or custody as such assignees; and all the real and personal estate of the bankrupt under such fiat shall immediately on such appointment vest in such official assignee jointly with the existing assignees, if any, in like manner as if the proceedings in the bankruptcy had originally been commenced by virtue of this act, without prejudice to any action or suit commenced or any contract entered into by the existing assignees at the time of the commencement of this act.

44. That the court may order and allow to be paid out of any bankrupt's estate, to the official assignee thereof, as a remuneration for his services, such sum as shall, upon consideration of the amount of the bankrupt's property, and the nature of the duties performed by such official assignee, appear to be just and reasonable.

45. That on or before the 1st day of March in every year, if Parliament be then sitting, or, if not, within fourteen days from the commencement of the then next session of Parliament, there shall be laid before Parliament by every official assignee a return, in the form contained in Schedule (B.) to this act annexed, shewing the particulars in such form mentioned in respect of every estate under his charge, and which shall not have been finally wound up, on the 31st day of December in the preceding year; and such return shall be certified by the court, and shall be subject to such further regulation, as to the form of the same or otherwise, as the Lord Chancellor may from time to time think fit to make.

46. And with respect to the messengers, be it enacted, that on the next two occasions of a vacancy in the office of any messenger of the court acting in London the vacancies shall not be filled up; and in such manner the number of messengers acting in London shall be reduced to four.

47. And with respect to the exemption of officers and servants of the court from serving on juries, inquests, and parochial offices, be it enacted, that the chief and every other registrar, the accountant, the master, the official assignees, the messengers, and the ushers shall be exempt and disqualified from serving any parochial office, and from being returned and from serving on any jury or inquest, and shall not be inserted in any list of men qualified or liable to serve as jurors.

And with respect to fees, be it enacted,

48. That every document enumerated in Schedule (C.) to this act annexed shall, from and after the commencement of this act, and in lieu of all fees thereupon, be printed or written upon vellum, parchment, or paper bearing the stamp-duty set opposite to such documents respectively in such Schedule, and having the word "bankruptcy" impressed on every such stamp: provided always, that where any such document shall consist of more than one sheet, only the first sheet thereof shall be impressed with such stamp.

49. That the Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall give the necessary directions for carrying into effect the provisions of this act with respect to stamp-duties in lieu of fees, and shall cause separate and distinct accounts to be kept of all sums of money collected or received by them under the provisions of this act, and of all costs, charges, and expenses incurred by them or by their order in carrying the same into effect; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to pay, and to deduct and retain out of such monies, all such costs, charges, and expenses, and after such deduction they shall from time to time, and in such manner as may by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed, pay over the monies so to be collected and received into the Bank of Eng-and, to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy, to the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account."

50. That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Inland Revenue to appoint such persons as they may think fit for the sale and distribution of stamps under this act, and to allow to them such discount or poundage upon such sale or distribution as may by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed or authorised; and it shall be lawful by any such general rule or order to make regulation for the allowance of such stamps issued under the provisions of this act as may have been spoiled or rendered useless, or unfit for the purpose intended, or for which the owner may have no immediate use, or which through mistake or inadvertence may have been improperly or unnecessarily used, and such allowance shall be made either by giving other stamps in lieu of the stamps so allowed, or by repaying the amount or value to the owner or holder thereof, after deducting the discount or poundage allowed on the sale of stamps of the like kind.

51. That the provisions contained in the several acts for the time being in force relating to stamps under the care or management of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall, (so far as the same are applicable and consistent with the provisions of this act), in all cases not hereby expressly provided for, be of full force and effect with respect to the stamps to be provided under or by virtue of this act, and to the vellum, parchment, or paper on which the same shall be impressed, and shall be applied and put in execution for collecting and securing the sums of money denoted thereby, and for preventing, detecting, and punishing all frauds, forgeries, and other offences relating thereto, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if such provisions had been herein repeated and specially enacted with reference to the said last-mentioned stamps and sums of money respectively.

52. That no document which by this act is required to have a stamp impressed thereon shall be received or filed, or be used in relation to any proceeding in the court, or be of any validity for any purpose whatever, unless or until the same shall have a stamp impressed thereon: provided always, that if at any time it shall appear that any such document which ought to have had a stamp impressed thereon has, through mistake or inadvertence, been received or filed or used without having such a stamp, it shall be lawful for the court, if it think fit, to order that such stamp shall be impressed thereon; and thereupon, when a stamp shall have been impressed on such document in compliance with such order, such document, and every proceeding in reference thereto, shall be as valid and effectual as if such stamp had been impressed thereon in the first instance.

53. That all office copies of fiats, petitions, affidavits, orders, or other proceedings shall be charged for and paid at the rate of 1½*d.* per folio of ninety words, and shall be made and delivered out in such manner as may be directed by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act.

54. That the official assignee of each bankrupt's estate, and every official assignee appointed by the court under any petition for arrangement between a debtor and his creditors, where the estate and effects of such petitioning debtor shall vest in such official assignee, either alone or jointly, in manner hereinafter mentioned, shall pay to the credit of the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account" such sum not less than one-eighth of a pound, and not exceeding 5*l.* per centum on the gross produce from time to time of any such estate; such sum, within the limit aforesaid, and the time or times for payment thereof, to be fixed by the senior commissioner, with the approval of the Lord Chancellor; and the senior commissioner, with the like approval, may from time to time lessen or increase such sum, within the limit aforesaid, as may seem just and reasonable, upon consideration of the amount from time to time standing to the said account, and of the claims from time to time chargeable thereupon.

55. That if at any time it shall appear that the whole of the money laid out on securities, and the stocks, funds, and cash standing in the name of the accountant, shall not be sufficient to answer the demands of any bankrupt or his creditors, or other persons interested therein, then and in such case the sum taken for the purposes and by virtue of this act shall be considered a debt due from the public, and to such extent as may be necessary shall be answered and made good by Parliament accordingly.

And with respect to the payment of salaries, compensations, and retiring annuities, and of travelling and other expenses, be it enacted,

56. That the salaries now paid to the commissioners, the Lord Chancellor's secretary of bankrupts, the chief and every other registrar, the accountant, the master, and the clerks to such secretary, chief registrar, accountant, master, and clerk of inrolments respectively, and the ushers of the court, and the registrar of meetings, and the clerk and trainbearer, ushers and assistant usher of his Honor the Vice-Chancellor sitting in Bankruptcy, shall be paid out of the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account," and the same shall be paid quarterly, free and clear from all taxes and deductions whatsoever, except the tax on income, on the 11th day of January, the 11th day of April, the 11th day of July, and the 11th day of October in every year, by equal portions, the first payment to be made on the 11th day of January next; and if any person for the time being holding either of the said offices shall die, resign, or be removed from the same, the executor or administrator of the person so dying, or the person so resigning or being removed, shall be entitled to receive such proportionable part of his salary as shall have accrued during the time that such person shall have executed his office since the last payment.

57. That all compensations and annuities which shall have been ordered to be paid, and which continue payable under the provisions of former acts relating to bankrupts, and all retiring allowances which shall hereafter become payable under such provisions, shall be charged upon and paid to the persons entitled thereto out of the monies and securities standing to the credit of the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account," and shall be paid and payable to such persons during their natural lives, free from all taxes except the tax on income, in such manner and on such days as the Lord Chancellor may have already ordered or may hereafter order; and in case of the death of any such person, his executor or administrator shall be entitled to receive the proportionate part of such annuity which shall have accrued up to the day of his decease: provided always, that if any of them shall be appointed to and accept any public office or employment of an annual value less than the amount of any such compensation or annuity, they, during the time they may continue in such office or employment, shall be entitled to receive only so much of their compensation or retiring annuity as shall, together with the salary of such new office or employment, be equal to such compensation or retiring annuity; and that if any of them shall be appointed to and accept any public office or employment the salary whereof shall equal or exceed in amount their compensation or retiring annuity, then during the time of their continuance in such office or employment such compensation or retiring annuity shall altogether cease.

58. That all monies paid to the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account" shall be subject to all orders made before the commencement of this act in regard to monies paid or directed to be paid to the account intituled "The Secretary of Bankrupts' Compensation Account," or to the account intituled "The Interest arising from the Bankruptcy Fund Account," or to the account intituled "Fund arising from Fees in Bankruptcy," or with regard to the monies and securities standing in the name of the "Registrar of Meetings," and to such further and other orders as may from time to time be made by the Lord Chancellor for salaries, compensations, retiring annuities, services, rent and repair of courts in the country, the supply of law books and other books and stationery necessary for the use of the courts, for travelling and other expenses, and generally for all and every such expenses incurred in carrying this act into effect as the Lord Chancellor shall think fit, and also to such orders as may be made by the commissioners acting as trustees of the piece or parcel of ground hereinafter mentioned, and of the building called "The Court of Bankruptcy," situate in Basinghall-street, in the city of London.

59. That all accounts of the chief registrar, registrars, accountant, and master, for stationery and other incidental expenses of their respective offices, shall be audited and allowed by some one of the commissioners of the court before any order for the payment thereof shall be obtained.

And with respect to the buildings in which courts are held, be it enacted,

60. That the piece or parcel of ground in Basinghall-street, in the city of London, and the building called "The Court of Bankruptcy" which has been erected thereon, shall from thenceforth be and the same are hereby vested in the commissioners of the court for the time being acting in London, in trust for the purposes of this act.

61. That such building shall continue to be called "The Court of Bankruptcy," and all sittings of the court held in London in any matter under this act, and also all meetings of creditors held in London under any such matter, and so held in pursuance of public advertisement, shall be holden there, unless the court shall in any case otherwise direct.

62. That the commissioners acting as trustees of the said piece or parcel of ground and of the building aforesaid, or the major part of them, shall give and enforce such order and direction for the occupation and use of the several offices or rooms in the said building, and for preserving and keeping the said building and the rooms and offices therein or appurtenant thereto in good condition and repair, and for insuring and keeping the same insured from loss or damage by fire, as they shall from time to time think proper and advisable.

63. That it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor, on the passing of this act, out of the monies and securities then standing to the credit of the account intituled "The Unclaimed Dividend Account," to order repayment to the Treasury of whatever balance may then be remaining due in respect of the several sums advanced for the purchase of the said piece or parcel of ground, and for the erection and fitting up of the said building; and the trustees of the said ground and building, or the major part of them, may thereafter, out of the monies standing to the credit of the account to be opened and intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account," order payment of all expenses incurred for coals and candles for the use of the said building, the expenses of lighting and watching the same, and all taxes, rates, and assessments payable in respect thereof, and of keeping the same in proper condition and repair, and of insurance, and all other annual or occasional and necessary expenses attending the establishment, and may also, with the approval of the Lord Chancellor, order the payment of any charges or expenses that may have been incurred for surveys or plans obtained under the sanction of the Lord Chancellor, and with the view of affording accommodation to the official assignees.

64. That the several buildings which have been provided for the Court of Bankruptcy in the several districts in the country shall be used for the purposes of this act; and such buildings, and such as shall hereafter be provided for such court, in any district in the country, with the appurtenances and effects belonging thereto, shall vest in the respective commissioners acting in such several districts for the time being, in trust for the purposes of this act.

And with respect to persons liable as traders to become bankrupt, be it enacted,

65. That all alum-makers, apothecaries, auctioneers, bankers, bleachers, brokers, brickmakers, builders, calenderers, carpenters, carriers, cattle or sheep salesmen, coach proprietors, cow-keepers, dyers, fullers, keepers of inns, taverns, hotels, or coffee-houses, limeburners, livery-stable keepers, market gardeners, millers, packers, printers, shipowners, shipwrights, victuallers, warehousemen, wharfingers, persons using the trade or profession of a scrivener receiving other men's monies or estates into their trust or custody, persons insuring ships or their freight or other matters against perils of the sea, and all persons using the trade of merchandise by way of bargaining, exchange, bartering, commission, consignment, or otherwise, in gross or by retail, and all persons who, either for themselves or as agents or factors for others, seek their living by buying and selling, or by buying and letting for hire, or by the workmanship of goods or commodities, shall be deemed traders liable to become bankrupt: provided that no farmer, grazier, common labourer, or workman for hire, receiver-general of the taxes, or member of or subscriber to any incorporated commercial or trading company established by charter or act of Parliament, shall be deemed as such a trader liable to become bankrupt.

66. That if any such trader having privilege of Parliament shall commit any act of bankruptcy, he may be dealt with under this act in like manner as any other trader; but such person shall not be subject to be arrested or imprisoned during the time of such privilege, except in cases made felonies or misdemeanours by this act.

And with respect to acts of bankruptcy in general, be it enacted,

67. That if any trader liable to become bankrupt shall depart this realm, or being out of this realm shall remain abroad, or shall depart from his dwelling-house or otherwise absent himself, or begin to keep his house, or suffer himself to be arrested or taken in execution for any debt not due, or yield himself to prison, or suffer himself to be outlawed, or procure himself to be arrested or taken in execution, or his goods, money, or chattels to be attached, sequestered, or taken in execution, or make or cause to be made, either within this realm or elsewhere, any fraudulent grant or conveyance of any of his lands, tenements, goods, or chattels, or make or cause to be made any fraudulent surrender of any of his copyhold lands or tenements, or make or cause to be made any fraudulent gift, delivery, or transfer of any of his goods or chattels, every such trader doing, suffering, procuring, executing, permitting, making, or causing to be made any of the acts, deeds, or matters aforesaid, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, shall be deemed to have thereby committed an act of bankruptcy.

68. That if any such trader shall execute any conveyance or assignment by deed of all his estate and effects to a trustee or trustees for the benefit of all the creditors of such trader, the execution of such deed shall not be deemed an act of bankruptcy, unless a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy be filed within three months from the execution thereof, provided such deed shall be executed by every such trustee within fifteen days after the execution thereof by the trader, and the execution by the trader and by every such trustee be attested by an attorney or solicitor, and notice thereof be given within one month after the execution thereof by such trader, in case such trader reside in London or within forty miles thereof, in the London Gazette, and also in two London daily newspapers, and in case such trader does not reside within forty miles of London, then in the London Gazette and in one London daily newspaper and one provincial newspaper published near to such trader's residence; and such notice shall contain the date and execution of such deed, and the name and place of abode respectively of every such trustee and attorney or solicitor.

69. That if any such trader, having been arrested or committed to prison for debt, or on any attachment for non-payment of money, shall upon such or any other arrest or commitment for debt or non-payment of money, or upon any detention for debt, lie in prison for twenty-one days, or, having been arrested or committed to prison for any other cause, shall lie in prison for twenty-one days after any detainer for debt lodged against him, and not discharged, every such trader shall thereby be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy; or if any such trader, having been arrested, committed, or detained for debt, shall escape out of prison or custody, every such trader shall be deemed to have thereby committed an act of bankruptcy from the time of such arrest, commitment, or detention.

70. That if any such trader shall file in the office of the Lord Chancellor's secretary of bankrupts a declaration in writing in the form contained in Schedule (D.) to this act annexed, signed by such trader, and attested by an attorney or solicitor, that he is unable to meet his engagements, every such trader shall be deemed thereby to have committed an act of bankruptcy at the time of filing such declaration, provided a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be filed by or against such trader within two months from the filing of such declaration.

71. That if any such trader, after the issuing of any fiat or filing of any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against him, shall pay money to the petitioning creditor, or give or deliver to such petitioning creditor any satisfaction or security for his debt, or for any part thereof, whereby such petitioning creditor may receive more in the pound in respect of his debt than the other creditors, such payment, gift, delivery, satisfaction, or security shall be an act of bankruptcy; and if adjudication of bankruptcy shall have been made under such fiat or petition, the court may either declare such adjudication to be valid, and direct the same to be proceeded in, or may order it to be annulled, and a petition or new petition for adjudication may be filed, and such petition or new petition may be supported either by proof of such last-mentioned or any other act of bankruptcy.

72. That if any plaintiff shall recover judgment in any action personal for the recovery of any debt or money demand, in any of her Majesty's courts of record, against any such trader, and shall be in a situation to sue out execution upon such judgment, and there be nothing due from such plaintiff by way of set-off against such judgment, and such trader shall not, within seven days after notice in writing personally served upon such trader, requiring immediate payment of such judgment debt, pay, secure, or compound for the same to the satisfaction of such plaintiff, every such trader shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy on the eighth day after service of such notice: provided always, that if such execution shall in the mean time be suspended or restrained by any rule, order, or proceeding of any court of justice having jurisdiction in that behalf, no further proceeding shall be had on such notice, but that it shall be lawful nevertheless for such plaintiff, when he shall again be in a situation to sue out execution on such judgment, to proceed again by notice in manner aforesaid.

73. That if any decree or order shall be pronounced in any cause depending in any court of equity, or any order shall be made in any matter of bankruptcy or lunacy, against any such trader, ordering such trader to pay any sum of money, and such trader shall disobey such decree or order, the same having been duly served upon him, the person entitled to receive such sum under such decree or order, or interested in enforcing the payment thereof pursuant thereto, may apply to the court by which the same shall have been pronounced to fix a peremptory day for the payment of such money, which shall accordingly be fixed by an order for that purpose; and if such trader, being personally served with such last-mentioned order seven days before the day therein appointed for payment of such money, shall neglect to pay the same, every such trader shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy on the eighth day after the service of such order.

74. That the filing of a petition in the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors in England by any such trader who shall be in actual custody for his discharge from custody, and who shall apply by petition to such court for his discharge from custody, according to the laws for the relief of insolvent debtors in England, shall be deemed to be an act of bankruptcy from the time of filing such petition; and any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy filed against such trader, and under which he shall be adjudged bankrupt, before the time appointed by the said Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, and advertised in the London Gazette, for such prisoner to be brought up to be dealt with according to the laws for the relief of insolvent debtors in England, or at any time within two months from the time of making any order vesting the estate and effects of any such prisoner in the provisional assignee of such court, whether upon the petition of such prisoner or the petition of a creditor, shall have the effect of divesting the real and personal estate and effects of such person out of the provisional assignee: provided always, that the filing of such petition shall not be deemed an act of bankruptcy, unless such trader be adjudged bankrupt before the time so advertised as aforesaid, or within such two months as aforesaid.

75. That the filing of a petition under an act passed in the 11 & 12 Vict. [c. 21], intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Insolvent Debtors in India," by any trader liable to become bankrupt under this act, and the adjudication of an act of insolvency under that act, shall, for the purposes of this act, be accounted and adjudged conclusive evidence of an act of bankruptcy committed by such trader at the time of filing such petition, or of filing the petition on which the adjudication of an act of insolvency shall be made; and any creditor or creditors of such trader whose debt or debts shall be of sufficient amount to enable him or them to petition for adjudication of bankruptcy under this act may, at any time within two months after notice of the insolvency shall have been given in the London Gazette as directed by the said act for amending the laws relating to insolvent debtors in India, petition for adjudication of bankruptcy under this act against such trader, under which petition all such proceedings may be had and taken as are authorised and directed by this act, subject to such exceptions and provisions as are contained in the last-mentioned act in this behalf.

LONDON, OCTOBER 6, 1849.

A case has been recently decided by the Court of Queen's Bench (Doe d. Clay v. Jones, 13 Jur., part 1, p. 824) which shews one way, at least, in which terms for years may be kept on foot, in spite of the Assignment of Term Act, (8 & 9 Vict. c. 119). The case was, as stated by the Court, that "in 1838 Mary Humphreys, with others, mortgaged the premises in question for 1000 years to Davis. In 1839 she conveyed the fee for 1*l.*, subject to this mortgage term, to her daughter Caroline, the wife of the defendant; and this conveyance was unknown to the parties to the subsequent deeds. In 1842 she mortgaged the premises in fee to Minshall. In October, 1844, she conveyed the equity of redemption, after these mortgages, to Clay, the lessor of the plaintiff, with power to Meredith Humphreys to become jointly entitled. In December, 1844, Minshall assigned the mortgage of the fee to Richard Thompson; and the representatives of Davis, who had died, assigned the term of 1000 years to John Thompson, as trustee, there being a further advance on mortgage by Richard Thompson to Clay, and the term was declared to be 'to secure the mortgage-money to, and afterwards to be re-conveyed as Clay and Meredith Humphreys should direct.' In September, 1847, a part of the premises being required for a railway, Clay received the purchase-money from the company, and therewith paid off the mortgagees." And the judgment was as follows:—"It is not necessary to decide whether the defendant, claiming to have the fee, can maintain that this is a satisfied term, the satisfaction of the mortgages having been made not by him, but by Clay, under a mistaken belief that the equity of redemption in fee had been conveyed to himself; because we are of opinion that this term is not within either of the alternatives in the statute for determining terms. It is not attendant on the inheritance by express declaration, there being no such declaration; neither is it by construction of law, for the trust is expressly declared to be for Clay and Humphreys, who have not the inheritance; and although they were supposed to be entitled thereto when the deed was executed, that supposition is now proved to have been founded on a mistake. That mistaken supposition has no effect upon the express words of the instrument. Therefore this rule must be discharged."

If this be the true reading of the statute, it lets in the very doctrine of the old law, against the evils of which the statute is believed to have been directed. "The principle," say the Real Property Commissioners, "upon which protection is afforded by the assignment of a term is founded upon certain rules of equity. When the legal estate is vested in a trustee, he, and all persons to whom it passes as his representatives, or under a voluntary conveyance, or with any knowledge of the trust, are considered to be bound in conscience to perform the trust; but a purchaser for valuable consideration, who obtains a conveyance of the legal estate without notice of the trust, is not considered to be under any such obligation. When the owner of a legal estate has made a conveyance of it for valuable consideration, if he attempt to make a subsequent conveyance, it can have no effect. When the owner of the equitable estate sells it to one person, and afterwards sells it to another, who is ignorant of the former sale, and neither of them has obtained a conveyance of the legal estate, the first purchaser is preferred, according to the maxim 'Qui prior est tempore potior est jure;' but if the second purchaser obtain the legal estate, he thereby defeats the right of the first purchaser; it being considered that the second purchaser, who has paid the value of the estate without knowledge of the former sale, has a right in conscience equal in degree to that of the first purchaser; and it is an established maxim, that between equal equities the law shall prevail. If the purchaser procure the legal estate to be transferred to a trustee of his own nomination, who accepts the estate upon trusts declared by the assignment, this, for the purposes of protection, is held equivalent to the purchaser having the legal estate himself; and it may be observed, that in some cases the protection is obtained by means which are held to give the purchaser a preferable right to call for the legal estate, without his procuring an actual conveyance of it." And then they go on to point out the evils of this mode of protecting a puisne purchaser for valuable consideration, without notice.

Now, if what the act means was, that a satisfied term should or should not cease at the pleasure of the person having the control of the trustee of the term, the act is at least strangely worded for effecting such a purpose, and would manifestly be a dead letter as to putting an end to outstanding terms; since, before the act, parties might always destroy a term if they desired it, and kept it usually on foot, because they thought there was some benefit in so doing; and the passing of an act merely giving them power to do what they might do without it, and did not choose to do, is not likely to make them do so any more than they did before. The act must have meant something more; and the question is, did it not mean to destroy as far as possible the existence of satisfied terms? Could it mean to say that a satisfied term—which, if nothing was done with it, or if, in an assignment of it, nothing was said of its destination, would, as a matter of course, before the act, attend the inheritance, and be by the act determined—should be kept on foot by an assignment of it to a stranger to the inheritance—an assignment which was always inconsistent with the trust, and was, before the act, only supported on principles, to the operation of which, it was the very intention of the statute to put an end? The whole principle of the old law was, that if a puisne purchaser of an equity for valuable consideration, without notice, could any how get hold of the legal estate, it should not be taken from him. It never was pretended that it mattered at all whether the transfer to or for him of the legal estate was a breach of trust or not; nor was it ever pretended, that, in general, the transfer could be other than a breach of trust, or at least a transfer inconsistent with the trust. Now, if the statute meant to abolish the principle of protection to the purchaser by getting hold of a dry legal estate, how can it matter whether the assignment of the satisfied term is to a trustee to attend the inheritance, or to a trustee without saying for what purpose, or to a trustee to do therewith as he shall be directed by the person who is a puisne purchaser—in fact, a stranger to the inheritance? The act, we should have conceived, in the absence of the decision in Doe d. Clay v. Jones, contemplated two things that might be done with a satisfied term: the parties might wish to make it attend the inheritance, and the act says they shall not keep it on foot, although they express their desire to do so by declaring that it shall attend the inheritance; or the parties might otherwise act, and then the statute looks to see, not whether they intended the term to attend the inheritance, but whether it does do so. Now, there can be no question that a term attending the inheritance of A., being assigned to B. with notice then of A.'s estate, does, in the hands of B., whatever may be his moral equity as to the inheritance become a term in trust to attend A.'s inheritance; and no jugglery of words can prevent such being the fact. That B., the puisne purchaser, was permitted to repudiate the right of his cestui que trust, and hold against him, was the privilege given to him by the old law in regard to his equal moral equity—the very privilege which the act was certainly intended to destroy. If the case now commented upon be good law, parties in order to keep a term on foot, have only to assign it in trust for, or to the order of, the puisne purchaser and may so avoid the statute.

After the foregoing observations were in type we received a contribution on the same subject, which we print because it tends to shew that the constructio which we have deduced from the general scope an spirit of the act, is consistent with the strict technic import of its language.

THE REVIVAL OF ATTENDANT TERMS B THE COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

A learned conveyancer, who was lately ask whether he took in "Punch," replied that he w obliged to buy the "Queen's Bench Reports," a found one comic periodical enough. In our la number we anticipated Messrs. Adolphus & Ellis the publication of one of those real property ca which constitute the amusing feature of their wor The case in question (Doe d. Clay v. Jones, 13 Ju 824) has probably escaped the attention of our ne conveyancing readers; and we now refer to it, n so much for the sake of the fun, which is somewh ponderous, but by way of warning, as it is the first a series of mischievous practical jokes which will pr bably be played off under cover of the Attendant Ter Act, (8 & 9 Vict. c. 112), an act whereby, as Parke, observed in a late case, (Doe d. Cadwalader v. Pri 1 Exch. 614, 11 Jur. 134), the Legislature has throw upon the courts of law the duty of a court of equi without the adequate machinery.

In 1838, Mary Humphreys, being owner in fee the lands in dispute, mortgaged them to Davis fo term of years to secure 60*l*. In 1842 she made a co veyance of the fee to Minshall, upon trust to secure Davis the 60*l*., and a further sum of 40*l*. In Octob 1844, in consideration of 18*l*., she made a conveyan of the equity of redemption to Clay; and by the de (in which neither Minshall nor the representatives Davis joined) it was declared, that upon payment the 100*l*. and interest owing to the executors of D vis it should be lawful for Minshall and the executo of Davis to convey all their estate and interest in t premises to Clay, or as he should direct. In Decemb 1844, Thompson advanced 100*l*. to pay off the executo of Davis, and, by way of security for that and a furth advance, took an assignment of the term to himse from the executors of Davis, and a conveyance of t fee from Minshall and Clay and one Meredith Humphreys (who had purchased a moiety of the equity of redemption) to a trustee; and by the proviso for redemption it was declared, that, on payment of the mortgage-debt, the term should be assigned according to the direction of Clay and Humphreys. On the 31st December, 1845, the 1st section of the Attendant Terms Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 112) came into operation, and on the 1st January, 1846, the 2nd section of that act came into operation. In 1847, Clay and Humphreys paid the principal and interest owing to Thompson, but took no re-conveyance or assignment. On ejectment on the demises of (among others) Thompson and the trustee of the term, the defendant relied on a conveyance in fee made to his wife by Mary Humphreys, for a valuable consideration, in 1839, which conveyance had not been disclosed to the grantees in the subsequent deeds. It was argued for the plaintiffs, that the term of years created in 1838 was still subsisting, so as to entitle the plaintiffs to recover on the demise of Thompson, the trustee of that term; and of this opinion was the Court of Queen's Bench. During the argument, Patteson, J., said, "I have great doubt whether this is a satisfied term; the real owner of the inheritance did not pay off the mortgage." But to that it was answered, by the counsel for the defendant, that the debt was paid, and paid by one who had taken upon himself the responsibility of a debtor; and the decision proceeded on the ground, that the term, if satisfied, was not attendant. "It is not necessary to decide whether the defendant, claiming to have the fee, can maintain that this is a satisfied term, the satisfaction of the mortgages having been made not by him, but by Clay, under a mistaken belief that the equity of redemption in fee had been conveyed to himself; because we are of opinion that this term is not within either of the alternatives in the statute for determining terms. It is not attendant on the inheritance by express declaration, there being no such declaration; neither is it by construction of law, for the trust is expressly declared to be for Clay and Humphreys, who have not the inheritance; and although they were supposed to be entitled thereto when the deed was executed, that supposition is now proved to have been founded on a mistake. That mistaken supposition has no effect upon the express words of the instrument."

Hence it appears that the fear half expressed by Parke, B., in Doe v. Price, was not groundless; and that the Legislature, in leaving the construction of the statute to the courts of law, has placed them in the position of a bull in a china-shop, from which they are not likely to escape with credit, until they adopt the expedient of sending all cases on attendant terms for the opinion of the Court of Chancery.

To a conveyancer nothing is at once more familiar in practice, and more indefensible in principle, than the doctrine of attendant terms. One branch of it was thus expounded by Sir W. Grant, in deciding that a satisfied term not "got in" by a purchaser should not be used at law against the vendor's widow claiming her dower. (Maundrell v. Maundrell, 7 Ves. 577). "Equity regards the purposes for which the term is created and subsists, and if it is only for the benefit of the owner of the inheritance, it is considered part of the inheritance, not, indeed, absolutely merged, but so attendant upon it as to follow and acompany it and every right and interest growing out of it either by operation of law or by voluntary agreement of parties. Equity ought not therefore to permit such a term to be in any case used against the owner of the inheritance, either of the whole or a part of the inheritance; for the uses adapt and accommodate themselves to all the interests which arise out of that inheritance with which, in contemplation of equity, the term for most purposes is considered incorporated. Every description therefore of ownership shall, in its order, degree, and proportion, have a use in the term commensurate with the interest existing in the inheritance." On the rehearing of the same case, Lord Eldon carried the explanation a little further. (10 Ves. 259). "I collect from all the authorities, that, when the purposes of the trust are once satisfied in equity, the ownership of the term belongs to the owner of the inheritance, whether declared by the original conveyance to attend the inheritance or not. It is not unusual to insert that express declaration in the original conveyance. It is not uncommon to omit that. But whether it is inserted or not, the doctrine of equity is the same—that the term will attend the inheritance. As to other persons having interests in the inheritance, as contradistinguished from the dowress, that is very largely treated in Willoughby v. Willoughby. It is clear from that case, that if there is a mortgage of the inheritance, and a prior mortgagee, of whose title the other has no notice, if the subsequent mortgagee can get in a term satisfied, or, according to the later cases, not satisfied, by an assignment to trustees for him, he can protect himself against the prior incumbrancer, unless there are circumstances that give that incumbrancer a better right to call for an assignment, as there may be."

A few extracts from Lord Hardwicke's celebrated judgment in Willoughby v. Willoughby (1 T. R. 766) will complete our somewhat trite citations of authority on this subject.

"Though in all these cases this Court considers the trust of the term as annexed to the inheritance, yet the legal estate of the term is always kept separate from it, and must be so, otherwise it would be merged. And this gives the Court an opportunity to make use of such terms as a guard and protection to an equitable owner of the inheritance against mesne conveyances which would carry the fee at common law, or to a person who is both legal and equitable owner of the inheritance, against such mesne incumbrances as he ought not to be affected with in conscience. And here the Court often disannexes the trust of the term from the strict legal fee," [but still describes the term as attendant on the inheritance.] Again, if the purchaser of the inheritance "has no notice, and happens to take a defective conveyance of the inheritance—defective either by reason of some prior conveyance or of some prior charge or incumbrance; and if he also take an assignment of the term to a trustee for him, or to himself where he takes the conveyance of the inheritance to his trustee, in both these cases he shall have the benefit of the term to protect him; that is, he may make use of the legal estate of the term to defend his possession, or if he has lost the possession to recover it, at common law, notwithstanding that his adversary may, at law, have the strict title to the inheritance." . . . . "Thirdly, it was objected further, that this is to sever the trust of the term from the inheritance, and to leave the title of the inheritance to go one, and the trust of the term another way: that this was not in the power of the owner of the inheritance after his first conveyance, nor of the trustee, nor of both joining together. It is not necessary here to enter into the discussion of all the cases where a term once attendant upon the inheritance may be disannexed, and be turned into a term in gross. It is certain that it may be done at any time by the absolute owner of the inheritance; and so it is admitted by Serjeant Maynard, in his argument of The Duke of Norfolk's case; or it may be made to become a term in gross upon a contingency, according to the resolution of that case. But here is no question of severing or disannexing, for the defendant Cripps, the second mortgagee of the fee, claims the term as attendant upon the inheritance in him. In this court, had he come in without notice, he must be considered as a purchaser of it pro tanto by his mortgage. He contracted for the six-sevenths of the inheritance, and paid his money for it; and though he had the misfortune, ignorantly and innocently, to take a defective title to the inheritance, still it is the thing he bought, and desires to protect. If this were otherwise, it would prevent every puisne mortgagee or purchaser, who has got an assignment of an attendant term, from making use of it in his defence." . . . . "The trust arising from the attendancy is to protect against mesne incumbrances, that is to say, mesne between the creation of the term and the assignment or the use that is made of it."

From all this it appears, as every equity lawyer knows, that, though at law there can be but one title, there may be in equity a dozen conflicting titles to the same inheritance, all equally good, except in point of priority; so that if there were a dozen outstanding terms of years, each of the supposed equitable inheritances might have one of those terms attendant upon it, either by express declaration or by construction of law, (that is to say, construction of equity). The mistake committed by the Court of Queen's Bench in the above case was simply that of supposing that an attendant term is attendant on the legal inheritance, instead of being attendant upon an equitable title or claim to the inheritance, which may or may not co-exist with the legal fee in the same person, and which may even be inferior, in point of priority or otherwise, to a conflicting equitable title to the fee in another person.

In Doe v. Jones the term in question had been created to secure a debt to Davis. Subsequently Davis became entitled in equity to the inheritance as a security for the old debt and a further advance, (subject to a prior title in the defendant's wife, which did not affect his conscience); and then the term, if not satisfied, (a point upon which some argument might be made), certainly became attendant upon the fee in Davis, and in 1844 the term and the equitable fee became vested in Thompson, the former being still attendant on the latter. In the mean time, Clay and Humphreys had purchased the equitable inheritance, subject to the mortgage; and when, in 1847, they paid off the mortgage, the term was without doubt satisfied, and would have become attendant upon their equitable title to the fee by construction of equity, if the proviso for redemption in the transfer-deed of 1844 had not by anticipation expressly declared the same thing. It is true that the mortgage debt secured by the deed of 1838 was not satisfied and extinguished in the equity of redemption to all intents and purposes, but remained available as a protection pro tanto in equity against the mesne title of Mrs. Jones; but that did not prevent the object of the term, which had been created for the purpose of securing a debt, from being satisfied by the payment of that debt by persons who paid, not for the purpose of taking a transfer of the security, but with intent to discharge the land from it.

We need scarcely add, that the statute 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, is expressly confined to satisfied terms which are attendant on the inheritance either by express declaration or by construction of law [equity], not, as the Court of Queen's Bench seems to have supposed, for the purpose of making the act entirely nugatory by confining it to cases where the person entitled to the benefit of the term is also entitled to the legal inheritance, and could not want the term if the law would let him have it, but for the purpose of excluding from its operation terms of years, which, though satisfied, are not attendant on any inheritance, but have become, by some of the means referred to by Lord Hardwicke in Willoughby v. Willoughby, terms disannexed or in gross.

The decision is unlucky, because, until it is reversed or overruled, cautious practitioners will consider themselves obliged to take assignments of satisfied terms in all cases, in the same manner as if the act had never passed.

PUBLIC GENERAL STATUTES.

12 & 13 Victoriæ.—Session 2.

76. That the filing of a petition by any such trader for an arrangement between such trader and his creditors, under the provisions of this act with respect to arrangements between debtor and creditor under the superintendence and control of the court, shall be accounted and adjudged conclusive evidence of an act of bankruptcy committed by such trader at the time of filing such petition, provided a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be filed against him within two months after such petition for arrangement shall have been dismissed: provided also, that no adjudication shall be made on any such act of bankruptcy unless and until after such petition for arrangement shall have been dismissed.

77. That if any creditor or creditors of any such trader having privilege of Parliament to an amount hereinafter declared to be requisite to support a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, shall file an affidavit in any court of record at Westminster that such debt is justly due to him, and that such debtor, as he verily believes, is such trader, and shall sue out of the same court a writ of summons, in the form contained in Schedule (E.) to this act annexed, against such trader, and serve him with a copy of such summons, if such trader shall not, within one month after personal service of such summons, pay, secure, or compound for such debt to the satisfaction of such creditor or creditors, or enter into a bond in such sum, and with two sufficient sureties, as any of the judges of the court out of which such summons shall issue shall approve of, to pay such sum as shall be recovered in such action, together with such costs as shall be given in the same, and within one month next after personal service of such summons cause an appearance to be entered to such action in the proper court in which the same shall have been brought, every such trader shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy from the time of the service of such summons.

And with respect to acts of bankruptcy by reason of non-payment after summons of the court, and the proceedings thereupon, be it enacted,

78. That if any creditor of any such trader shall file an affidavit in the court in the district in which such trader shall reside, in the form specified in Schedule (F.) hereunto annexed, of the truth of his debt, and of the debtor, as he verily believes, being such trader, and of the delivery to such trader personally, or to some adult inmate at his usual or last known place of abode or business, of an account in writing of the particulars of his demand, with a notice thereunder requiring immediate payment thereof, in the form specified in Schedule (G.) annexed to this act, it shall be lawful for the court in which such affidavit shall be filed to issue a summons in writing, in the form contained in Schedule (H.) annexed to this act, calling upon such trader to appear before such court, and stating in such summons the purpose for which such trader is called upon to appear as hereinafter provided: provided always, that if the demand of a creditor appear by such affidavit to be due from two or more persons carrying on trade in partnership, the delivery of such account and notice to any one of the partners personally, or to some adult inmate at his usual or last known place of abode or business, and also at the place of business of the firm, as aforesaid, shall be sufficient to authorise the court to issue such summons against any other of such partners, as well as against the partner served personally with such account and notice.

79. That upon the appearance of any such trader so summoned as aforesaid it shall be lawful for the court to require him to state whether or not he admits the demand of the creditor, or any and what part thereof, and if such trader shall admit such demand, or any part thereof, to reduce such admission into writing in the form contained in Schedule (I.) annexed to this act; and such admission so reduced into writing such trader is hereby required to sign, and, being so signed, the same shall thereupon be filed in such court; and it shall also be lawful for the court to allow such trader upon his said appearance to make a deposition upon oath, in writing under his hand, to be filed in such court, in the form contained in Schedule (J.) annexed to this act, that he verily believes he has a good defence upon the merits to such demand, or to some and what part thereof; and in such case it shall be lawful for the court at the same time to require such trader to enter into a bond, according to the form contained in Schedule (K.) to this act annexed, in such sum and with such two sufficient sureties as the court shall approve of, to pay such sum or sums as shall be recovered, together with such costs as shall be given, in any action which shall have been or shall be brought for the recovery of such demand, or of any part thereof in respect of which such deposition shall be made.

80. That if any such trader so summoned as aforesaid shall not come before the court at the time appointed, (having no lawful impediment made known to and proved to the satisfaction of the court, and allowed), or if any such trader, upon his appearance to such summons, or at any enlargement or adjournment thereof, shall refuse to admit such demand, and shall not make a deposition, in the form aforesaid, that he believes he has a good defence upon the merits to such demand, or some part thereof, and (if required by the court so to do) enter into such bond as last aforesaid, then and in either of the said cases, if such trader shall not, within seven days after personal service of such summons, or within such enlarged time as may be granted to him in that behalf, pay, secure, or compound for such demand to the satisfaction of such creditor, or enter into a bond, in such sum and with two sufficient sureties as such court shall approve of, to pay such sum as shall be recovered in any action which shall have been brought or shall thereafter be brought for the recovery of the same, together with such costs as shall be given in such action, as the case may be, every such trader shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy on the eighth day after service of such summons, provided a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be filed against such trader within two months from the filing of such affidavit.

81. That if any such trader so summoned as aforesaid shall upon his appearance sign and file an admission of such demand in form aforesaid, and shall not within seven days next after the filing of such admission pay or tender and offer to pay to such creditor the amount of such demand, or secure or compound for the same to the satisfaction of the creditor, every such trader shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy on the eighth day after the filing of such admission, provided a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be filed against such trader within two months from the filing of such affidavit.

82. That if any such trader so summoned as aforesaid shall upon his appearance sign an admission for part only of such demand in the form aforesaid, and shall not make a deposition in the form aforesaid that he believes he has a good defence upon the merits to the residue of such demand, and (if required by the court so to do) enter into such bond as aforesaid to pay such sum or sums as shall be recovered, together with such costs as shall be given, in any such action as aforesaid for the recovery of such residue, then and in such case, if such trader, as to the sum so admitted, shall not, within seven days next after the filing of such admission, pay or tender and offer to such creditor the sum so admitted, or secure or compound for the same to the satisfaction of the creditor, and as to the residue of such demand shall not, within seven days after personal service of such summons, or within such enlarged time as may be granted to him in that behalf, pay, secure, or compound for the same to the satisfaction of such creditor, or enter into a bond, in such sum and with two sufficient sureties as the court shall approve of, to pay such sum as shall be recovered in any action which shall have been brought or shall thereafter be brought for the recovery of the same, together with such costs as shall be given in such action, every such trader shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy on the eighth day after service of such summons, provided a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be filed against such trader within two months from the filing of such affidavit.

83. That if any such trader so summoned as aforesaid shall upon his appearance refuse to sign the admission in that behalf required, whatever may be the nature of his statement, or whether he makes any statement or not, it shall be deemed, for the purposes of this act, that every such trader thereby refuses to admit such demand: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the court, upon reasonable cause shewn, to enlarge the time for calling upon such trader to state whether or not he admits such demand, or any part thereof, and for entering into such bond, or for any or either of such matters, for such time as the court shall think fit.

84. That an admission of any debt made after such summons, and signed by any such trader elsewhere than before the court, may be filed in court, and shall be of the same force and effect to all intents and purposes as an admission signed by such trader on his appearance in court, provided such admission be made in the form contained in Schedule (L.) to this act annexed, and there be present some attorney of one of her Majesty's superior courts of law on behalf of such trader, expressly named by him and attending at his request, to inform him of the effect of such admission before the same is signed by such trader, and provided also that such attorney do subscribe his name thereto as a witness to the due execution thereof, and in such attestation declare himself to be attorney for the said trader, and state therein that he subscribes as such attorney.

85. That where any such trader against whom an affidavit of debt is filed by any creditor as aforesaid shall be summoned to appear before the court in which such affidavit shall be filed, every such creditor or trader shall have such costs as the court in its discretion shall think fit, or the court may direct the costs of either party of, incident to, or attendant upon such affidavit and summons to abide the event of any action which shall have been brought or shall thereafter be brought for the recovery of such demand or any part thereof, and in such case such costs shall be costs in the cause, and recovered under the judgment and execution in such action.

86. That in every action brought after the commencement of this act, wherein any such creditor is plaintiff and any such trader is defendant, and wherein the plaintiff shall not recover the full amount of the sum for which he shall have filed an affidavit of debt as aforesaid, such defendant shall be entitled to costs of suit, to be taxed according to the custom of the court in which such action shall have been brought, provided that it shall be made appear to the satisfaction of the court in which such action is brought, upon motion to be made in court for that purpose, and upon hearing the parties by affidavit, that the plaintiff in such action had not any reasonable or probable cause for making such affidavit of debt in such amount as aforesaid, and provided such court shall thereupon, by rule or order, direct that such costs shall be allowed to the defendant; and the plaintiff shall, upon such rule or order being made, be disabled from taking out any execution for the sum recovered in any such action, unless the same shall exceed (and then in such sum only as the same shall exceed) the amount of the taxed costs of the defendant in such action; and in case the sum recovered in any such action shall be less than the amount of the costs to be taxed as aforesaid of the defendant, then the defendant shall be entitled, after deducting the sum of money recovered by the plaintiff in such action from the amount of his costs so to be taxed, to take out execution for such costs in like manner as a defendant may now by law have execution for costs in other cases.

87. That if any accredited agent of any body corporate or public company shall have had notice of any act of bankruptcy, such body corporate or company shall be deemed to have had such notice.

88. That no person shall be liable to become bankrupt by reason of any act of bankruptcy committed more than twelve months prior to the issuing of any fiat in bankruptcy or the filing of any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against him, and that no adjudication of bankruptcy shall be deemed invalid by reason of any act of bankruptcy prior to the debt of the petitioning creditor, provided there be a sufficient act of bankruptcy subsequent to such debt.

And with respect to the proceedings before adjudication of bankruptcy, be it enacted,

89. That proceedings to obtain adjudication of bankruptcy shall be by petition, (such petition, if presented by a creditor, being in the form specified in the Schedule (M.) to this act annexed, and the truth thereof verified by the affidavit of the petitioner in the form specified in the Schedule (N.) to this act annexed, and if presented by a trader, being in the form specified in the Schedule (O.) to this act annexed, and the truth thereof verified by the affidavit of such trader in the form specified in the Schedule (N.) to this act annexed); and every such petition shall be filed of record and prosecuted as directed by this act; and from and after the filing of such petition the court shall by virtue of this act, and without any commission, fiat, or special authority whatsoever, have full power and authority to take such order and direction with the body of the bankrupt as mentioned in this act, as also with all his lands, tenements, and hereditaments, both within this realm and abroad, as well copy or customary hold as freehold, which he shall have in his own right before he became bankrupt, as also with all such interest in any such lands, tenements, and hereditaments as such bankrupt may lawfully depart withal, and with all his money, fees, offices, annuities, goods, chattels, wares, merchandise, and debts, wheresoever they may be found or known, and to make or order sale thereof in manner herein mentioned, or otherwise order the same for satisfaction and payment of the creditors of the bankrupt.

90. That every petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against or by any trader liable to become bankrupt shall be filed and prosecuted in the court within the district of which such trader shall have resided or carried on business for six months next immediately preceding the time of filing such petition, except where otherwise in this act specially provided: provided always, that the senior commissioner shall have power, whenever he may deem it expedient, to order any petition against or by any trader to be prosecuted in any district with or without reference to the district in which the trader shall have resided or carried on business, or to consolidate the proceedings, or any part thereof, under two or more petitions for adjudication of bankruptcy, or to impound any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, and the proceedings thereunder, or any part thereof, upon such terms as the senior commissioner shall think fit, or to transfer any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, and the proceedings thereunder, and the prosecution or the further prosecution thereof, from the court in any one district to the court in any other district, and the court to which any such transfer shall be made may remove the official assignee, and appoint a new official assignee to any such bankruptcy; and any such order by the senior commissioner may be in such of the forms contained in the Schedules (P.), (Q.), or (R.) to this act annexed as may be adapted to the case, or to the like effect.

91. That the amount of the debt of any creditor petitioning for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be as follows; that is to say, the single debt of such creditor, or of two or more persons being partners, so petitioning, shall amount to 50*l.* or upwards, and the debt of two creditors so petitioning shall amount to 70*l.* or upwards, and the debt of three or more creditors so petitioning shall amount to 100*l.* or upwards; and every person who has given credit to any trader upon valuable consideration for any sum payable at a certain time, which time shall not have arrived when such trader committed an act of bankruptcy, may so petition or join in petitioning, whether he shall have had any security in writing for such sum or not.

92. That a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against any trader indebted in the amount aforesaid to any copartnership duly authorised to sue and be sued in the name of a public officer of such copartnership, may be filed by such public officer as the nominal petitioner for and on behalf of such copartnership.

93. That any trader liable to become bankrupt may petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against himself: provided always, that unless such trader shall forthwith, after the filing of his petition, and before adjudication of bankruptcy thereunder, make it appear to the satisfaction of the court that his available estate is sufficient to pay his creditors at least 5*s.* in the pound, clear of all charges (to be estimated by the court) of prosecuting the bankruptcy, such petition shall be dismissed, and no further petition shall be filed by such trader in the same district without the leave of the court first obtained for that purpose, and the adjudication on any further petition shall be subject to the like condition as aforesaid as to the available estate of the trader.

94. That every petition for adjudication of bankruptcy presented to the court in London shall be filed in the office of the chief registrar, and such chief registrar shall immediately cause the same to be entered in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, to be called "The General Docket Book," (which book shall be in the form contained in Schedule (S.); and every such petition shall be allotted, in such manner as may by any general rule or order made in pursuance of this act be directed, to one of the commissioners of the court, and it shall be transmitted forthwith to the registrar attending such commissioner, who, when adjudication shall have been made, shall deliver to the chief registrar a duplicate of such adjudication, in order that the same may be minuted in the general docket book; and all petitions presented to the court in the country districts shall be filed with the respective registrars thereof, who shall in like manner enter the same in similar docket books, (one of which shall be kept in each court), and in districts where there is more than one commissioner one of such commissioners or one of the registrars shall allot the petitions by ballot, or in such manner as the commissioners of such district court may from time to time direct.

95. That the registrars acting in the country shall transmit daily by post to the chief registrar copies of all entries made by them in their docket books, and of all adjudications made in the respective district courts, and the chief registrar shall immediately on the receipt thereof cause the same to be entered in the general docket book; and when any fiat or petition in prosecution in any of the courts, or any adjudication of bankruptcy made therein, shall have been superseded, dismissed, or annulled, or when the time allowed to any petitioning creditor for proceeding shall have been extended, the registrar in attendance on the commissioner making such order shall forthwith transmit a certified copy thereof to the chief registrar, who shall cause the same to be minuted in the general docket book.

96. That if the petitioning creditor in any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall not proceed and obtain adjudication within three days after his petition shall have been filed, or within such extended time as shall be allowed by the court, the court may at any time within fourteen days then next following, upon the application of any other creditor to the amount required to constitute a petitioning creditor, proceed to adjudicate on such petition, upon the proof of the debt of such creditor, and of the other requisites to support such petition, (except the debt of the petitioning creditor); but if neither the petitioner nor any other creditor shall within such fourteen days, or within such extended time as may be granted by the court for that purpose, apply to the court to adjudicate upon such petition, no further proceeding shall be taken thereon.

97. That any creditor whose debt is sufficient to entitle him to petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against all the partners of any firm may petition for such adjudication against one or more partners of such firm, and every such petition shall be valid, although it does not include all the partners of the firm; and in every petition for adjudication against two or more persons the court may dismiss the same as to one or more of such persons, and the validity of such petition shall not be thereby affected as to any person as to whom such petition is not ordered to be dismissed, nor shall any such person's certificate be thereby affected.

98. That after a fiat issued, or a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy filed, against or by one or more member or members of a firm, any petition or petitions for adjudication of bankruptcy against or by any other member or members of such firm shall be filed and prosecuted in the court in which the first fiat or petition was prosecuted; and immediately after the adjudication under such other petition or petitions all the estate, real and personal, of such bankrupt or bankrupts shall vest in the official assignee and the creditors' assignee (if any) under the first fiat or petition; and thereafter all separate proceedings under such petition or petitions shall be stayed, and such petition or petitions shall, without affecting the validity of the first fiat or petition, be annexed to and form part of the same; provided that the senior commissioner may direct that such other petition or petitions shall be filed and prosecuted in any other court, or be proceeded in either separately or in conjunction with the first fiat or petition; and such direction shall be made by a memorandum to that effect indorsed on such petition or petitions, and under the hand of the senior commissioner.

99. That whenever any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall have been filed against any person, and it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court that there is probable cause for believing that such person is about to quit England or to remove or conceal any of his goods or chattels, with intent to defraud his creditors, unless he be forthwith apprehended, it shall be lawful for the court to issue a warrant, directed to the messenger of the court and his assistants, or to such person or persons as the court shall think fit, whereby such messenger and his assistants, or other person or persons, shall have authority to arrest the person against whom such petition shall have been filed, and also to seize his books, papers, monies, securities for monies, goods, and chattels, wheresoever he or they may be found, and him and them safely keep until the expiration of the time allowed for adjudication on such petition, or until such person shall be adjudged bankrupt under such petition, and be thereon dealt with according to this act: provided always, that any person arrested upon any such warrant, or any person whose books, papers, monies, securities for monies, goods, or chattels have been seized under any such warrant, may apply, at any time after such arrest or seizure, to the court, for an order or rule on the petitioning creditor to shew cause why the person arrested should not be discharged out of custody, or why his books, papers, monies, securities for monies, goods, and chattels should not be delivered up to him; and it shall be lawful for such court to make absolute or discharge such order or rule.

100. That the court, before adjudication, may summon before it any person whom such court shall believe capable of giving any information concerning the trading of or any act of bankruptcy committed by the person against whom any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy has been filed, and may require any person so summoned to produce any books, papers, deeds, and writings, and other documents, in his custody, possession, or power, which may appear to the court to be necessary to establish such trading or act of bankruptcy; and it shall be lawful for the court to examine any such person upon oath, by word of mouth, or interrogatories in writing, concerning such trading and act of bankruptcy.

And with respect to the adjudication of bankruptcy, and the proceedings for securing the property and surrender of the bankrupt, be it enacted,

101. That the court, under a petition filed by a creditor, shall, upon proof of the petitioning creditor's debt, and of the trading and act of bankruptcy of the person against whom such petition is filed, adjudge such person bankrupt; or if in case of the failure of the petitioning creditor to proceed and obtain adjudication within three days after his petition shall have been filed, or within such extended time as may be allowed by the court, another creditor shall apply for adjudication upon such petition, then upon such application, and proof of such creditor's debt, and of the trading and act of bankruptcy of the person against whom such petition is filed, the court shall adjudge such trader bankrupt; and, under a petition filed by a trader, the court, upon the application of such trader, and upon proof of the trading and of the filing a declaration of insolvency, and of the sufficiency of his available estate to the extent required by this act, shall adjudge such trader bankrupt.

102. That forthwith after adjudication the court shall appoint an official assignee to act as hereinbefore provided in this behalf.

103. That if after adjudication of bankruptcy the debt of the petitioning creditor be found by the court to be insufficient to support such adjudication, it shall be lawful for the court, upon the application of any other creditor having proved any debt sufficient to support an adjudication, to order the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy to be proceeded in, and it shall by such order be deemed valid, which order may be in the form contained in Schedule (T.) to this act annexed, or to the like effect.

104. That before notice of any adjudication of bankruptcy shall be given in the London Gazette, and at or before the time of putting in execution any warrant of seizure which shall have been granted upon such adjudication, a duplicate of such adjudication shall be served on the person adjudged bankrupt, personally, or by leaving the same at the usual or last known place of abode or place of business of such person; and such person shall be allowed seven days, or such extended time, not exceeding fourteen days in the whole, as the court shall think fit, from the service of such duplicate, to shew cause to the court against the validity of such adjudication; and if such person shall within such time shew to the satisfaction of the court that the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, and act of bankruptcy upon which such adjudication has been grounded, or any or either of such matters, are insufficient to support such adjudication, and upon such shewing no other creditor's debt, trading, and act of bankruptcy sufficient to support such adjudication, or such of the said last-mentioned matters as shall be requisite to support such adjudication, in lieu of the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, and act of bankruptcy, or any or either of such matters, which shall be deemed insufficient in that behalf, as the case may be, shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court, the court shall thereupon order, (in the form contained in Schedule (U.) to this act annexed, or to the like effect), such adjudication to be annulled, and the same shall by such order be annulled accordingly; but if at the expiration of the said time no cause shall have been shewn to the satisfaction of the court for the annulling of such adjudication, the court shall, forthwith after the expiration of such time, cause notice of such adjudication to be given in the London Gazette, and shall thereby appoint two public sittings of the court for the bankrupt to surrender and conform, the last of which sittings shall be on a day not less than thirty days and not exceeding sixty days from such advertisement, and shall be the day limited for such surrender: provided always, that the court shall have power from time to time to enlarge the time for the bankrupt surrendering himself for such time as the court shall think fit, so as every such order be made six days at least before the day on which such bankrupt was to surrender himself: provided also, that if any person so adjudged bankrupt shall, before the expiration of the time allowed for shewing cause, surrender himself, and give his consent, testified in writing under his hand, to such adjudication being advertised, the court, after such consent so given, shall forthwith cause the notice of adjudication to be advertised, and appoint the sittings for the bankrupt to surrender and conform.

105. That forthwith after the insertion of the notice of adjudication in the Gazette, or, if the bankrupt before the expiration of the time allowed for shewing cause against the adjudication surrender himself and give consent to such insertion, forthwith after such surrender, the bankrupt shall (if thereto required by the official assignee) deliver up to the official assignee, upon oath before the court, or before a master ordinary or extraordinary in Chancery, or justice of the peace, all books of account, papers, and writings relating to his estate in his custody or power, and discover such as are in the custody or power of any other person; and every bankrupt, not in prison or custody, shall at all times after such surrender attend the assignees, upon every reasonable notice in writing for that purpose given by them to him or left at his usual or last known place of abode, and shall assist such assignees in making out the accounts of his estate; and such bankrupt, after he shall have surrendered, may at all seasonable times before the expiration of such time as shall be allowed to him to finish his examination, inspect his books, papers, and writings in the presence of his assignees, or any person appointed by them, and bring with him each time any two persons to assist him; and every such bankrupt, after he shall have obtained his certificate, shall, upon demand in writing given to him or left at his usual or last known place of abode, attend the assignees to settle any accounts between his estate and any debtor to or creditor thereof, or attend any court of record to give evidence touching the same, or do any act necessary for getting in or protecting the said estate, for which attendance he shall be paid 5*s.* per day by the official assignee out of his estate.

106. That in all cases where it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court that there is reason to suspect and believe that any property of any bankrupt is concealed in any house or other place not belonging to such bankrupt, the court may grant a search warrant to the messenger and his assistants, or other person appointed by the court, and it shall be lawful for such messenger and his assistants, or other person, to execute such warrant according to the tenor thereof; and such messenger and his assistants, or other person, shall be entitled to the same protection as is allowed by law in execution of a search warrant for property reputed to be stolen or concealed; and every such search warrant shall be in the form contained in Schedule (V.) to this act annexed, or to the like effect.

107. That no action shall be brought against any messenger or his assistants, or other person appointed by the court, for anything done in obedience to any warrant of the court, unless demand of the perusal and copy of such warrant hath been made or left at the usual place of abode of such messenger or his assistant, or other person, by the party intending to bring such action, or by his attorney or agent, in writing signed by the party demanding the same, and unless the same hath been refused or neglected for six days after such demand; and if after such demand, and compliance therewith, any action be brought against such messenger or assistant, or person so appointed, without making the petitioning creditor defendant, if living, the jury, at the trial of such action, on the production and proof of such warrant, shall give their verdict for the defendant, notwithstanding any defect of jurisdiction in the court by which such warrant shall have been granted; and if such action be brought against the petitioning creditor and the messenger or assistant, or person so appointed, the jury shall, on proof of such warrant, give their verdict for such messenger or assistant, or person so appointed, notwithstanding any such defect of jurisdiction; and if the verdict shall be given against the petitioning creditor the plaintiff shall recover his costs against him, to be taxed so as to include such costs as the plaintiff is liable to pay to the messenger and his assistant, or person so appointed as aforesaid.

108. That in any such action brought against the petitioning creditor, either alone or jointly with any messenger or assistant, or other person so appointed by the court, for anything done in obedience to the warrant of the court, proof by the plaintiff in such action that the defendant or defendants, or any of them, is or are petitioning creditor or creditors, shall be sufficient for the purpose of making such defendant or defendants liable, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the act complained of in such action had been done or committed by such defendant or defendants.

109. That it shall be lawful for any messenger of the court and his assistants acting under warrant of the court to break open any house, chamber, shop, warehouse, door, trunk, or chest of any bankrupt where such bankrupt or any of his property shall be reputed to be, and seize upon the body or property of such bankrupt; and if the bankrupt be in prison or in custody, it shall be lawful for the messenger and his assistants to seize any property of the bankrupt (his necessary wearing apparel only excepted) in the custody or possession of such bankrupt or of any other person, in any prison or place where such bankrupt is in custody.

110. That it shall be lawful for the messenger and his assistants acting under warrant of the court to break open any house, chamber, shop, warehouse, door, trunk, or chest of the bankrupt in Ireland, where any of his property shall be reputed to be, and to seize the same; provided such warrant shall have been verified upon oath before and backed or indorsed by the mayor or chief magistrate of the city, borough, or town corporate where or near to which the same is executed; and provided also, that the messenger shall, before a justice of the peace residing in the county where such property shall be reputed to be, depose upon oath that he is the person named in such warrant.

111. That if in the execution of any such warrant of seizure granted by the court it shall be necessary to break open any house, chamber, shop, warehouse, door, trunk, or chest of the bankrupt in Scotland, where any of the property of such bankrupt shall be reputed to be, or to seize and get possession of such property, such warrant, after having been verified upon oath, may be backed or indorsed by any judge ordinary or justice of the peace in Scotland, who are hereby required, within their respective jurisdictions, to back or indorse the same; and such warrant so indorsed shall be sufficient authority to the messenger or his assistant bringing such warrant, and to all officers of the law in Scotland, to execute the same within the county or burgh wherein it is so indorsed, and in virtue thereof to break open the house, chamber, shop, warehouse, door, trunk, or chest of such bankrupt, and to seize and take possession of such property, to be distributed under the bankruptcy, or otherwise dealt with according to law.

112. That if the bankrupt be not in prison or custody at the date of the adjudication, he shall be free from arrest or imprisonment by any creditor in coming to surrender, and after such surrender during the time by this act limited for such surrender, and for such further time as shall be allowed him for finishing his examination, and for such time after finishing his examination until his certificate be allowed as the court shall from time to time by indorsement upon the summons of such bankrupt think fit to appoint; and whenever any bankrupt is in prison or in custody under any process, attachment, execution, commitment, or sentence, the court may, by warrant directed to the person in whose custody he is confined, cause him to be brought before it at any sitting, either public or private, and if he be desirous to surrender he shall be so brought up, and the expense thereof shall be paid out of his estate, and such person shall be indemnified by the warrant of the court for bringing up such bankrupt; and where any person who has been adjudged bankrupt, and has surrendered and obtained his protection from arrest, is in prison or in custody for debt at the time of his obtaining such protection, the court may, except in the cases next hereinafter mentioned, order his immediate release, either absolutely or upon such conditions as it shall think fit: provided always, that the court shall not order such release where it shall appear by any judgment, order, commitment, or sentence under which the bankrupt is in prison or in custody, or by the record or entry of any such judgment, order, commitment, or sentence, and the pleadings or proceedings previously thereto, that he is in prison or in custody for any debt contracted by fraud or breach of trust, or by reason of any prosecution against him whereby he had been convicted of any offence, or for any debt contracted by reason of any judgment in any proceeding for breach of the revenue laws, or in any action for breach of promise of marriage, seduction, criminal conversation, libel, slander, assault, battery, malicious arrest, malicious trespass, maliciously suing out a fiat in bankruptcy, or maliciously filing or prosecuting a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy: provided also, that such release shall in nowise affect any rights of the creditor at whose suit the bankrupt may be in prison or in custody against the bankrupt, except the right of detaining him in prison or in custody whilst protected from imprisonment by order of the court.

113. That if any bankrupt shall be arrested for debt, or on any escape warrant in coming to surrender, or shall after his surrender and while protected by order of the court be so arrested, he shall, on producing such protection to the officer who shall arrest him, and giving such officer a copy thereof, be immediately discharged; and if any officer shall detain any such bankrupt after he shall have shewn such protection to him, except for so long as shall be necessary for obtaining a copy of the same, such officer shall forfeit to such bankrupt, for his own use, the sum of 5*l.* for every day he shall detain such bankrupt, to be recovered by action of debt in any court of record at Westminster, in the name of such bankrupt, with full costs of suit.

114. That the petitioning creditor shall at his own costs file and prosecute his petition, until the choice of assignees by the creditors; and the court shall, at or after the sitting for such choice, make order for the payment thereof out of the estate of the bankrupt, in course of priority to be settled by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act.

115. That no fiat in bankruptcy shall be annulled, nor any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy dismissed, nor any adjudication reversed, by reason only that the fiat, petition, or adjudication, or act of bankruptcy, has been concerted or agreed upon between the bankrupt, his solicitor, or agent, or any of them, and any creditor or other person.

116. That if any bankrupt shall die after adjudication, the court may proceed in the bankruptcy as if such bankrupt were living.

117. That the court may summon any bankrupt before it, whether such bankrupt shall have obtained his certificate or not; and in case he shall not come at the time appointed by the court, (having no lawful impediment made known to and allowed by the court at such time), it shall be lawful for the court, by warrant, to authorise and direct any person or persons the court shall think fit to apprehend and arrest such bankrupt, and bring him before the court; and upon the appearance of such bankrupt, or if such bankrupt be present at any sitting of the court, it shall be lawful for the court to examine such bankrupt after he shall have made and signed the declaration contained in Schedule (W.) to this act annexed, either by word of mouth or on interrogatories in writing, touching all matters relating to his trade, dealings, or estate, or which may tend to disclose any secret grant, conveyance, or concealment of his lands, tenements, goods, money, or debts, and to reduce his answers into writing, which examination so reduced into writing the said bankrupt shall sign and subscribe.

118. That it shall be lawful for the court to summon before it the wife of any bankrupt, and to examine her, after she shall have made and signed the declaration contained in Schedule (W.) to this act annexed, either by word of mouth or interrogatories in writing, for the finding out and discovery of the estate, goods, and chattels of such bankrupt, concealed, kept, or disposed of by such wife, in her own person or by her own act, or by any other person, and she shall incur such danger or penalty for not coming before the court, or for refusing to be sworn and examined, or for refusing to sign or subscribe her examination, or for not fully answering to the satisfaction of the court, as is hereinafter provided.

119. That if in any case it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court that any bankrupt is keeping out of the way, and cannot be personally served with a summons, and that due pains have been taken to effect such personal service, or that there is probable cause for believing that he is about to quit England, or to remove or conceal any of his goods or chattels, unless he be forthwith apprehended, it shall be lawful for such court, by warrant, to authorise and direct any person or persons it shall think fit to apprehend and arrest such bankrupt, and bring him before the court, to be examined in like manner as if he appeared upon a summons.

120. That after adjudication it shall be lawful for the court to summon before it any person known or suspected to have any of the estate of the bankrupt in his possession, or who is supposed to be indebted to the bankrupt, or any person the court may believe capable of giving information concerning the person, trade, dealings, or estate of the bankrupt, or concerning any act of bankruptcy committed by him, or any information material to the full disclosure of his dealings; and the court may require such person to produce any books, papers, deeds, writings, or other documents in his custody or power which may appear to the court necessary to the verification of the deposition of such person, or to the full disclosure of any of the matters which the court is authorised to inquire into; and if such person so summoned as aforesaid shall not come before the court at the time appointed, (having no lawful impediment made known to the court at the time of its sitting, and allowed by it), it shall be lawful for the court, by warrant, to authorise and direct the person or persons therein named for that purpose to apprehend and arrest such person, and bring him before the court for examination.

121. That where it shall be shewn by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court that any person to whom any such summons is directed as aforesaid is keeping out of the way, and cannot be personally served therewith, and that due pains have been taken to effect such personal service, it shall be lawful for the court to order by indorsement upon the summons that the delivery of a copy of such summons to the wife or servant, or some adult inmate of the house or family of the person at his usual or last known place of abode or business, and explaining the purport thereof to such wife, servant, or inmate, shall be equivalent to personal service, and in every such case the service of such summons in pursuance of such order shall be and be deemed and taken to be of the same force and effect, to all intents and purposes, as if the party to whom such summons was directed had been personally served therewith.

122. That upon the appearance of any person summoned or brought before the court upon any warrant as aforesaid, or if any person be present at any sitting of the court, it shall be lawful for the court to examine every such person upon oath, either by word of mouth or by interrogatories in writing, concerning the person, trade, dealings, or estate of any bankrupt, or concerning any act or acts of bankruptcy by any bankrupt committed, and to reduce into writing the answers of every such person, and such answers so reduced into writing such person examined is hereby required to sign and subscribe.

123. That if any such person examined as last aforesaid shall, in and by his examination, signed and subscribed as aforesaid, and also in and by a separate writing in the form contained in Schedule (X.) to this act annexed, admit that he is indebted to the bankrupt in any sum of money upon the balance of accounts, it shall be lawful for the court, if it think fit, to order (in the form contained in Schedule (Y.) to this act annexed, or to the like effect) that such person shall forthwith, or at such time and in such manner as to the court may seem expedient, pay the amount so admitted, in full discharge thereof, to the official assignee, together with the costs of and incident to the summons of such person, if the court think fit to award costs, or the court may, if it think fit, in the said form contained in Schedule (Y.) to this act annexed, order the official assignee to pay the costs of the person summoned out of the estate of the bankrupt; and every such order shall have the effect of a judgment in her Majesty's superior courts of common law, and may be enforced accordingly: provided always, that no such order shall be made unless there be present some attorney of one of the superior courts on behalf of the person making such admission, expressly named by him, or, upon his refusal to name such attorney, named by the court to act upon his behalf, to inform him of the effect of such admission, before the same is signed and subscribed as aforesaid, and that such attorney do sign his name as a witness to such admission in the form contained in Schedule (Y.) to this act annexed: provided also, that if part only of the sum actually due be so admitted, or if the court make an order for part only of the sum admitted, the residue may be recoverable in the same manner in all respects as if no such admission or order had been made.

124. That the court may order that, for a period of three months from the date of any such order, all post letters directed or addressed to any bankrupt at the place of which he shall be described in the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be re-directed, re-addressed, sent, or delivered by the Postmaster-General, or the officers acting under him, to the official or other assignee or other person named in such order; and upon notice by transmission of a duplicate of any such order to the Postmaster-General or the officers acting under him, by the official or other assignee or other person named in such order, of the making of such order, it shall be lawful for the Postmaster-General or such officers as aforesaid, in England, Scotland, or Ireland, to re-address, re-direct, send, or deliver all such post letters to the official or other assignee or other person named in such order accordingly; and the court may, upon any application to be made for that purpose, renew any such order for a like or for any other less period as often as may be necessary.

And with respect to the power of the court over certain descriptions of property, be it enacted,

125. That if any bankrupt at the time he becomes bankrupt shall, by the consent and permission of the true owner thereof, have in his possession, order, or disposition any goods or chattels whereof he was reputed owner, or whereof he had taken upon him the sale, alteration, or disposition as owner, the court shall have power to order the same to be sold and disposed of for the benefit of the creditors under the bankruptcy: provided that nothing herein contained shall invalidate or affect any transfer or assignment of any ship or vessel, or any share thereof, made as a security for any debt or debts, either by way of mortgage or assignment, duly registered according to the provisions of an act made in the Parliament holden in the 8 & 9 Vict. [c. 89], intituled "An Act for the registering of British Vessels," or any of the acts therein mentioned.

126. That if any bankrupt, being at the time insolvent, shall (except upon the marriage of any of his children, or for some valuable consideration) have conveyed, assigned, or transferred to any of his children, or to any other person, any hereditaments, offices, fees, annuities, leases, goods, or chattels, or have delivered or made over to any such person any bills, bonds, notes, or other securities, or have transferred his debts to any other person or into any other person's name, the court shall have power to order the same to be sold and disposed of for the benefit of the creditors under the bankruptcy; and every such sale shall be valid against the bankrupt, and such children and persons, and against all persons claiming under him.

127. That if any real or personal estate or debts of any bankrupt be extended, after he shall have become bankrupt, by any person, under pretence of his being an accountant of or debtor to the Queen, the court may examine upon oath whether the said debt was due to such debtor or accountant upon any contract originally made between such accountant and the bankrupt; and if such contract was originally made with any other person than the said debtor or accountant, or in trust for any other person, the court may order such real and personal estate or debts to be sold, for the benefit of the creditors under the bankruptcy, and such sale shall be valid against the said extent, and all persons claiming under it; and any person to whom the said real and personal estate or debts shall be bargained, sold, granted, or assigned by the court shall have and may recover the same against any person who shall detain the same.

128. That if any bankrupt shall have any Government stock, funds, or annuities, or any of the stock of any public company, either in England, Scotland, or Ireland, standing in his name in his own right, it shall be lawful for the court, by writing, to order all persons whose act or consent is thereto necessary to transfer the same into the name of the assignees, and to pay all dividends upon the same to the official assignee; and all such persons whose act or consent is so necessary are hereby indemnified for all things done or permitted pursuant to such order.

129. That no distress for rent made and levied after an act of bankruptcy upon the goods or effects of any bankrupt, whether before or after the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, shall be available for more than one year's rent accrued prior to the date of the fiat or the day of the filing of such petition, but the landlord or person to whom the rent shall be due shall be allowed to come in as a creditor for the overplus of the rent due, and for which the distress shall not be available.

130. That if any bankrupt shall as trustee be seised, possessed of, or entitled to, either alone or jointly, any real or personal estate, or any interest secured upon or arising out of the same, or shall have standing in his name as trustee, either alone or jointly, any Government stock, funds, or annuities, or any of the stock of any public company, either in England, Scotland, or Ireland, it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor, on the petition of the person entitled in possession to the receipt of the rents, issues, and profits, dividends, interest, or produce thereof, on due notice given to all other persons (if any) interested therein, to order the assignees and all persons whose act or consent thereto is necessary to convey, assign, or transfer the said estate, interest, stock, funds, or annuities, to such person as the Lord Chancellor shall think fit, upon the same trusts as the said estate, interest, stock, funds, or annuities were subject to before the bankruptcy, or such of them as shall be then subsisting and capable of taking effect, and also to receive and pay over the rents, issues, and profits, dividends, interest, or produce thereof, as the Lord Chancellor shall direct.

131. That no title to any real or personal estate sold under any bankruptcy shall be impeached by the bankrupt, or any person claiming under him, in respect of any defect in the fiat or petition for adjudication, or in any of the proceedings under the same, unless the bankrupt shall within the time allowed by this act have commenced proceedings to dispute, dismiss, or annul the fiat, petition, or adjudication, and duly prosecuted the same.

132. That after the adjudication of bankruptcy in any case shall have been advertised in the London Gazette, it shall be lawful for the court to order any treasurer or other officer, or any banker, attorney, or solicitor, or other agent of the bankrupt, to pay and deliver over to the official assignee, or to the Bank of England, to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy, according to the rules which may be in force with respect to payment into the Bank of England of monies due to any bankrupt's estate, all monies or securities for money in his custody, possession, or power as such officer or agent, and which he is not by law entitled to retain as against the bankrupt or his assignees.

And with respect to transactions with the bankrupt, and executions against his property, up to the time of the bankruptcy, or within a limited time previously thereto, be it enacted,

133. That all payments really and bonâ fide made by any bankrupt, or by any person on his behalf, before date of the fiat or the filing of a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, to any creditor of such bankrupt, and all payments really and bonâ fide made to any bankrupt before the date of the fiat or the filing of such petition, and all conveyances by any bankrupt bonâ fide made and executed before the date of the fiat or the filing of such petition, and all contracts, dealings, and transactions by and with any bankrupt really and bonâ fide made and entered into before the date of the fiat or the filing of such petition, and all executions and attachments against the lands and tenements of any bankrupt bonâ fide executed by seizure, and all executions and attachments against the goods and chattels of any bankrupt bonâ fide executed and levied by seizure and sale before the date of the fiat or the filing of such petition, shall be deemed to be valid, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed, provided the person so dealing with, or paying to, or being paid by such bankrupt, or at whose suit or on whose account such execution or attachment shall have issued, had not at the time of such payment, conveyance, contract, dealing, or transaction, or at the time of so executing or levying such execution or attachment, or at the time of making any sale thereunder, notice of any prior act of bankruptcy by him committed: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed or taken to give validity to any payment or to any delivery or transfer of any goods or chattels made by any bankrupt, being a fraudulent preference of any creditor of such bankrupt, or to any conveyance or equitable mortgage made or given by any bankrupt by way of fraudulent preference of any creditor of such bankrupt, or to any execution founded on a judgment on a warrant of attorney, or cognovit actionem, or judge's order obtained by consent given by any bankrupt by way of fraudulent preference.

134. That no purchase from any bankrupt bonâ fide and for valuable consideration, where the purchaser had notice at the time of such purchase of an act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed, shall be impeached by reason thereof, unless a fiat or petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall have been sued out or filed within twelve months after such act of bankruptcy.

135. That every warrant of attorney to confess judgment in any personal action, given by any bankrupt after the commencement of this act, and within two months of the filing of a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy by or against such bankrupt, and being for or in respect of (wholly or in part) an antecedent debt or money demand, and every cognovit actionem or consent to a judge's order for judgment given by any bankrupt, at any time after the commencement of this act, and within two months of the filing of any such petition in any action commenced by collusion with the bankrupt, and not adversely, or purporting to have been given in an action, but having been in fact given before the commencement of any action against the bankrupt, such bankrupt being unable to meet his engagements at the time of giving such warrant of attorney, cognovit actionem, or consent, (as the case may be), shall be deemed and taken to be null and void, whether the same shall have been given by such bankrupt in contemplation of bankruptcy or not.

136. That if after the commencement of this act any warrant of attorney to confess judgment in any personal action, or any cognovit actionem in any personal action, shall have been given by any such trader, and such warrant of attorney or cognovit actionem, or a true copy thereof, shall not have been filed with the officer acting as clerk of the docquets and judgments in the Court of Queen's Bench within twenty-one days next after the execution thereof, in manner and form provided by an act passed in the 3 Geo. 4, [c. 39], intituled "An Act for preventing Frauds upon Creditors by secret Warrants of Attorney to confess Judgment," every such warrant of attorney and cognovit actionem shall be deemed fraudulent, null, and void, to all intents and purposes whatever; and if any such warrant of attorney or cognovit actionem which shall be so filed as aforesaid shall have been given subject to any defeasance or condition, such defeasance or condition shall be written on the same paper or parchment on which such warrant of attorney or cognovit actionem shall be written, before the time when the same or a copy thereof respectively shall be filed, otherwise such warrant of attorney or cognovit actionem shall be null and void, to all intents and purposes whatever.

137. That every judge's order made by consent given after the commencement of this act by any such trader defendant in any personal action, and whereby the plaintiff in such action shall be authorised forthwith after the making of such order, or at any future time, to sign or enter up judgment, or to issue or take out execution in such action, and whether such order shall be made subject to any defeasance or condition or not, in case the action in which such order shall be made shall be in the Court of Queen's Bench, or in case the action wherein the same is made shall be in any other court, a true copy of such order shall, together with an affidavit of the time of such consent being given, and a description of the residence and occupation of the defendant, be filed with the officer acting as clerk of the docquets and judgments in the said Court of Queen's Bench within twenty-one days after the making of such order, in like manner as a warrant of attorney in any personal action and a cognovit actionem given by any defendant in any personal action, or copies thereof and affidavits of the execution thereof respectively, may be filed with the said clerk within the space of twenty-one days after such warrant of attorney or cognovit actionem shall have been executed, otherwise such judge's order, and any judgment signed or entered up thereon, and any execution issued or taken out on such judgment, shall be null and void, to all intents and purposes whatever; and the provisions respectively contained in the said act passed in the 3 Geo. 4, [c. 39], intituled "An Act for preventing Frauds upon Creditors by secret Warrants of Attorney to confess Judgment," and in an act passed in the Parliament holden in the 6 & 7 Vict. [c. 66], intituled "An Act to enlarge the Provisions of an Act for preventing Frauds upon Creditors by secret Warrants of Attorney to confess Judgment," for liberty to file warrants of attorney and cognovits actionem, or copies thereof, with the clerk of the docquets and judgments, and for the said clerk to make certain entries and search in relation thereto, and for entering satisfaction thereon, and for fees for search and filing and taking office copies, shall extend and be applicable to every such judge's order, in like manner as to warrants of attorney and cognovits actionem mentioned in the said acts.

138. That no deed, conveyance, assignment, surrender, admission, or other assurance of, or to, or relating solely to any freehold, leasehold, copyhold, or customary messuages, lands, or tenements, or to any mortgage, charge, or other incumbrance upon, or any estate, right, or interest of and in, any messuages, lands, tenements, or personal estate, being the estate of or belonging to any bankrupt, or part or parcel thereof, and which after the execution of such deed, conveyance, assignment, surrender, or assurance respectively shall, either at law or in equity, be or remain the estate and property of such bankrupt, or of the assignee appointed or chosen under any bankruptcy, and no power of attorney, writ of supersedeas and procedendo, order, certificate of conformity, affidavit, or other instrument or writing whatsoever relating solely to the estate or effects of any bankrupt, or to any part thereof, or to any proceeding under any bankruptcy, and no affidavit, bond, or other proceeding under this act, and no advertisement inserted in the London Gazette relating solely to matters in bankruptcy, shall be liable to any stamp-duty, or to any other duty whatsoever, save and except such stamp-duty as is mentioned in Schedule (C.) to this act annexed.

And with respect to the choice of assignees, and their rights and duties, be it enacted,

139. That at the first public sitting appointed by the court under any bankruptcy, or at any adjournment thereof, assignees of the bankrupt's estate and effects shall and may be chosen and appointed, and all creditors who have proved debts to the amount of 10*l.* and upwards shall be entitled to vote in such choice, and also any person authorised by letter of attorney from any such creditor, upon proof of the execution thereof, either by affidavit or by oath before the court vivâ voce; and the choice and appointment shall be made by the major part in value of the creditors so entitled to vote; provided that the court shall have power to reject any person so chosen who shall appear to such court unfit to be an assignee, or to remove any assignee, and upon such rejection or removal a new choice and appointment of another assignee shall be made in like manner.

140. That if one or more of the partners of a firm be adjudged bankrupt, any creditor to whom the bankrupt is indebted jointly with the other partners of the firm, or any of them, shall be entitled to prove his debt, for the purpose only of voting in the choice of assignees, and of being heard against the allowance of the bankrupt's certificates, or of either of such purposes; but such creditor shall not receive any dividend out of the separate estate of the bankrupt until all the separate creditors shall have received the full amount of their respective debts.

141. That when any person shall have been adjudged a bankrupt, all his personal estate and effects, present and future, wheresoever the same may be found or known, and all property which he may purchase, or which may revert, descend, be devised or bequeathed or come to him, before he shall have obtained his certificate, and all debts due or to be due to him, wheresoever the same may be found or known, and the property, right, and interest in such debts, shall become absolutely vested in the assignees for the time being, for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt, by virtue of their appointment; and after such appointment, neither the bankrupt, nor any person claiming through or under him, shall have power to recover the same, nor to make any release or discharge thereof, neither shall the same be attached as the debt of the bankrupt by any person according to the custom of the city of London or otherwise, but such assignees shall have like remedy to recover the same in their own names as the bankrupt himself might have had if he had not been adjudged bankrupt.

142. That when any person shall have been adjudged a bankrupt, all lands, tenements, and hereditaments, except copy or customary hold, in England, Scotland, Ireland, or in any of the dominions, plantations, or colonies belonging to her Majesty, to which any bankrupt is entitled, and all interest to which such bankrupt is entitled in any of such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, and of which he might, according to the laws of the several countries, dominions, plantations, or colonies, have disposed, and all such lands, tenements, and hereditaments as he shall purchase, or shall descend, be devised, revert to, or come to such bankrupt, before he shall have obtained his certificate, and all deeds, papers, and writings respecting the same, shall become absolutely vested in the assignees for the time being, for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt, by virtue of their appointment, without any deed of conveyance for that purpose; and as often as any such assignee or assignees shall die, or be lawfully removed or displaced, and a new assignee or assignees shall be duly appointed, such of the aforesaid real estate as shall remain unsold or unconveyed shall, by virtue of such appointment, vest in the new assignee or assignees, either alone or jointly with the existing assignees, as the case may require, without any conveyance for that purpose.

143. That where according to law any conveyance or assignment of any real or personal property of a bankrupt would require to be registered, inrolled, or recorded in any registry office in England, Wales, or Ireland, or in any registry office, court, or other place in Scotland, or in any of the dominions, plantations, or colonies belonging to her Majesty, then in every such case the certificate of the appointment of assignees of the estate and effects of the bankrupt shall be registered in the registry office, court, or place wherein such conveyance or assignment would require to be registered, inrolled, or recorded, and such registry shall have the like effect to all intents and purposes as the registry, inrolment, or recording of such conveyance or assignment would have had; and the title of any purchaser of any such property for valuable consideration, without notice of the bankruptcy, who shall have duly registered, inrolled, or recorded his purchase-deed previous to the registry hereby directed, shall not be invalidated by reason of such appointment of assignees, or of the vesting of such property in them consequent thereupon, unless the certificate of such appointment shall be registered as aforesaid within the times following; that is to say, as regards the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, within two months from the date of such appointment, and as regards all other places, within twelve months from the date thereof.

144. That no assignee of any bankrupt's estate, nor any purchaser from any such assignee of any goods, chattels, stock, or crop, being part of the estate of any bankrupt engaged or employed in husbandry on any lands let to farm, shall take, use, or dispose of any hay, straw, grass or grasses, turnips or other roots, or any other produce of such lands, or any manure, compost, ashes, seaweed, or other dressings intended for such lands, and being thereon, in any other manner or for any other purpose than such bankrupt so employed in husbandry ought to have taken, used, or disposed of the same if he had not been adjudged bankrupt.

145. That if the assignees of the estate and effects of any bankrupt having or being entitled to any land either under a conveyance to him in fee or under an agreement for any such conveyance, subject to any perpetual yearly rent reserved by such conveyance or agreement, or having or being entitled to any lease or agreement for a lease, shall elect to take such land or the benefit of such conveyance or agreement, or such lease or agreement for a lease, as the case may be, the bankrupt shall not be liable to pay any rent accruing after the issuing of the fiat or filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against him, or to be sued in respect of any subsequent non-observance or non-performance of the conditions, covenants, or agreements in any such conveyance or agreement, or lease or agreement for a lease; and if the assignees shall decline to take such land, or the benefit of such conveyance or agreement, or lease or agreement for a lease, the bankrupt shall not be liable if, within fourteen days after he shall have had notice that the assignees have declined, he shall deliver up such conveyance or agreement, or lease or agreement for a lease, to the person then entitled to the rent, or having so agreed to convey or lease, as the case may be; and if the assignees shall not (upon being thereto required) elect whether they will accept or decline such land or conveyance or agreement for conveyance, or such lease or agreement for a lease, any person entitled to such rent, or having so conveyed or agreed to convey, or leased or agreed to lease, or any person claiming under him, shall be entitled to apply to the court, and the court may order them to elect and deliver up such conveyance or agreement for conveyance, or lease or agreement for a lease, in case they shall decline the same, and the possession of the premises, or may make such other order therein as it shall think fit.

146. That if any bankrupt shall have entered into any agreement for the purchase of any estate or interest in land, the vendor thereof, or any person claiming under him, if the assignees shall not (upon being thereto required) elect whether they will abide by and execute such agreement, or abandon the same, may apply to the court, and the court may thereupon order them to deliver up the agreement, and the possession of the premises, to the vendor or person claiming under him, or may make such other order therein as such court shall think fit.

147. That all powers vested in any bankrupt which he might legally execute for his own benefit (except the right of nomination to any vacant ecclesiastical benefice) may be executed by the assignees, for the benefit of the creditors, in such manner as the bankrupt might have executed the same.

148. That it shall be lawful for the court, upon the application of the assignees, or of any purchaser from them of any part of the bankrupt's estate, if such bankrupt shall not try the validity of the adjudication, or if there shall have been a verdict at law establishing its validity, to order the bankrupt to join in any conveyance of such estate, or any part thereof; and if he shall not execute such conveyance within the time directed by the order, such bankrupt, and all persons claiming under him, shall be stopped from objecting to the validity of such conveyance; and all estate, right, or title which such bankrupt had therein shall be as effectually barred by such order as if such conveyance had been executed by him.

149. That if any bankrupt shall have granted, conveyed, assured, or pledged any real or personal estate, or deposited any deeds, such grant, conveyance, assurance, pledge, or deposit being upon condition or power of redemption at a future day, by payment of money or otherwise, the assignees may, before the time of the performance of such condition, make tender or payment of money or other performance, according to such condition, as fully as the bankrupt might have done; and after such tender, payment, or performance, such real or personal estate may be sold and disposed of, for the benefit of the creditors.

150. That in every case the assignees may, with the approbation of the court, appoint the bankrupt himself to superintend the management of the estate, or to carry on the trade for behoof of the creditors, and in all or any other respects they may think fit to aid them in administering the bankrupt's estate and effects, in such manner and on such terms as they may think best for the benefit of the persons interested in the estate.

151. That the assignees shall be subject to the orders of the court in their conduct as assignees; and it shall be lawful for the court at all times to summon the assignees, and require them to produce all books, papers, deeds, writings, and other documents relating to the bankruptcy in their possession, and to direct them to pay and deliver over to the official assignee all monies, books, papers, deeds, writings, and other documents which may have come to their possession or custody as such assignees.

152. That if any person adjudged bankrupt shall at the time of the adjudication of bankruptcy be a member of a firm, it shall be lawful for the court to authorise the assignees, upon their application, to commence or prosecute any action at law or suit in equity, in the name of such assignees and of the remaining partner, against any debtor of the partnership, and such judgment, decree, or order may be obtained therein as if such action or suit had been instituted with the consent of such partner, and if such partner shall execute any release of the debt or demand for which such action or suit is instituted, such release shall be void; provided that every such partner shall have notice given him of such application, and be at liberty to shew cause against it, and, if no benefit be claimed by him by virtue of the said proceedings, shall be indemnified against the payment of any costs in respect of such action or suit, in such manner as the court may direct; and that it shall be lawful for such court, upon the application of such partner, to direct that he may receive so much of the proceeds of such action or suit as such court shall direct.

153. That the assignees, with the leave of the court first obtained, upon application to such court, but not otherwise, may commence, prosecute, or defend any action at law or suit in equity which the bankrupt might have commenced and prosecuted or defended, and in such case the costs to which they may be put in respect of such suit or action shall be allowed out of the proceeds of the estate and effects of the bankrupt; and with like leave of the court, after notice to such creditors, and subject to such condition (if any) as to obtaining the consent of creditors, or any proportion of them, as the court shall think fit to direct, the assignees may take such reasonable part of any debts due to the bankrupt's estate as may by composition be gotten, or may give time or take security for the payment of such debts, and may submit to arbitration any difference or dispute between the assignees and any other person for or on account or by reason of anything relating to the estate and effects of the bankrupt.

154. That if the assignees shall agree in manner aforesaid to refer any matter in dispute to arbitration, such agreement of reference may be made a rule of any of her Majesty's superior courts of law at Westminster, whether such agreement contain a clause to that effect or not.

155. That all persons from whom the assignees shall have recovered any real or personal estate, either by judgment or decree, are hereby discharged, in case the fiat be afterwards superseded, or the adjudication of bankruptcy, or petition for adjudication, be afterwards annulled or dismissed, from all demands which may thereafter be made in respect of the same by the person against whom such adjudication was made, and all persons claiming under him; and all persons who shall, without action or suit, bonâ fide deliver up possession of any real or personal estate to the assignees, or pay any debt claimed by them, are hereby discharged from all claim of any such person as aforesaid in respect of the same, or any person claiming under him, provided the persons so delivering up any real or personal estate, or paying any debt, shall not have had notice of an action, suit, or other proceeding to dispute or annul the fiat or adjudication, or petition for adjudication, and such action, suit, or other proceeding shall not have been commenced and prosecuted within the time and in manner allowed by this act.

156. That if any assignee indebted to the estate of which he is such assignee in respect of money, being part of the estate of the bankrupt, retained or employed by him, become bankrupt, and obtain his certificate, it shall have the effect only of freeing his person from arrest and imprisonment, but his future effects (his tools of trade, necessary household goods, and the necessary wearing apparel of himself, his wife and children, excepted) shall remain liable for so much of his debt to the estate of which he was assignee as shall not be paid by dividends under his bankruptcy, and for interest at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum on the whole debt.

157. That whenever an assignee shall die or be removed, or a new assignee shall be chosen, no action at law or suit in equity shall be thereby abated, but the court in which any action or suit is depending may, upon the suggestion of such death or removal and new choice, allow the name of the surviving or new assignee to be substituted in the place of the former; and such action or suit shall be prosecuted in the name or names of the said surviving or new assignee or assignees, in the same manner as if he had originally commenced the same.

158. That if the assignees commence any action or suit for any money due to the bankrupt's estate before the time allowed for the bankrupt to dispute the bankruptcy shall have elapsed, any defendant in any such action or suit shall be entitled, after notice given to the assignees, to pay the same, or any part thereof, into the court in which such action or suit is brought, and all proceedings with respect to the money so paid into court shall thereupon be stayed until such time shall have elapsed; and if within that time the bankrupt shall not have commenced such action, suit, or other proceeding as allowed by this act, and prosecuted the same with due diligence, the money shall be paid out of court to the official assignee, but otherwise shall abide the event of such action, suit, or other proceeding, and upon such event shall be paid out of court, either to the official assignee or the person adjudged bankrupt, as the court shall direct; and after such payment of money so made into court it shall not be lawful for the person so adjudged bankrupt to proceed against the defendant for recovery of the same money.

159. That every action brought against any person for anything done in pursuance of this act shall be commenced within three months next after the fact committed; and the defendant in any such action may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at the trial, and that the same was done by authority of this act; and if it shall appear so to have been done, or that such action was commenced after the time limited as aforesaid for bringing the same, the jury shall find for the defendant; and if there be a verdict for the defendant, or if the plaintiff shall be nonsuited, or discontinue his action or suit after appearance thereto, or if upon demurrer judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall receive such full and reasonable indemnity as to all costs, charges, and expenses incurred in and about any such action as shall be taxed by the proper officer in that behalf, subject to be reviewed in like manner and by the same authority as any other taxation of costs by such officer.

And with respect to the last examination, be it enacted,

160. That the bankrupt shall prepare such balance-sheet and accounts, and in such form as the court shall direct, and shall subscribe such balance-sheet and accounts, and file the same in court, and deliver a copy thereof to the official assignee, ten days at least before the day appointed for the last examination, or the adjournment day thereof for that purpose; and such balance-sheet and accounts, before such last examination, may be amended from time to time as occasion shall require and such court shall direct; and the bankrupt shall make oath of the truth of such balance-sheet and accounts, whenever he shall be duly required by the court so to do; and the last examination of the bankrupt shall in no case be passed unless his balance-sheet shall have been duly filed as aforesaid; and the court may, on the application of the assignees, or of the bankrupt, make such allowance out of the estate of the bankrupt for the preparation of such balance-sheet and accounts, and to such person as the court shall think fit, in any case in which it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court, from the nature of the accounts or other good cause, that the bankrupt required assistance in that behalf.

161. That if any bankrupt apprehended by any warrant of the court shall, within the time allowed for him to surrender, submit to be examined, and in all things conform, he shall have the same benefit as if he had voluntarily surrendered.

162. That it shall be lawful for the court at the time appointed for the last examination of the bankrupt, or at any enlargement or adjournment thereof, to adjourn such examination sine die; and in such case the bankrupt shall be free from arrest or imprisonment, for such time (if any) as such court shall from time to time, by indorsement on the summons of the bankrupt, think fit to appoint.

163. That whenever any bankrupt is in prison or in custody under any process, attachment, execution, commitment, or sentence, the court may appoint a person to attend him from time to time, to produce to him his books, papers, and writings, in order that he may prepare his balance-sheet, and shew the particulars of his estate and effects, previous to his last examination and discovery thereof.

And with respect to the proof of debts and payments in full, be it enacted,

164. That at the sittings appointed by the court for the choice of assignees and for the last examination of the bankrupt, and at every adjourned sitting held for either of such purposes, and at every other sitting held for proof of debts, and whereof and of the purport whereof ten days' notice shall have been given in the London Gazette, every creditor of the bankrupt may prove his debt, by his own oath; and all bodies politic and public companies incorporated, or authorised to sue or bring actions, either by charter or act of Parliament, may prove by an agent, provided such agent shall in his deposition swear that he is such agent, and that he is authorised to make such proof; provided that it shall be lawful for the court to examine upon oath, either by word of mouth or by interrogatories in writing, every person claiming to prove a debt, or to require such further proof, and to examine such other persons in relation thereto, as such court shall think fit.

165. That every person with whom any bankrupt shall have really and bonâ fide contracted any debt or demand before the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy committed by such bankrupt, be admitted to prove the same, as if no such act of bankruptcy had been committed, provided such person had not, at the time the same was contracted, notice of any act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed.

166. That the court, out of the estate and effects of the bankrupt, shall order payment of all duties of assessed taxes assessed on the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy up to the 5th day of April next after the same shall have happened, (such payment not exceeding in the whole one year's assessment), and the bankrupt shall not be liable to be assessed to such duties after the said 5th day of April in respect of any article kept and used for the purposes of trade at or before the time of the bankruptcy, which article shall have been seized and surrendered and bonâ fide sold under the bankruptcy, and not kept or used by the bankrupt after the 5th day of April.

167. That if any person already appointed or employed or who may be hereafter appointed to or employed in any office in any society established under any of the acts relating to friendly societies, and being intrusted with the keeping of the accounts, or having in his hands or possession, by virtue of his office or employment, any monies or effects belonging to such society, or any deeds or securities relating to the same, shall have been or shall become bankrupt, the court shall, upon application made by the order of any such society or any committee thereof, or the major part of them, assembled at any meeting thereof, order payment and delivery over to be made to such society, or to such person as such society or committee may appoint, of all monies and other things belonging to such society, and shall also order payment out of the estate and effects of the bankrupt of all sums of money remaining due which the bankrupt received by virtue of his said office or employment before any other of his debts are paid or satisfied.

168. That when any bankrupt shall have been indebted, at the time of issuing the fiat or filing the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, to any servant or clerk of such bankrupt in respect of the wages or salary of such servant or clerk, it shall be lawful for the court, upon proof thereof, to order so much as shall be so due, not exceeding three months' wages or salary, and not exceeding 30*l.*, to be paid to such servant or clerk out of the estate of such bankrupt; and such servant or clerk shall be at liberty to prove for any sum exceeding such amount.

169. That when any bankrupt shall have been indebted, at the time of issuing the fiat or filing the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, to any labourer or workman of such bankrupt in respect of the wages or labour of such labourer or workman, it shall be lawful for the court, upon proof thereof, to order so much as shall be so due, not exceeding 40*s.*, to be paid to such labourer or workman out of the estate of such bankrupt; and such labourer or workman shall be at liberty to prove for any sum exceeding such amount.

170. That where any person shall have been an apprentice to a bankrupt at the time of the filing of a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, or of the issuing of a fiat in bankruptcy, the filing of such petition, or the issuing of such fiat, shall be and enure as a complete discharge of the indenture whereby such apprentice was bound; and if any sum shall have been really and bonâ fide paid, by or on the behalf of such apprentice, to the bankrupt, as an apprentice fee, it shall be lawful for the court, upon proof thereof, to order any sum to be paid out of the estate of the said bankrupt, to or for the use of such apprentice, which such court shall think reasonable, regard being had, in estimating such sum, to the amount of the sum so paid by or on behalf of such apprentice, and to the time during which such apprentice shall have resided with the bankrupt previous to the filing of such petition or the issuing of such fiat.

171. That where there has been mutual credit given by the bankrupt and any other person, or where there are mutual debts between the bankrupt and any other person, the court shall state the account between them, and one debt or demand may be set against another, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy committed by such bankrupt before the credit given to or the debt contracted by him; and what shall appear due on either side on the balance of such account, and no more, shall be claimed or paid on either side respectively; and every debt or demand hereby made provable against the estate of the bankrupt may also be set off in manner aforesaid against such estate, provided that the person claiming the benefit of such set-off had not, when such credit was given, notice of an act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed.

172. That any person who shall have given credit to the bankrupt upon valuable consideration for any money or other matter or thing whatsoever which shall not have become payable when such bankrupt committed an act of bankruptcy, and whether such credit shall have been given upon any bill, bond, note, or other negotiable security, or not, shall be entitled to prove such debt, bill, bond, note, or other security as if the same was payable presently, and receive dividends equally with the other creditors, deducting only thereout a rebate of interest for what he shall so receive at the rate of 5*l.* per centum per annum, to be computed from the declaration of a dividend to the time such debt would have become payable, according to the terms upon which it was contracted.

173. That any person who, at the time of issuing the fiat or of filing a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, shall be surety or liable for any debt of the bankrupt, or bail for the bankrupt, either to the sheriff or to the action, if he shall have paid the debt, or any part thereof in discharge of the whole debt, (although he may have paid the same after the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy), if the creditor shall have proved his debt under the bankruptcy, shall be entitled to stand in the place of such creditor as to the dividends and all other rights under the bankruptcy which such creditor possessed or would be entitled to in respect of such proof; or if the creditor shall not have proved, such surety or person liable, or bail, shall be entitled to prove his demand in respect of such payment as a debt under the bankruptcy, not disturbing the former dividends, and may receive dividends with the other creditors, although he may have become surety, liable, or bail as aforesaid, after an act of bankruptcy committed by the bankrupt, provided that such person had not, when he became such surety or bail, or so liable as aforesaid, notice of any act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed.

174. That the obligee in any bottomry or respondentia bond, and the assured in any policy of insurance, made upon good and valuable consideration, shall be admitted to claim, and, after the loss or contingency shall have happened, to prove his debt or demand in respect thereof, and receive dividends with the other creditors, as if the loss or contingency had happened before the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against such obligor or insurer; and the person effecting any policy of insurance upon ships or goods with any person (as a subscriber or underwriter) having become or becoming bankrupt, shall be entitled to prove any loss to which such bankrupt shall be liable in respect of such subscription, although the person so effecting such policy was not beneficially interested in such ships or goods, in case the person so interested is not within the united realm.

175. That any annuity creditor of any bankrupt, by whatever assurance the same be secured, and whether there were or not any arrears of such annuity due at the bankruptcy, shall be entitled to prove for the value of such annuity, which value the court shall ascertain, regard being had to the original price given for such annuity, deducting therefrom such diminution in the value thereof as shall have been caused by the lapse of time since the grant thereof to the date of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy.

176. That it shall not be lawful for any person entitled to any annuity granted by any bankrupt to sue any person who may be collateral surety for the payment of such annuity until such annuitant shall have proved against such bankrupt's estate for the value of such annuity, and for the arrears thereof; and if such surety, after such proof, pay the amount proved, he shall be thereby discharged from all claims in respect of such annuity; and if such surety shall not (before any payment of the annuity subsequent to the bankruptcy shall have become due) pay the sum so proved, he may be sued for the accruing payments of such annuity, until such annuitant shall have paid or satisfied the amount so proved, with interest thereon at the rate of 4*l.* per centum per annum from the time of notice of such proof, and of the amount thereof, being given to such surety; and after such payment or satisfaction such surety shall stand in the place of such annuitant, in respect of such proof, to the amount so paid or satisfied by such surety, and the certificate of the bankrupt shall be a discharge to him from all claims of such annuitant or of such surety in respect of such annuity; provided that such surety shall be entitled to credit, in account with such annuitant, for any dividends received by such annuitant under the bankruptcy before such surety shall have fully paid or satisfied the amount so proved.

177. That if any bankrupt shall, before the issuing of the fiat or the filing of a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, have contracted any debt payable upon a contingency which shall not have happened before the issuing of such fiat or the filing of such petition, the person with whom such debt has been contracted may, if he think fit, apply to the court to set a value upon such debt, and the court is hereby required to ascertain the value thereof, and to admit such person to prove the amount so ascertained, and to receive dividends thereon; or if such value shall not be so ascertained before the contingency shall have happened, then such person may, after such contingency shall have happened, prove in respect of such debt, and receive dividends with the other creditors, not disturbing any former dividends; provided such person had not, when such debt was contracted, notice of any act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed.

178. That if any trader who shall become bankrupt after the commencement of this act shall have contracted, before the filing of a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, a liability to pay money upon a contingency which shall not have happened, and the demand in respect thereof shall not have been ascertained before the filing of such petition, in every such case, if such liability be not provable under any other provision of this act, the person with whom such liability has been contracted shall be admitted to claim for such sum as the court shall think fit; and after the contingency shall have happened, and the demand in respect of such liability shall have been ascertained, he shall be admitted to prove such demand, and receive dividends with the other creditors, and, so far as practicable, as if the contingency had happened and the demand had been ascertained before the filing of such petition, but not disturbing former dividends, provided such person had not, at the time such liability was contracted, notice of any act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed; provided also, that where any such claim shall not have, either in whole or in part, been converted into a proof within six months after the filing of such petition, it may, upon the application of the assignees at any time after the expiration of such time, and if the court shall think fit, be expunged, either in whole or in part, from the proceedings.

179. That in case of the bankruptcy of any agent intrusted with the possession of goods within the meaning of an act passed in the Parliament holden in the 5 & 6 Vict. [c. 39], intituled "An Act to amend the Law relating to Advances bonâ fide made to Agents intrusted with Goods," the owner of any goods so intrusted to such agent, and which shall have been redeemed by such owner in manner provided by the said act after having been pledged by such agent, shall, in respect of the sum paid by him on account of such agent for such redemption, be held to have paid such sum for the use of such agent before his bankruptcy, or in case such goods shall not be so redeemed the owner shall be deemed a creditor of such agent for the value of the goods so pledged at the time of the pledge, and shall, if he shall think fit, be entitled in either of such cases to prove for or set off the sum so paid, or the value of such goods, as the case may be.

180. That upon all debts or sums certain, payable at a certain time or otherwise, whereupon interest is not reserved or agreed for, and which shall be overdue at the issuing of the fiat or filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, and provable thereunder, the creditor shall be entitled to prove for interest, to be calculated, at a rate not exceeding 4*l.* per centum per annum, up to the date of the fiat or the filing of such petition, from the time when such debts or sums certain were payable, if such debts or sums be payable by virtue of some written instrument at a certain time, or if payable otherwise, then from the time when demand of payment shall have been made in writing, so as such demand shall give notice to the debtor that interest will be claimed from the date of such demand until the time of payment.

181. That if any plaintiff in any action at law or suit in equity, or petitioner in bankruptcy or lunacy, shall have obtained any judgment, decree, or order against any person who shall thereafter become bankrupt for any debt or demand in respect of which such plaintiff or petitioner shall prove under the bankruptcy, such plaintiff or petitioner shall also be entitled to prove for the costs which he shall have incurred in obtaining the same, although such costs shall not have been taxed at the time of the bankruptcy; and if any defendant shall have obtained any judgment, decree, or order in any such action or suit, or in the matter of any such petition, against any person who shall thereafter become bankrupt, such defendant shall be entitled to prove for the costs which he shall have incurred in obtaining the same, although such costs shall not have been taxed at the time of the bankruptcy.

182. That no creditor who has brought any action or instituted any suit against any bankrupt in respect of a demand prior to the bankruptcy, or which might have been proved as a debt under the bankruptcy, shall prove a debt under such bankruptcy, or have any claim entered upon the proceedings, without relinquishing such action or suit, and the proving or claiming a debt under a fiat or petition for adjudication of bankruptcy by any creditor shall be deemed an election by such creditor to take the benefit of such fiat or petition with respect to the debt so proved or claimed; provided that such creditor shall not be liable to the payment to such bankrupt or his assignees of the costs of such action or suit so relinquished by him, and that where any such creditor shall have brought any action or suit against such bankrupt jointly with any other person or persons, his relinquishing such action or suit against the bankrupt shall not affect such action or suit against such other person or persons; provided also, that any creditor who shall have so proved or claimed, if the fiat or petition for adjudication be afterwards superseded or dismissed, may proceed in the action as if he had not so proved or claimed, and in bailable actions shall be at liberty, under the authority of a judge's order for that purpose, obtained in like manner as may now by law be done, to arrest the defendant de novo, if he has not put in bail below or perfected bail above, or if the defendant has put in or perfected such bail to have recourse against such bail, by requiring the bail below to put in and perfect bail above within the first eight days in term after notice in the London Gazette of the first superseding or dismissing such fiat or petition, and by suing the bail upon their recognisance, if the condition thereof is broken.

183. That whenever it shall appear to the assignees, or to two or more creditors who have each proved debts to the amount of 20*l.* or upwards, that any debt proved is not justly due, either in whole or in part, such assignees or creditors may make representation thereof to the court; and it shall be lawful for the court to summon and examine upon oath any person who shall have so proved, together with any person whose evidence may appear to the court to be material, either in support of or in opposition to any such debt; and if the court, upon the evidence given on both sides, or (if the person who shall have proved shall not attend to be examined, having been first duly summoned, or notice having been left at his last place of abode) upon the evidence adduced by such assignees or creditors, shall be of opinion that such debt is not due, either wholly or in part, the court shall be at liberty to expunge the same, either wholly or in part, from the proceedings; provided that such assignees or creditors requiring such investigation shall, before it is instituted, sign an undertaking, to be filed with the proceedings, to pay such costs as the court shall adjudge to the creditor who has proved such debt, such costs to be recovered by application to the court, upon which an order for payment thereof may be made by the court; provided also, that such assignees or creditors may apply in the first instance to the Vice-Chancellor, or either party may appeal against the determination of the Court of Bankruptcy.

184. That no creditor having security for his debt, or having made any attachment in London or in any other place, by virtue of any custom there used, of the goods and chattels of the bankrupt, shall receive upon any such security or attachment more than a rateable part of such debt, except in respect of any execution or extent served and levied by seizure and sale upon, or any mortgage of, or lien upon, any part of the property of such bankrupt before the date of the fiat or the filing of a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to give validity to any warrant of attorney, cognovit, or consent to a judge's order declared to be null and void by any provision of this act, nor to give validity to any judgment entered up under or by virtue of any such warrant of attorney or consent, or to any execution or extent executed or levied under or by virtue of any such warrant of attorney, cognovit, or consent.

And with respect to the audit, be it enacted,

185. That the court shall, whenever it shall think fit, appoint a public sitting to be holden after the sitting appointed for the last examination of the bankrupt, (of which public sitting, and of the purport whereof, ten days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette), to audit the accounts of the assignees; and at such sitting the assignees shall deliver upon oath a true statement in writing of all money received by them respectively, and when, and on what account, and how the same has been employed; and the court shall examine such statement, and compare the receipts with the payments, and ascertain what balances have been from time to time in the hands of such assignees respectively, and it shall be lawful for the court to examine the assignees upon oath touching the truth of such accounts, and to make therein all just allowances.

186. That the court may, as often as it shall appear expedient for the bankrupt's estate, direct any money, part of such estate, to be invested in the purchase of Exchequer bills, for the benefit of the creditors, and may direct where and with whom such Exchequer bills shall be kept, and cause such Exchequer bills to be sold when it shall appear to such court expedient, and may direct the proceeds thereof to be again laid out in the purchase of Exchequer bills, or to be applied for the benefit of the creditors, the making of any such purchase or sale to be subject to the rules or orders at any time in force under this act relating to the purchase, sale, or transfer of Exchequer bills by the accountant in bankruptcy.

And with respect to the dividend, be it enacted,

187. That the court shall, whenever it shall think fit, appoint a public sitting to be holden after the sitting appointed for the last examination of the bankrupt, when there are assets wherewith a dividend may be made, (of which public sitting, and of the purport whereof, twenty-one days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette), to make a dividend of the bankrupt's estate, and shall at such sitting direct such part of the net produce of the bankrupt's estate as it may think fit to be forthwith divided amongst such creditors as have proved debts under the bankruptcy, in proportion to their respective debts, and shall make an order in writing under the hand of the commissioner for dividend accordingly, to be filed with the proceedings, which order shall contain an account of the amount of the debts proved, of the money to be divided, of how much in the pound is then ordered to be paid to the creditors, and of the money allowed by the court to be retained, and of the reason for retaining the same; and the official assignee, in pursuance of such order, shall forthwith make such dividend in manner directed by the rules at any time in force under this act relating to the mode of payment of dividends by the official assignees; but no dividend shall be declared unless the accounts of the assignees shall have been first audited.

188. That if the bankrupt's estate shall not have been wholly divided upon the first dividend, the court shall, within eighteen months after the issuing of the fiat, or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, appoint a public sitting (whereof, and of the purport whereof, twenty-one days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette) to make a second dividend, when all creditors who have not proved their debts may prove the same, and at such sitting, but after such an audit as is directed by this act, shall order the balance in hand to be forthwith divided among such of the creditors as shall have proved their debts; and such second dividend shall be final, unless any action at law or suit in equity be depending, or any part of the estate be standing out not sold or disposed of, or unless some other estate or effects of the bankrupt shall afterwards come to the assignees, in which case they shall, as soon as may be, convert such estate and effects into money, and within two months after the same shall be so converted the same shall also be divided in manner aforesaid; and if at the expiration of two years from the issuing of any fiat, or the filing of any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, there shall remain any outstanding debts or other property due or belonging to the estate of the bankrupt, which cannot, in the opinion of the court, be collected and received without unreasonable or inconvenient delay, it shall be lawful for the assignees, under the direction of the court, to sell and assign such debts and other property, and also the books of the bankrupt relating to his trade, dealings, or estate, in such manner and subject to such conditions as shall be ordered by the court; and any person to whom any of such debts shall be so sold or assigned may sue for the same in his own name as fully as the assignees of such bankrupt might have done.

189. That fourteen days before a final dividend shall be advertised under any bankrupt's estate there shall be sent by the official assignee to each creditor's assignee of such estate a debtor and creditor account between the official assignee and such estate, shewing also the monies remaining uncollected under such estate, and the cause of such monies remaining uncollected; and a copy of such account shall be delivered to any creditor who shall apply for the same to the official assignee, and who shall have proved or claimed a debt, and to any other person, such person, if not a creditor, paying such sum, not exceeding 2*s.* 6*d.*, as shall be settled by the court for every such copy.

190. That no action for any dividend shall be brought against any assignee by any creditor who shall have proved under the bankruptcy; but if the official assignee shall refuse to pay any such dividend, the court may order payment thereof, with interest for the time that it shall have been withheld, and may also order the costs of the application.

And with respect to unclaimed dividends, be it enacted,

191. That all unclaimed dividends, and also any undivided surplus of a bankrupt's estate over and above the amount finally directed to be divided amongst the creditors of any bankrupt, shall be paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy, to be carried to the account intituled "The Unclaimed Dividend Account," subject to the order of the Lord Chancellor, or of the Vice-Chancellor, or of any court acting in prosecution of any bankruptcy, for the payment thereout of any dividend due to any creditor.

192. That, subject to any rule at any time in force under this act relating to unclaimed dividends, if any assignee under any bankruptcy shall have, either in his own hands, or at any banker's, or otherwise subject to his order or disposition, or shall know that there is or are in the hands or subject to the order and disposition of himself and any co-assignee or co-assignees, or if any or either of them, any unclaimed dividend or dividends, or any such undivided surplus as aforesaid, such assignee shall, as to any such now existing unclaimed dividend or dividends, within one year after the passing of this act, and as to any future dividend or dividends within three calendar months next after the expiration of one year from the time of the declaration and order of payment of such future dividend or dividends, either pay the same to the creditor or creditors or other the person or persons entitled to the same respectively, or cause a certificate thereof respectively to be filed in the office of the Lord Chancellor's Secretary of Bankrupts, containing a full and true account of the name or names of the creditor or creditors to whom such unclaimed dividend or dividends is or are respectively due, and of the amount of such dividend or dividends respectively, and shall in like manner, as to any such now existing undivided surplus as aforesaid within one year after the passing of this act, and as to any such future undivided surplus as aforesaid within three calendar months next after the expiration of one year after the final declaration of dividends, cause a certificate, stating the full and true amount of such surplus, to be filed in the office of the Lord Chancellor's Secretary of Bankrupts; and every certificate to be filed as aforesaid shall be signed by the assignee or assignees filing the same; and every assignee shall, within one year next after the filing of any such certificate as aforesaid, pay or cause to be paid into the Bank of England to the name of the accountant in bankruptcy, to be carried to the account intituled "The Unclaimed Dividend Account," the full amount of the unclaimed dividends mentioned in such certificate, or so much thereof as shall not have been then paid to the creditor or creditors or other person or persons entitled thereto, and also the full amount of such undivided surplus as aforesaid; and every official assignee shall cause a certificate to be filed of all unclaimed dividends and undivided surplus belonging to any bankrupt's estate under his care and management, in such manner and subject to such provisions as above prescribed with respect to unclaimed dividends and undivided surplus, and if the official assignee had such dividends or undivided surpl in his own hands: provided always, that no certificate of u unclaimed dividends shall be filed until the expiration of o year after the declaration and order for payment of such d vidends.

193. That the accountant in bankruptcy shall, on the applic tion of any assignee, give to him a certificate stating the amou of any sum of money which he may be desirous of paying in the Bank of England under the provisions hereinbefore co tained, and on the production of such last-mentioned certifica the governor and company of the Bank of England shall r ceive the sum therein mentioned, and give a receipt for t same, and shall forthwith carry the same to the credit of the a countant in bankruptcy to the account intituled "The U claimed Dividend Account;" and every such certificate and r ceipt shall be given without fee or reward.

And with respect to allowances to the bankrupt, be it enacte

194. That it shall be lawful for the court, if it think f from time to time to make such allowance to the bankrupt o of his estate, until he shall have passed his last examination, shall be necessary for the support of himself and his family: pr vided always, that no such allowance shall be made by the cou for any period after the adjournment of the last examinati sine die.

195. That every bankrupt who shall have obtained his cert ficate, if the net produce of his estate in hand shall by any ord of dividend (with or without prior dividend) pay the creditor who before or at the time of making such order have prove under the bankruptcy 10*s.* in the pound, shall be allowed a paid 5*l.* per centum out of such produce, provided such allow ance shall not exceed 400*l.*; and every such bankrupt, if suc produce shall (with or without prior dividend) pay such cre ditors 12*s.* 6*d.* in the pound, shall be allowed and paid as afore said 7*l.* 10*s.* per centum, provided such allowance shall not ex ceed 500*l.*; and every such bankrupt, if such produce shal (with or without prior dividend) pay such creditors 15*s.* in th pound or upwards, shall be allowed and paid 10*l.* per centum provided such allowance shall not exceed 600*l.*: provided al ways, that no such allowance shall be payable to any bankrupt until after the expiration of twelve months from the issuing o the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bank ruptcy, and such allowance shall then be payable only in th event of the dividends paid to the creditors who at any time before the expiration of such twelve months shall have proved debts, being of the requisite amount in that behalf aforesaid; and if at the expiration of such time the dividends paid shall not amount to 10*s.* in the pound, it shall be lawful for the court to allow such bankrupt so much as the assignees and court shall think fit, not exceeding 3*l.* per centum and 300*l.*: provided always, that the court shall, if it think fit, reduce any allowance in case it shall have only granted the bankrupt a certificate of the second or third class.

196. That in all joint fiats or petitions for adjudication of bankruptcy under which any partner shall have obtained his certificate, if a sufficient dividend shall have been paid upon the joint estate and upon the separate estate of such partner, he shall be entitled to his allowance, although the other partner may not be entitled to any allowance.

197. That if the produce of the estate of any bankrupt shall be sufficient to pay 20*s.* in the pound and interest as hereinafter mentioned, and to leave a surplus, the court may order such surplus to be paid to such bankrupt, his executors, administrators, or assigns; and every such bankrupt shall be entitled to recover the remainder, if any, of the debts due to him; but such surplus shall not be paid until all the creditors who have proved shall have received interest upon their debts to be calculated and paid at the rate and in the order following; viz. all creditors whose debts are by law entitled to carry interest in the event of a surplus shall first receive interest on such debts at the rate of interest reserved or by law payable or provable thereon, to be calculated from the date of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy; and after such interest shall have been paid, all other creditors who have proved shall receive interest on their debts from the date of the fiat or of such petition at the rate of 4*l.* per centum per annum.

And with respect to the certificate of conformity, be it enacted,

198. That, forthwith after the bankrupt shall have passed his last examination, the court shall appoint a public sitting for the allowance of his certificate, (whereof, and of the purport whereof, twenty-one days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette and to the solicitor of the assignees), and at such sitting the assignees, or any of the creditors of such bankrupt who shall have given to the registrar of the court three clear days' notice in writing of his intention to oppose, may be heard against the allowance of such certificate; and the court, having regard to the conformity of the bankrupt to the law of bankruptcy, and to his conduct as a trader before as well as after his bankruptcy, and whether the allowance of such certificate be opposed by any creditor or not, shall judge of any objection against allowing such certificate, and either find the bankrupt entitled thereto, and allow the same, or refuse or suspend the allowance thereof, or annex such conditions thereto as the justice of the case may require.

199. That the certificate of conformity under this act shall be in writing under the seal of the court and the hand of the commissioner, and shall certify that the bankrupt has made a full discovery of his estate and effects, and in all things conformed, and that, so far as the court can judge, there does not appear any reason to question the truth or fulness of such discovery, (and shall be in the form contained in Schedule (Z.) to this act annexed, or to the like effect); and notice of the allowance of such certificate and of the class thereof shall be advertised in the London Gazette, in such manner as may be directed by any rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act; and every certificate of conformity allowed by any commissioner before the time appointed for the commencement of this act, though not confirmed according to the laws in force before that time, shall discharge the bankrupt from all debts due by him when he became bankrupt, and from all claims and demands made provable under the fiat.

200. That the certificate of conformity allowed under this act, subject to the provisions herein contained, shall discharge the bankrupt from all debts due by him when he became bankrupt, and from all claims and demands made provable under the bankruptcy: provided always, that no such certificate shall release or discharge any person who was a partner with such bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy, or was then jointly bound or had made any joint contract with such bankrupt.

201. That no bankrupt shall be entitled to a certificate of conformity under this act, and any such certificate, if allowed, shall be void, if such bankrupt shall have lost by any sort of gaming or wagering in one day 20*l.*, or within one year next preceding the issuing of the fiat or filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy 200*l.*, or if he shall within one year next preceding the issuing of the fiat or the filing of such petition have lost 200*l.* by any contract for the purchase or sale of any Government or other stock, where such contract was not to be performed within one week after the contract, or where the stock bought or sold was not actually transferred or delivered in pursuance of such contract; or if such bankrupt shall, after an act of bankruptcy, or in contemplation of bankruptcy, or with intent to defeat the object of this or any other statute relating to bankrupts, have parted with, concealed, destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified, or caused to be concealed, destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified, any of his books, papers, writings, or securities, or made or been privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entry in any book of account or other document with intent to defraud his creditors, or shall have concealed any part of his property, or if any person having proved a false debt under the bankruptcy, such bankrupt being privy thereto, or afterwards knowing the same, shall not have disclosed the same to his assignees within one month after such knowledge.

202. That any contract or security made or given by any bankrupt or other person unto or in trust for any creditor, for securing the payment of any money due by such bankrupt at his bankruptcy, as a consideration or with intent to persuade such creditor to forbear opposing, or to consent to the allowance of the bankrupt's certificate, or to forbear to petition for the recall of the same, shall be void, and the money thereby secured or agreed to be paid shall not be recoverable, and the party sued on such contract or security may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence.

LONDON, OCTOBER 13, 1849.

We return to the subject of satisfied terms, not for the purpose of any further discussing the case of Doe d. Clay v. Jones, which has received in the preceding number all the consideration due to it, but for the purpose of discussing the general principle of the old law as to the use it permitted to be made of satisfied terms; and we do so, because, as it was fondly hoped that the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 119, had given the death-blow to the keeping up of terms by way of protection, many, especially young lawyers, had begun to treat the learning of them as learning yearly diminishing in frequency of application, and over which they might pass lightly, not absolutely neglecting it, but not caring so much about either its principles or its practice as did their fathers, and therefore forgetting a good deal about both. Out of this dream Doe d. Clay v. Jones (assuming it to be law) has roused the enthusiasts, who imagined, in their legal sleep, that so lovely a piece of technicality as the doctrine of getting in satisfied terms, possessing the double charm of absurdity and injustice, could be permitted to be at once annihilated by any act of Parliament.

That we are not speaking too strongly against the doctrine of protection by the getting in of outstanding terms, a very little consideration will, we think, satisfy any one. A term was originally created by the owner of the legal inheritance for some substantial purpose, such as to secure an advance of money; and for that purpose it was reasonable to give to the person intended to be secured, the right of possession, with all its powers and incidents. When the money was paid off, of course there was an end of all substance in the term, as regarded the person for whose protection it was originally created; but the legal estate in it being still subsisting, it was said it should be thenceforth held in trust to attend and to protect the inheritance.

If by the inheritance had been intended the real equitable inheritance—that is, the right of that one out of several purchasers to whom equity would have given the preference—there would have been no injustice, though there would have been little use in treating the satisfied term as attending and protecting the inheritance. But this was not what the old law did: it gave to any person who had dealt with the party purporting to have the inheritance, though he might really have nothing whatever to do with it, the protection of the legal estate in the term, if he could get it. So that a satisfied term never had any real operation at all, except to protect a person who had no title, or a defective title, to the equitable inheritance; for it is quite clear that there can be but one real owner of an inheritance, viz. either the original owner, or the first purchaser from such owner; if there be any second purchaser, whether with or without notice, he clearly obtains no estate whatever, either at law or in equity. Now, even upon legal principle, it is altogether wrong to say, that, as between B., who purchases the equitable inheritance from A., the owner of it, and C., a subsequent purchaser, to whom A. fraudulently affects to sell an inheritance which is no longer his, the equities are equal. The equities are, on the contrary, totally unequal, for B. has really bought an existing equitable estate, while C. has bought nothing at all; and to say that a satisfied term, which attended the inheritance, may be used by C., not to protect the inheritance, but to protect him against the inheritance in the hands of an owner who has committed no fraud, is quite inconsistent with the true nature and doctrine of trusts. But it is still more inconsistent with moral equity; for what moral equity has C. against B. that should entitle him to take away B.'s estate?—which he in effect does, if he is permitted, by getting hold of a satisfied term, to keep him out of possession. The simple state of the case is, that B. has bought that which might justly be sold to him. C. has afterwards intended to buy, and believed he bought, but he has been cheated. How does the fact, that he has been cheated by A., give him any moral claim as against B.?

It is not easy to conceive how the doctrine ever found admission into a court of equity. It obviously confounds the equal innocence of two persons, in respect of their dealings with a third, with equal equity as between themselves—assuming that, because two purchasers have both paid their money to a person purporting to deal with an equitable estate, each has an equal right to call for the outstanding legal estate: thus treating the equitable estate as absolutely nothing, and overlooking the doctrine, both equitable and moral, that, if two persons contract with a third for an equity, the first in time stands first in right. It is true, in a sense, that there is, strictly speaking, no such thing as an equitable estate. The legal estate in the land is the only complete title to it, and absorbs the whole of what may strictly be called the estate in it; so that an equitable estate is a mere right to have the legal estate applied for the benefit of the equitable owner, and a conveyance of an equitable estate is in reality not a conveyance of anything, but a mere agreement, or assignment of an agreement, to give the legal estate. Nevertheless, equity has never treated equitable interests as nullities, but has, whether treating them as actual estates, or whether treating assurances of them as contracts, applied to them the usual rule of priority between several contracting parties; and it is inconceivable how, so dealing between them in regard to their equitable estate, equity could ever have suffered its respect for the legal estate so far to prevail, as to induce it to permit the person whose equitable title it holds second, if there were only equitable estates, to get and keep possession by means of a legal title, which, if the Court had carried out its own rule as to equitable rights, the first purchaser had the exclusive right to call for, for his protection.

Who can regret that the Legislature should have desired to sweep away such a system; and who can do otherwise than hope, that if, according to Doe d. Clay v. Jones, the Legislature has failed, it will, by some further enactment, put the matter beyond all doubt?

PUBLIC GENERAL STATUTES.

12 & 13 Victoriæ.—Session 2.

203. That at any time within six months after any certificate of conformity shall have been allowed, and subject to such order as to deposit of costs as may by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed, any creditor of the bankrupt, or any assignee, official or other, may apply to the Vice-Chancellor that such certificate may be recalled and delivered up to be cancelled; and the Vice-Chancellor may, on good cause shewn, order such certificate to be recalled and cancelled.

204. That no bankrupt, after his certificate shall have been allowed, shall be liable to pay or satisfy any debt, claim, or demand from which he shall have been discharged by virtue of such certificate, or any part of such debt, claim, or demand, upon any contract, promise, or agreement made after the issuing of the fiat or filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, and if any bankrupt be sued upon any such contract, promise, or agreement, he may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence.

205. That any bankrupt who shall, after his certificate shall have been allowed, be arrested, or have any action brought against him, for any debt, claim, or demand provable under his bankruptcy, shall be discharged upon entering an appearance, and may plead in general that the cause of action accrued before he became bankrupt, and may give this act and the special matter in evidence; and such bankrupt's certificate shall be sufficient evidence of the trading, bankruptcy, fiat, or petition for adjudication, and other proceedings precedent to the obtaining such certificate; and if any such bankrupt shall be taken in execution or detained in prison for such debt, claim, or demand, where judgment has been obtained before the allowance of his certificate, it shall be lawful for any judge of the court wherein judgment has been so obtained, on such bankrupt's producing his certificate, to order any officer who shall have such bankrupt in custody by virtue of such execution to discharge such bankrupt without exacting any fee, and such officer shall be hereby indemnified for so doing.

206. That no such certificate shall be delivered to the bankrupt until after the expiration of the time allowed for entering an appeal; and if an appeal be duly entered against the judgment of such court for the allowance of the certificate, or for the refusal, the withholding, or the class of the certificate, and notice thereof be given to the court in such manner as may by any general rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed, the certificate shall be further kept by the court, and abide the judgment of the Vice-Chancellor thereupon; and upon any appeal duly entered and prosecuted relating to the certificate or to the judgment of the court as to any offence under this act charged against the bankrupt, the Vice-Chancellor shall have power to rescind or vary the order of the court below, or to make such other order thereon as he may think fit; and upon an order for the allowance of any certificate by the Vice-Chancellor, and whether with conditions or not, or after a suspension thereof by order of the Vice-Chancellor or not, such certificate may be allowed and signed by the court below, or by the Vice-Chancellor.

207. That the allowance of the certificate by the court, and any order for the refusal or suspension of the allowance thereof, except in case of appeal, shall be final and conclusive, and shall not be reviewed by the court, unless the court shall thereafter see good and sufficient cause to believe that the allowance of such certificate, or the refusal or suspension thereof, has been obtained on false evidence or by reason of an improper suppression of evidence, or has otherwise been fraudulently obtained, in any of which cases it shall and may be lawful for the court, upon the application of the bankrupt, or of any creditor of the bankrupt, and subject to such order as to deposit of a sum for costs, and to such notices to the bankrupt and to creditors, by advertisement or otherwise, as the court shall think fit, to grant a rehearing of the matter, and to rehear the same accordingly; and upon such rehearing the court shall make such order as to the allowance of the certificate, or the refusal or suspension thereof, as the justice of the case may require, in like manner, upon like conditions, and having regard to the like circumstances, so far as the case will admit, as upon an original hearing; and in case the certificate shall have been previously allowed, and upon such rehearing the allowance thereof shall not be confirmed, such certificate shall have no force or effect whatever, and the same shall be delivered up to the court and cancelled.

And with respect to estates tail and base fees, be it enacted,

208. That such of the clauses of an act passed in the 3 & 4 Will. 4, [c. 74], intituled "An Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance," as are numbered respectively in the copies of that act printed by her Majesty's printers, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 71, 72, 73, shall extend and apply to proceedings in bankruptcy under a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, as fully and effectually as if those clauses were re-enacted in this act, and expressly extended to such proceedings.

And with respect to copyholds, be it enacted,

209. That the court shall have power to sell, and by deed indented, and inrolled in the courts of the manor or manors whereof the lands respectively may be holden, to convey, for the benefit of the creditors, any copyhold or customaryhold lands, or any interest to which any bankrupt is entitled therein, and thereby to entitle or authorise any person or persons on behalf of the Court of Bankruptcy to surrender the same, for the purpose of any purchaser being admitted thereto.

210. That every person to whom any such conveyance of copyhold or customary lands or tenements, or of any such interest therein, shall be made, shall, before he enter into or take any profit of the same, agree and compound with the lords of the manors of whom the same shall be holden for such fines, dues, and other services as theretofore have been usually paid for the same, and thereupon the said lords shall, at the next or any subsequent court to be holden for the said manors, grant unto such vendee, upon request, the said copy or customary lands or tenements, for such estate or interest as shall have been so conveyed to him as aforesaid, reserving the ancient rents, customs, and services, and shall admit him tenant of the same.

And with respect to arrangements between debtors and their creditors under the superintendence and control of the court, be it enacted,

211. That any such trader unable to meet his engagements with his creditors, and desirous of laying the state of his affairs before them, under the superintendence and control of the Court of Bankruptcy, and of submitting himself to the jurisdiction of the court, in manner hereinafter mentioned, may present a petition to the court, setting forth the true cause of such inability, and praying that his person and property may be protected from all process until further order; and the court, on such petition, shall have power to grant such protection, and may renew the same from time to time as it shall think fit, and, if the petitioner be in prison or in custody for debt, may, except in the cases next hereinafter mentioned, order his immediate release, either absolutely or on condition, and may take bail for his attendance at the several sittings of the court hereinafter mentioned: provided always, that the court shall not order such release where it shall appear by any judgment, order, commitment, or sentence under which such petitioner is in prison or in custody, or by the record or entry of any such judgment, order, commitment, or sentence, and the pleadings or proceedings previously thereto, that he is in prison or in custody for any debt contracted by fraud or breach of trust, or by reason of any prosecution against him whereby he had been convicted of any offence, or for any debt contracted by reason of any judgment in any proceeding for breach of the revenue laws, or in any action for breach of promise of marriage, seduction, criminal conversation, libel, slander, assault, battery, malicious arrest, malicious trespass, maliciously suing out a fiat in bankruptcy, or maliciously filing or prosecuting a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy: provided also, that such release shall in nowise affect any rights of the creditor at whose suit such petitioner may be in prison or in custody against such petitioner, except the right of detaining him in prison or in custody, whilst protected from imprisonment by order of the court.

212. That every such petition shall be in the form contained in Schedule (A a.) to this act annexed, and be filed and prosecuted in the court within the district of which the petitioner shall have resided or carried on business for six months next immediately preceding the time of filing such petition, unless the senior commissioner shall order the same to be filed and prosecuted or further prosecuted in any other district, and which order he shall have power to make, and the date of filing every such petition shall be indorsed thereon, and there shall be filed therewith an affidavit in the form contained in Schedule (A b.) to this act annexed.

213. That, forthwith after the granting of any order for protection, the court shall appoint a private sitting to be held at such time and place as it may name, and shall at the same time appoint an official assignee to act in the matter of such petition, and upon sufficient cause shewn may, if it shall think fit, direct that the estate and effects of the petitioner, or any part thereof, shall be possessed and received by such official assignee, or be taken possession of by the messenger of the court; and all stock, monies, and other effects of the petitioner shall be transferred, delivered, and paid by the official assignee into the Bank of England, to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy, to be subject to the like rule and regulation for the keeping the account of the said monies and other effects, and for the payment and delivery in, investment, and payment and delivery out of the same, as in bankruptcy, and the court shall have power to examine on oath such petitioner, or any witness produced by him, or any creditor or person claiming to be a creditor of such petitioner, and to adjourn such private sitting or any subsequent private sitting, from time to time, as it shall think fit; and notice of such private sitting shall be given in writing to every creditor not less than fourteen days before the same is held, such notice to be sent by post addressed to every creditor at his last known place of business or residence.

214. That such petitioning trader shall, ten days before the day appointed for the private sitting of the court, file in court, and in such form as may by any rule or order to be made in pursuance of this act be directed, a full account of his debts, and the consideration thereof, and the names, residences, and occupations of his creditors, and also a full account of his estate and effects, whether in possession, reversion, or expectancy, and of all debts and rights due to or claimed by him, and of all property, of what kind soever, held in trust for him, and shall therein set forth such proposal as he is able to make for the future payment or the compromise of such debts or engagements, and shall furnish the official assignee with a copy of such account.

215. That at the private sitting of the court appointed in manner hereinbefore mentioned, or at any adjournment thereof, the creditors shall prove their debts, (such proofs to be in all respects as proofs in bankruptcy), and the petitioning trader shall attend, and make oath of the truth of the account filed by him, and may be examined thereon; and if at such sitting, or at any adjournment thereof, three-fifths in number and value of the creditors who have proved debts to the amount of 10*l.* shall assent to the proposal of such petitioner, or to any modification thereof, the court shall appoint another private sitting for the confirmation of such proposal or modified proposal, and such second sitting shall be held not earlier than fourteen days from the first sitting, and notice thereof in writing shall be personally served on every creditor who was not present by himself or his appointed agent at such first sitting seven clear days at least before the day appointed for such second sitting: provided always, that the court, if it shall think fit, may make order in any special case that service of such notice at the last known place of abode or business of any creditor shall be deemed good service.

216. That at such second sitting, or at any adjournment thereof, the creditors may also prove their debts, and if three-fifths in number and value of those who have proved debts to the amount of 10*l.* shall agree to accept such proposal as was assented to at the first sitting, the terms thereof shall be reduced into writing, and the creditors shall sign the same; and such resolution or agreement (subject to such confirmation as is hereinafter mentioned) shall thenceforth be binding and of full force, as well against such petitioning trader as against all persons who were creditors at the date of his petition, and who had notice of the said several sittings of the court; and the court, if it shall think the same reasonable and proper to be executed, after hearing such creditors, by themselves, their counsel or attornies, as may desire to be heard either for or against such resolution or agreement, shall approve and confirm the same, and cause it to be filed and entered of record, and shall grant to the petitioner a certificate of the filing and entering of record of such approval and confirmation, and shall from time to time indorse on such certificate a protection from arrest; and such petitioner shall be free from arrest at the suit of any person being a creditor at the date of his petition, and having had such several notice or notices as aforesaid; and any officer arresting such petitioner at the suit of any such creditor, and on sight of such certificate and protection not releasing such petitioner, shall be liable to such penalty as is provided respecting bankrupts in the like case: provided, however, that no such protection shall be valid in favour of any such petitioner who shall be proved to have been about to abscond beyond the jurisdiction of the court, or who has concealed or is concealing any part of his estate or effects, nor against any creditor whose debt is not truly specified in the account filed by such petitioner, nor against any creditor whose debt has been contracted by such petitioner by any manner of fraud or breach of trust.

217. That any person duly authorised by letter of attorney from any creditor who has proved a debt to the amount of 10*l.* and upwards shall be entitled to vote on the question of assent or dissent to the proposal of such petitioning trader.

218. That from and after the date of the approval and confirmation of such resolution or agreement all the estate and effects of such petitioning trader shall vest in the official assignee, (if such shall be required by virtue of such resolution, and either alone or jointly with any person or persons, as may be expressed in such resolution), as fully as if such official assignee were an assignee under any bankruptcy; and every such official assignee may sue and be sued as if he were such assignee; and in the event of the death, resignation, or removal of any such official assignee, the court shall have power to appoint another; and if the estate and effects shall have vested in such official assignee, the same shall vest in the new official assignee so appointed, in the same manner as in bankruptcy.

219. That the official assignee shall once at least in every six months, or oftener if the court shall require it, produce to the court, on oath, a full and true account of all monies, property, and effects of such petitioning trader which have come to his hands, and of the disposal thereof; and the court shall examine the same, and shall certify the result of such examination, and, if need be, order payment to the creditors of such petitioner, according to the terms of the resolution or agreement, and may in such account make all just allowances, and may order payment to the official assignee of such sum as a remuneration for his services as shall appear to be just and reasonable.

220. That in case any difficulty shall arise in the execution of the said resolution or agreement, it shall be lawful for the court to cause a special sitting of the court to be held; and the resolution of the majority of the creditors at such sitting who have proved debts to the amount of 10*l.*, to confirm, alter, or annul the whole or any part of such resolution or agreement, shall be as valid as if it had been part of the original resolution or agreement: provided, however, that if one-third in number and value of the creditors of such petitioning trader do not attend such sitting, the resolution thereof shall not be valid unless the same is approved and confirmed by the court.

221. That so soon as the said resolution or agreement shall have been carried into effect, and the creditors of such petitioning trader shall have been satisfied, according to the tenor thereof, the court shall give to such petitioner a certificate under the hand and seal of the commissioner in the form contained in Schedule (A c.) to this act annexed, setting forth the filing of the petition, the resolution or agreement of the creditors, and that the said resolution or agreement has been fully carried into effect; and such certificate shall thenceforth operate to all intents and purposes as fully as if the same were a certificate of conformity under a bankruptcy, except only that any debt which shall have been contracted wholly or in part by reason of any manner of fraud or breach of trust, or without reasonable probability at the time of contract of being able to pay the same, or by reason of any judgment in any prosecution for breach of the revenue laws, or in any action for breach of promise of marriage, seduction, criminal conversation, libel, slander, assault, battery, malicious arrest, malicious trespass, maliciously suing out a fiat in bankruptcy, or maliciously filing or prosecuting a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, shall not be barred by such certificate.

222. That the court, on being satisfied that the official assignee has fully performed his trust, shall give to him a certificate thereof in the form contained in Schedule (A d.) to this act annexed; and such certificate shall be a full release and acquittance to such official assignee, both in law and equity, for all matters done by him as such official assignee.

223. That if such petitioning trader shall not duly attend the sittings of the court, or if he shall not file his account in manner aforesaid within such extended time as may be allowed him by the court for such purpose, or if he shall fail to obey any order of the court which may be made in the matter of his petition, such petition shall be dismissed; and if at the first private sitting of the court, or at any adjournment thereof, the proposal of the petitioner, or some modification thereof, be not assented to, or if at any time after the filing of any petition for protection it shall be shewn to the satisfaction of the court, by any creditor, that the debts of such petitioner, or any part thereof, have been contracted by reason of any manner of fraud or breach of trust, or without reasonable probability at the time of contract of being able to pay the same, or by reason of any judgment in any prosecution for breach of the revenue laws, or in any action for breach of promise of marriage, seduction, criminal conversation, libel, slander, assault, battery, malicious arrest, malicious trespass, maliciously suing out a fiat in bankruptcy, or maliciously filing or prosecuting a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, or if it shall be shewn that the affidavit filed with his petition was wilfully untrue, so far as concerned the assets ready to be produced by him, or that he has not made a full disclosure of his debts and credits, estate and effects, and is not desirous of making a bonâ fide arrangement with all his creditors, or that his proposal to that effect is not reasonable and proper to be executed under the direction of the court, or that he has postponed the presentation of his petition longer than was excusable, or if within three months of the time of presenting his petition he shall have assigned, transferred, or made away with any portion of his estate or effects otherwise than in due course, or shall have voluntarily done or suffered any act whereby his goods shall have been taken in execution, it shall be lawful for the court to adjudge such petitioner a bankrupt, and to adjourn all further proceedings in the matter into the public court, and to advertise such adjudication, and appoint sittings for choice of assignees and for last examination, as in bankruptcy; and such petitioner shall thenceforth be amenable to the jurisdiction of the court in the same manner as any other bankrupt, and any proposal which may have been made or assented to or confirmed shall be wholly and altogether void; and the court shall have power, at any time, on the application of any creditor, to appoint a private sitting for the purpose of such inquiry, and may summon before it such petitioning trader, or any other person, and examine him upon oath touching such matters; and every such summons and examination shall be enforced in such manner as summonses and examinations are enforced in matters of bankruptcy.

And with respect to arrangements by deed, be it enacted,

224. That every deed or memorandum of arrangement now or hereafter entered into between any such trader and his creditors, and signed by or on behalf of six-sevenths in number and value of those creditors whose debts amount to 10*l.* and upwards, touching such trader's liabilities, and his release therefrom, and the distribution, inspection, conduct, management, and mode of winding-up of his estate, or all or any of such matters, or any matters having reference thereto, shall (subject to the conditions hereinafter mentioned) be as effectual and obligatory in all respects upon all the creditors who shall not have signed such deed or memorandum of arrangement as if they had duly signed the same; and such deed or memorandum, when so signed, shall not be or be liable to be disturbed or impeached by reason of any prior or subsequent act of bankruptcy: provided always, that every creditor shall be accounted a creditor in value in respect of such amount only as, upon an account fairly stated, after allowing the value of mortgaged property and other such available securities or liens from such trader, shall appear to be the balance due to him.

225. That no such deed or memorandum of arrangement shall be effectual or obligatory upon any creditor who shall not have signed the same, until after the expiration of three months from the time at which such creditor shall have had notice from such trader of his suspension of payment, and of such deed or memorandum of arrangement, unless such trader shall within such time obtain from the court an order or certificate of the said court declaring or certifying that such deed or memorandum of arrangement has been duly signed by or on behalf of such majority of the creditors as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the court within the district of which the trader shall have resided or carried on business for six months next immediately preceding his suspension of payment to make such order or certificate on the petition of any such trader, and to exercise jurisdiction in and over the matters of any such application; and no creditor who shall not have had fourteen days' notice of any intended application for such order or certificate as aforesaid shall be bound thereby.

226. That when the trustee or inspector under any such deed or memorandum of arrangement, or, if there shall be no such trustee or inspector, when any two of the creditors, shall be satisfied that six-sevenths in number and value of the creditors whose debts amount to 10*l.* and upwards have signed such deed or memorandum, it shall be lawful for such trustee or inspector, or for such two creditors, as the case may be, to certify the same to the court in writing, and such certificate shall be filed with the registrar of the court, and shall thereupon be primâ facie evidence in all courts of law and equity that such deed or memorandum of arrangement has been so signed.

227. That every such certificate as last aforesaid shall have appended thereto a full account of the debts of such trader, together with the names, residences, and occupations of his creditors, and shall be accompanied by an affidavit by such trader verifying the same; and any omission in such account, or the insertion therein of any debt not really existing, or of any larger amount of debt than that really existing, and which shall appear to the court to have been made through the culpable negligence or fraud of such trader, with intent to defraud any of his creditors, shall deprive him of the benefit of the provisions of this act with respect to arrangements by deed, and of the discharge proposed in any such deed or memorandum of arrangement: provided always, that any omission, insertion, or incorrectness in such account, which shall not have been made through such culpable negligence or fraud as aforesaid, shall not defeat or otherwise affect such deed or memorandum of arrangement.

228. That the creditors of every such trader shall have the same rights respectively as to set-off, mutual credit, lien, and priority, and joint and separate assets shall be distributed, in like manner as in bankruptcy; and no creditor shall be prejudiced or affected by being a party to any such deed or memorandum of arrangement as aforesaid, or by the same being obligatory upon him as to his right or remedy against any person other than such trader; and every person who would be entitled to prove in bankruptcy shall be deemed a creditor within the meaning of the provisions of this act with respect to arrangements by deed.

229. That if any creditor of any trader shall be desirous to shew that the administration of the estate of such trader has not been duly conducted in conformity with such deed or memorandum of arrangement, it shall be lawful for him to apply to the court by petition, supported by affidavit, stating any facts or circumstances to shew that such administration has not been duly conducted, and thereupon the court shall have full power and it is hereby fully authorised to consider the subject-matter of such application, and if it shall think fit may direct any inquiry, and in such manner as it shall think proper, into the subject of such application, and generally may make such order and exercise such jurisdiction in or over the subject-matter of such application, and the costs thereof, as to the said court shall appear just.

And with respect to composition after adjudication of bankruptcy, be it enacted,

230. That any bankrupt, at any time after he shall have passed his last examination, may call a meeting of his creditors, (whereof, and of the purport whereof, twenty-one days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette), and if the bankrupt or his friends shall make an offer of composition, and nine-tenths in number and value of the creditors assembled at such meeting shall agree to accept the same, another meeting for the purpose of deciding upon such offer shall be appointed to be holden, whereof such notice shall be given as aforesaid, and if at such second meeting nine-tenths in number and value of the creditors then present shall also agree to accept such offer, the court shall and may, upon such acceptance being testified by them in writing, and upon payment of such sum as the court shall direct, annul the adjudication of bankruptcy, and supersede or dismiss the fiat or petition for adjudication, and every creditor of such bankrupt shall be bound to accept of such composition so agreed to.

231. That in deciding upon the offer of composition no creditor whose debt is below 20*l.* shall be reckoned in number, but the debt due to such creditor shall be computed in value; and every creditor to the amount of 50*l.* and upwards, residing out of England, shall be personally served with a copy of the notice of the meeting to decide upon such offer as aforesaid, and of the purpose for which the same is called, so long before such meeting as that he may have time to vote thereat, and such creditor shall be entitled to vote by letter of attorney, executed and attested in manner required for a creditor's voting in the choice of assignees; and if any creditor shall agree to accept any gratuity or higher composition for assenting to such offer, he shall forfeit the debt due to him, together with such gratuity or composition; and the bankrupt shall (if thereto required) make oath before the court that there has been no such transaction between him, or any person with his privity, and any of the creditors, and that he has not used any undue means or influence with any of them to attain such assent.

And with respect to evidence, be it enacted,

232. That the proper officer of the court in London and in the several districts in the country shall, on the reasonable request of any bankrupt or arranging debtor, or of any creditor of such bankrupt having proved his debt, or of an arranging debtor, when the debt of the arranging creditor has been admitted in the petition or proved, or on the like request of the attorney of any such bankrupt, debtor, or creditor, produce and shew to such bankrupt, debtor, creditor, or attorney, at such times as the court shall direct, every fiat, petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, adjudication of bankruptcy, and petition for arrangement, against or by such bankrupt, and all orders and proceedings under any such fiat, petition, or adjudication, and the court shall order the official assignee or officer of the court, as the case may be, to permit such bankrupt, debtor, creditor, or attorney to have inspection at all reasonable times of all books, papers, and writings relating to the matters of such fiat, petition, or adjudication, and the estate of the bankrupt or debtor in the possession of the assignees, or filed in court in such matter, and permit him to inspect and examine the same; and such official assignee or such officer shall provide, for any such bankrupt, debtor, creditor, or attorney requiring the same, an office copy of such fiat, petition, or other proceeding, books, papers, and writings as aforesaid, or of such part thereof as shall be required, receiving such fee or sum or rate of charge as may be authorised in that behalf.

233. That if the bankrupt shall not, (if he were within the United Kingdom at the date of the adjudication), within twenty-one days after the advertisement of the bankruptcy in the London Gazette, or (if he were in any other part of Europe at the date of the adjudication) within three months after such advertisement, or (if he were elsewhere at the date of the adjudication) within twelve months after such advertisement, have commenced an action, suit, or other proceeding to dispute or annul the fiat, or the petition for adjudication, and shall not have prosecuted the same with due diligence and with effect, the Gazette containing such advertisement shall be conclusive evidence in all cases as against such bankrupt, and in all actions at law or suits in equity brought by the assignees for any debt or demand for which such bankrupt might have sustained any action or suit had he not been adjudged bankrupt, that such person so adjudged bankrupt became a bankrupt before the date and suing forth of such fiat, or before the date and filing of the petition for adjudication, and that such fiat was sued forth, or such petition filed, on the day on which the same is stated in the Gazette to bear date.

234. That in any action, other than an action brought by the assignees for any debt or demand for which the bankrupt might have sustained an action had he not been adjudged bankrupt, and whether at the suit of or against the assignees, or against any person acting under the warrant of the court, for anything done under such warrant, no proof shall be required, at the trial, of the petitioning creditor's debt, or of the trading or act of bankruptcy respectively, unless the other party in such action shall, if defendant at or before pleading, and if plaintiff before issue joined, give notice in writing to such assignees or other person that he intends to dispute some and which of such matters; and in case such notice shall have been given, if such assignees or other person shall prove the matter so disputed, or the other party admit the same, the judge before whom the cause shall be tried may (if he think fit) grant a certificate of such proof or admission; and such assignees or other person shall be entitled to the costs occasioned by such notice; and such costs shall, if such assignees or other person shall obtain a verdict, be added to the costs, and if the other party shall obtain a verdict shall be deducted from the costs, which such other party would otherwise be entitled to receive from such assignees or other person.

235. That in all suits in equity, other than a suit brought by the assignees for any debt or demand for which the bankrupt might have sustained a suit in equity had he not been adjudged bankrupt, and whether at the suit of or against the assignees, no proof shall be required, at the hearing, of the petitioning creditor's debt, or of the trading or act of bankruptcy respectively, as against any of the parties in such suit, except such parties as shall within ten days after rejoinder give notice in writing to the assignees of their intention to dispute some and which of such matters; and where such notice shall have been given, if the assignees shall prove the matter so disputed, the costs occasioned by such notice shall, if the court see fit, be paid by the parties so giving such notice, and the service of such notice may be proved by affidavit upon the hearing of the cause.

236. That any fiat, petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, adjudication of bankruptcy, petition for arrangement between a debtor and his creditors, assignment, appointment of assignees, certificate, deposition, or other proceeding or order in bankruptcy, or under any such petition for arrangement, appearing to be sealed with the seal of the court, or any writing purporting to be a copy of any such document, and purporting to be so sealed, shall at all times, and on behalf of all persons, and whether for the purposes of this act or otherwise, be admitted in all courts whatever as evidence of such documents respectively, and of such proceedings and orders having respectively taken place or been made, and be deemed respectively records of the court, without any further proof thereof, and no such document or copy shall be receivable in evidence unless the same appear to be so sealed, except where otherwise in this act specially provided: provided always, that all fiats and proceedings under the same which may have been entered of record before the passing of the act passed in the Parliament holden in the 2 & 3 Will. 4, [c. 114], intituled "An Act to amend the Laws relating to Bankrupts," or purporting to have been sealed before the commencement of this act with the seal of the Court of Bankruptcy theretofore in use, or a writing purporting to be a copy of any such document, and purporting to have been so sealed, shall and may, upon the production thereof, and in the case of any fiat or proceedings entered of record before the passing of the last-mentioned act, with the certificate thereon, purporting to be signed by the person duly authorised to enter proceedings in bankruptcy, or by his deputy, be received as evidence of the same, and of the same having been duly entered of record, and of such proceedings having respectively taken place, anything hereinbefore contained notwithstanding.

237. That all courts, judges, justices, and persons judicially acting, and other officers, shall take judicial notice of the signature of any commissioner or registrar of the court, and of the seal of the court, subscribed or attached to any judicial or official proceeding or document to be made or signed under the provisions of this act.

238. That a copy of a declaration of insolvency under this act, purporting to be certified by the Lord Chancellor's Secretary of Bankrupts or any of his clerks as a true copy, shall be received as evidence of such declaration having been filed.

239. That a copy of any petition filed in the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors in England, or in any court for relief of insolvent debtors at Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, or at the settlement of Prince of Wales Island, Singapore, and Malacca, and of any vesting order, schedule, order of adjudication, and other orders and proceedings, purporting to be signed by the officer in whose custody the same shall be, or his deputy, certifying the same to be a true copy of such petition, vesting order, schedule, order of adjudication, or other order or proceedings, and appearing to be sealed with the seal of such court, shall at all times be admitted under this act as sufficient evidence of the same, and of such proceedings respectively having taken place, without any other proof whatever given of the same.

240. That a copy of the London Gazette and of any newspaper containing any such advertisement as is by this act directed or authorised to be made therein respectively shall be evidence of any matter therein contained, and of which notice is by this act directed or authorised to be given by such advertisement; and all proceedings or notices required by this act to be inserted in the London Gazette shall be marked with the seal of the court from which such proceedings or notices shall be issued and certified by one of the registrars of the said court.

241. That the provisions of an act passed in the Parliament holden in the 6 & 7 Vict. [c. 85], intituled "An Act for improving the Law of Evidence," shall be applicable to any matter or proceeding in prosecution under the provisions of this act, and to any matter, question, or inquiry arising in any court of law or equity out of, or consequent upon, any such matter or proceeding.

242. That in the event of the death of any witness deposing to the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or act of bankruptcy, under any bankruptcy heretofore or hereafter, or under any petition for arrangement, the deposition of any such deceased witness, purporting to be sealed with the seal of the court, or a copy thereof purporting to be so sealed, shall in all cases be received as evidence of the matters therein respectively contained.

243. That all affidavits to be made or used in matters of bankruptcy, or in any matter or proceeding whatever under this act, shall and may be sworn before the court, or any commissioner, registrar, or master thereof, or before a master in ordinary or extraordinary of the High Court of Chancery, or before any clerk of affidavits, assistant clerk, or second assistant clerk of affidavits of the High Court of Chancery, or in Scotland or Ireland before such master extraordinary aforesaid, or before a magistrate of the county, city, town, or place where any such affidavit shall be sworn, or elsewhere before a magistrate and attested by a notary, or before a British minister, consul, or vice-consul.

244. That any affidavit of any prisoner in any of her Majesty's prisons or gaols in England, to be used in any matter under this act, may be sworn before the visiting or other justice, or if within twelve hours none such shall attend, then before the principal keeper or gaoler of such prisons or gaols, and every such keeper or gaoler is hereby authorised and required to administer the oath upon any such affidavit.

245. That the Lord Chancellor or the Vice-Chancellor, or the Court of Bankruptcy or any commissioner thereof, may, in all matters within their respective jurisdictions, take the whole or any part of the evidence either vivâ voce on oath, or by interrogatories in writing, or upon affidavit.

246. That all persons who are now, or shall hereafter be, declared bankrupts under any fiat or petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, and the wives of such persons respectively, shall and may be examined before the court, after making and signing the declaration contained in the schedule to this act annexed, without being sworn on oath.

And with respect to solicitors, be it enacted,

247. That every solicitor of the High Court of Chancery heretofore or hereafter duly admitted as a solicitor of the Court of Bankruptcy in manner directed by the statute passed in the Parliament holden in the 6 & 7 Vict. [c. 73], intituled "An Act for consolidating and amending several of the Laws relating to Attornies and Solicitors practising in England and Wales," and subject to the provisions in the same act, may appear and plead in any proceedings in the court, without being required to employ counsel; and in case any person, not being such solicitor, shall practise in the court as a solicitor, he shall be deemed guilty of a contempt of court, and be liable to all the penalties incident thereto.

And with respect to costs, be it enacted,

248. That the provisions in an act passed in the session of Parliament holden in the 1 & 2 Vict. [c. 110], and intituled "An Act for abolishing Arrest on Mesne Process in Civil Actions except in certain cases, for extending the Remedies of Creditors against the Property of Debtors, and for amending the Laws for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors in England," so far as the same relate to orders of the Lord Chancellor, or of the Court of Review therein referred to, in matters of bankruptcy, and the powers given by the same act to the Lord Chancellor and the said Court of Review in matters of bankruptcy, shall extend to, and be applicable to, orders of the Lord Chancellor and of the Vice-Chancellor in matters of bankruptcy under this act.

249. That the court may in all matters before it award such costs as to such court shall seem fit and just; and in all cases in which costs shall be so awarded against any person it shall and may be lawful for such court to cause such costs to be recovered from such person in the same manner as costs awarded by a rule of any of the superior courts at Westminster may be recovered, and that the like remedies may be had upon an order of such court for costs as upon a rule of any of the said superior courts for costs.

250. That every person summoned to attend before the court as a person known or suspected to have any of the estate of the bankrupt in his possession, or who is supposed to be indebted to the bankrupt, shall have such costs and charges as the court in its discretion shall think fit; and every witness summoned to attend before the court shall have his necessary expenses tendered to him in like manner as is now by law required upon service of a subpœna to a witness in an action at law.

And with respect to offences against the law relating to bankruptcy and other matters in this act, be it enacted,

251. That if any person adjudged bankrupt shall not upon the day limited for his surrender, and before three of the clock of such day, or at the hour and upon the day allowed him for finishing his examination, after notice thereof in writing to be served upon him personally or left at the usual or last known place of abode or business of such person, or personal notice in case such person be then in prison, and notice given in the London Gazette of the issuing of the fiat or filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against him, as the case may be, and of the sittings of the court, (having no lawful impediment proved to the satisfaction of the court at such time, and allowed by the court by a memorandum thereof then made on the proceeding), surrender himself to such court, and sign or subscribe such surrender, and submit to be examined before such court from time to time; or if any such bankrupt, upon such examination, shall not discover all his real and personal estate, and how, and to whom, upon what consideration, and when he disposed of, assigned, or transferred any of such estate, (and all books, papers, and writings relating thereunto, except such part as shall have been really and bonâ fide before sold or disposed of in the way of his trade, or laid out in the ordinary expense of his family); or if any such bankrupt, upon such examination, shall not deliver up to such court all such part of such estate, and all books, papers, and writings relating thereunto, as shall be in his possession, custody, or power, (except the necessary wearing apparel of himself, his wife and children); or if any such bankrupt shall remove, conceal, or embezzle any part of such estate to the value of 10*l.* or upwards, or any books of account, papers, or writings relating thereto, with intent to defraud his creditors; every such bankrupt shall be deemed guilty of felony, and be liable to transportation for life, or for such term not less than seven years as the court before which he shall be convicted shall adjudge, or shall be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding seven years.

252. That if any bankrupt shall, after an act of bankruptcy committed, or in contemplation of bankruptcy, or with intent to defeat the object of the law relating to bankrupts, destroy, alter, mutilate, or falsify any of his books, papers, writings, or securities, or make or be privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entry in any book of account or other document, with intent to defraud his creditors, every such bankrupt shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and on conviction be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding three years, with or without hard labour.

253. That if any bankrupt shall, within three months next preceding the date of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, under the false colour and pretence of carrying on business and dealing in the ordinary course of trade, obtain on credit from any other person any goods or chattels with intent to defraud the owner thereof, or if any bankrupt shall within such time and with such intent remove, conceal, or dispose of any goods or chattels so obtained, knowing them to have been so obtained, every such bankrupt shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and on conviction be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

254. That any bankrupt or bankrupt's wife who shall, upon any examination upon affirmation, or after making and signing the declaration authorised or directed by this or any other act relating to bankrupts, and any person who shall upon any examination upon oath or affirmation, or in any affidavit or deposition or solemn affirmation so authorised or directed, or in any affidavit or deposition or solemn affirmation wilfully and corruptly give false evidence, or wilfully and corruptly swear or affirm anything which shall be false, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to the penalties of wilful and corrupt perjury.

255. That if any bankrupt shall be suspected of or charged with the commission of any of the offences hereinbefore specified, the court may direct the assignees to institute and carry on a prosecution of such bankrupt for such offence, and to order that the costs and expenses to be incurred in such prosecution shall be paid out of his estate and effects, or if there be no such estate and effects, then out of the monies standing in the Bank of England to the credit of the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account," and such assignees shall thereupon institute and carry on such prosecution accordingly; and in case the said assignees shall refuse or neglect to institute and carry on such prosecution, no reasonable impediment being made known to and allowed by the court, the court may order the same to be instituted and carried on either by the official assignee alone, or by the creditors making such request, as the court may think fit.

256. That if at the sitting appointed for the last examination of any bankrupt, or at any adjournment thereof, it shall appear to the court that the bankrupt has committed any of the offences hereinafter enumerated, the court shall refuse to grant the bankrupt any further protection from arrest; and if at any sitting or adjourned sitting for the allowance of the certificate of any bankrupt it shall appear that he has committed any of such offences, the court shall refuse to grant such certificate, or shall suspend the same for such time as it shall think fit, and shall in like manner refuse to grant the bankrupt any further protection.

Offences referred to:—

First.—If the bankrupt shall at any time after the issuing of the fiat or filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, or within two months next preceding the issuing of such fiat or the filing of such petition, with intent to conceal the state of his affairs, or to defeat the objects of the law of bankruptcy, have destroyed any book, paper, deed, writing, or other document relating to his trade, dealings, or estate.

Second.—If the bankrupt shall, with the like intent, have kept or caused to be kept false books, or have made false entries in, or withheld entries from, or wilfully altered or falsified, any book, paper, deed, writing, or other document relating to his trade, dealings, or estate.

Third.—If the bankrupt shall have contracted any of his debts by any manner of fraud or by means of false pretences, or shall by any manner of fraud or by means of false pretences have obtained the forbearance of any of his debts by any of his creditors.

Fourth.—If the bankrupt shall, at any time within two months next preceding the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, fraudulently, in contemplation of bankruptcy, and not under pressure from any of his creditors, with intent to diminish the sum to be divided among his creditors, or to give an undue preference to any of his creditors, have paid or satisfied any such creditor, wholly or in part, or have made away with, mortgaged, or charged any part of his property, of what kind soever.

Fifth.—If the bankrupt shall at any time after the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, and with intent to diminish the sum to be divided among his creditors, or to give an undue preference to any of his creditors, have concealed from the court or his assignees any debt due to or from him, or have concealed or made away with any part of his property, of what kind soever.

Sixth.—If the bankrupt shall under his bankruptcy, or at any meeting of his creditors within three months next preceding the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, have attempted to account for any of his property by fictitious losses or expenses.

Seventh.—If the bankrupt shall, within six months next preceding the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, have put any of his creditors to any unnecessary expense by any vexatious and frivolous defence or delay to any suit for the recovery of any debt or demand provable under his bankruptcy, or shall be indebted in costs incurred in any action or suit so vexatiously brought or defended.

Eighth.—If the bankrupt shall, at any time after the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, have wilfully prevented or withheld the production of any book, paper, deed, writing, or other document relating to his trade, dealings, or estate.

Ninth.—If the bankrupt shall during his trading have wilfully, and with intent to conceal the true state of his affairs, have omitted to keep proper books of account; or shall wilfully, and with intent to conceal the true state of his affairs, have kept his books imperfectly, carelessly, and negligently.

257. That the assignees for the time being of the estate and effects of any bankrupt, when the accounts relating to his estate shall have become records of the court, shall be deemed judgment creditors of such bankrupt for the total amount of the debts which shall by such accounts appear to be due from him to his creditors; and every creditor of any bankrupt, immediately after the proof of his debt shall have been admitted, shall be deemed a judgment creditor of such bankrupt to the extent of such proof; and the court, when it shall have refused to grant the bankrupt any further protection, or shall have refused or suspended his certificate, shall, on the application of such assignees or of any such creditor, grant a certificate under the seal of the court, in the form contained in Schedule (B a.) to this act annexed, and every such certificate shall have the effect of a judgment entered up in one of her Majesty's superior courts of common law at Westminster until the allowance of the certificate of conformity of such bankrupt; and the assignees or the creditor to whom, according to such certificate, the bankrupt shall be indebted as therein mentioned, shall be thereupon entitled to issue and enforce a writ of execution against the body of such bankrupt; and the production of any such certificate to the proper officer of any such superior court shall be sufficient authority to him to issue and seal such writ, and it shall be lawful for such superior courts to make such orders and rules in that behalf as to them shall seem fit: provided always, that every such last-mentioned certificate shall be deemed to have been cancelled and discharged by the allowance of the certificate of conformity of such bankrupt from the time of such allowance: provided also, that no execution by virtue of any certificate which shall be granted to any creditor or assignees as aforesaid shall be issued, nor shall any such certificate or execution in any manner affect any estate or effects which shall come to or be acquired by the bankrupt, after the allowance of his certificate of conformity.

258. That the assignees for the time being may issue and enforce execution upon any such certificate as last aforesaid, as fully, to all intents and purposes, as the assignees to whom such certificate shall have been originally granted.

259. That if any bankrupt shall be taken in execution after the refusal of protection, or after the refusal or suspension of his certificate, he shall not be discharged from such execution until he shall have been in prison for the full period of one year, except by order of the court: provided always, that this enactment shall not take effect until after the expiration of six months from the commencement of this act, and then only against such persons as shall have been adjudged bankrupt under this act, and for offences committed after the commencement of this act.

260. That if any bankrupt, or the wife of any bankrupt, shall refuse to make and sign the declaration contained in Schedule (W.) to this act annexed, or if any other person shall refuse to be sworn, or shall refuse to answer any lawful question put by the court, or shall not fully answer any such question to the satisfaction of the court, or shall refuse to sign and subscribe his examination when reduced into writing, (not having any lawful objection allowed by the court), or shall not produce any books, papers, deeds, and writings, or other documents in his custody or power, relating to any of the matters under inquiry, which such bankrupt, wife of the bankrupt, or person is required by the court to produce, and to the production of which he shall not state any objection allowed by the court, it shall be lawful for the court, by warrant, to commit such bankrupt, wife of such bankrupt, or other person, in London to the Queen's Prison, or in the country to such prison as such court shall think fit, (as the case may be in London or in any district in the country), there to remain without bail until he shall submit himself to such court to be sworn, and full answers make to the satisfaction of such court to all such lawful questions as shall be put by the court, and sign and subscribe such examination, and produce such books, papers, deeds, writings, and other documents in his custody or power, to the production of which no such objection as aforesaid has been allowed.

261. That if any person be committed by the court for refusing to answer, or for not fully answering, any question put to him by the court, such court shall in its warrant of commitment specify every such question: provided that if any person so committed shall bring any habeas corpus in order to be discharged from such commitment, and there shall appear on the return of such habeas corpus any such insufficiency in the form of the warrant whereby such person was committed, by reason whereof he might be discharged, it shall be lawful for the court or judge before whom such person shall be brought by habeas corpus, and such court or judge is hereby required, to commit such person to the same prison, there to remain until he shall conform, unless it shall be shewn to such court or judge by the person committed that he has fully answered all lawful questions put to him by the court; or if such person was committed for refusing to be sworn, or for not signing his examination, unless it shall appear to such court or judge that he had a sufficient reason for the same: provided also, that such court or judge shall, if required thereto by the person committed, in case the whole of the examination of the person so committed shall not have been stated in the warrant of commitment, inspect and consider the whole of the examination of such person whereof any such question was a part; and if it shall appear from the whole examination that the answer or answers of the person committed is or are satisfactory, such court or judge shall and may order the person so committed to be discharged.

262. That if it shall at any time be made to appear to the court that any assignee under any fiat issued on or at any time prior to the 11th day of November, 1842, has, either in his own hands or in the hands of any attorney or at any bankers, or otherwise subject to his order or disposition, or knows that there is or are in the hands or subject to the order and disposition of himself or any co-assignee, any unclaimed dividends or any undivided surplus, and that such assignee has not caused a certificate thereof to be filed as in this act above required, containing a full and true account of the names of the creditors to whom such unclaimed dividends are due, and of the amount of such dividends, and, as to any undivided surplus, caused a certificate stating the full and true amount of such surplus to be filed, and has not, as in this act above required, paid over to the account intituled "The Unclaimed Dividend Account" the amount of such unclaimed dividends, or so much thereof as shall not have been paid to the creditors or other persons entitled thereto, and also the amount of such undivided surplus, every such assignee shall be charged, in account with the estate of the bankrupt, with interest upon the amount of such unclaimed dividends or undivided surplus at the rate of 5*l.* per centum per annum, to be computed from the time at which such certificate is required to be filed, for such time as he shall thenceforth, either solely or together with any co-assignee or other person, retain such dividends or undivided surplus, as the case may be, and also with such further sum as the court shall direct, not exceeding in the whole at the rate of 20*l.* per centum per annum, to be computed from the time aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the court to order that such sum or sums be forthwith paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy, to the account intituled "The Unclaimed Dividend Account," and also to make such order as to costs as the justice of the case shall seem to require.

263. That the neglect of any official assignee o file a certificate, as required by this act, of all unclaimed dividends and undivided surplus belonging to any bankrupt's estate under hi care and management, shall be subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained with respect to the unclaimed dividends and undivided surplus therein mentioned, and as if such officia assignee had such dividends and undivided surplus in his own hands.

264. That such last-mentioned unclaimed dividends and undivided surplus, and any penalty payable by any official assignee in respect thereof, shall be paid into the Bank of England, or carried to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy, to the said account intituled "The Unclaimed Dividend Account."

265. That if any assignee shall retain in his hands or employ for his own benefit, or knowingly permit any co-assignee so to retain or employ, any sum to the amount of more than 100*l.*, part of the estate of any bankrupt, or shall neglect to invest any money in the purchase of Exchequer bills when directed by the court, every such assignee shall be liable to be charged in his account with such sum as shall be equal to interest at the rate of 20*l.* per centum per annum on all such money for the time during which he shall have so retained or employed the same, or permitted the same to be so retained or employed, or during which he shall so have neglected to invest the same in the purchase of Exchequer bills; and the court is hereby required to charge every such assignee in his account accordingly.

266. That if any person shall disobey any rule or order of the court duly made by such court for enforcing any of the purposes and provisions of this act, or of any other act hereafter to be in force relating to the subject-matters of this act, or made or entered into by consent of such person for carrying into effect any of such purposes or provisions, the court may, by warrant in the form contained in Schedule (B b.) to this act annexed, commit the person so offending to the Queen's Prison, or to the common gaol of any county, city, or place where he shall be found, or where he shall usually reside, there to remain without bail or mainprize until such court, or the Vice-Chancellor or the Lord Chancellor, shall make order to the contrary.

267. That if the debt stated by the petitioning creditor in his affidavit or in his petition for adjudication, and verified by affidavit, to be due to him from any trader, shall not be really due, or if after a fiat issued, or petition for adjudication of bankruptcy filed, it shall not have been proved that the person against whom such fiat has been issued or petition filed had committed an act of bankruptcy, and was a trader at the time of the issuing of the fiat or filing of such petition, and it shall also appear that such fiat was issued, or that such petition was filed, fraudulently or maliciously, the court shall and may, upon petition of the person against whom any such fiat or petition was so issued or filed, examine into the same, and order satisfaction to be made to him for the damages by him sustained.

268. That if any petitioning creditor shall after the bankruptcy receive any money, satisfaction, or security for his debt, or any part thereof, whereby such petitioning creditor may receive more in the pound in respect of his debts than the other creditors, such petitioning creditor shall forfeit his whole debt, and shall also repay or deliver up such money, satisfaction, or security, or the full value thereof, to the assignee or assignees of such bankrupt, for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt.

269. That any person who shall wilfully conceal any real or personal estate of the bankrupt, and who shall not, within forty-two days after the issuing of the fiat or the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, discover such estate to the court or to the assignees, shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*, and double the value of the estate so concealed; and any person who shall after such time voluntarily discover to the court or to the assignees any part of such bankrupt's estate not before come to the knowledge of the assignees shall be allowed 5*l.* per centum thereupon, and such further reward as the assignees, with the consent of the court, shall think fit, to be paid out of the estate recovered on such discovery.

270. That if any creditor of a bankrupt shall obtain any sum of money, or any goods, chattels, or security for money, from any person, as an inducement for forbearing to oppose or for consenting to the allowance of the certificate of such bankrupt, or to forbear to petition for the recall of the same, every such creditor so offending shall forfeit and lose for every such offence the treble value or amount of such money, goods, chattels, or security so obtained (as the case may be).

271. That if any commissioner, registrar, accountant, master, clerk, messenger, assignee, or any other officer or person whatsoever, shall, for anything done or pretended to be done under this act or any other act relating to bankrupts, or under colour of doing anything under this act or any such other act, fraudulently and wilfully demand or take, or appoint or allow any person whatsoever to take, for him or on his account, or for or on account of any person by him named, or in trust for him or for any other person by him named, any fee, emolument, gratuity, sum of money, or anything of value whatsoever, other than is allowed by this act or any such other act as aforesaid, such person, when duly convicted thereof, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 500*l.*, and be rendered incapable, and is hereby rendered incapable, of holding any office or place under her Majesty.

272. That any person who shall insert or cause to be inserted in the London Gazette, or in any newspaper, any advertisement under this act, without authority, or knowing the same to be false in any material particular, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

273. That if any person shall forge the signature of any commissioner, or registrar, or of the accountant, master, or other officer of the court, or shall forge or counterfeit the seal of the court, or knowingly concur in using any such forged or counterfeit signature or seal, for the purpose of authenticating any such proceeding or document, or shall tender in evidence any such proceeding or document with a false or counterfeit signature of any such commissioner, registrar, accountant, master, or other officer, or a false or counterfeit seal of the court, subscribed or attached thereto, knowing the same signature or seal to be false or counterfeit, every such person shall be guilty of felony, and shall be liable to the same punishment as any offender under an act passed in the Parliament holden in the 8 & 9 Vict., intituled "An Act to facilitate the Admission in Evidence of certain official and other Documents."

274. That if any keeper of any prison or any gaoler to whose custody any bankrupt or other person shall be duly committed shall refuse to receive such bankrupt or other person, or shall suffer him to escape, every such keeper or gaoler shall forfeit 500*l.*

275. That all sums of money forfeited under this act, or by virtue of any conviction for perjury committed in any oath, affirmation, or declaration thereby directed or authorised, may be sued for by the assignees of the estate and effects of any bankrupt connected therewith or interested therein, in any of her Majesty's superior courts of record, and the money so recovered (the charges of suit being deducted) shall be paid over to the Bank of England, to the credit of the accountant in bankruptcy, to the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account."

And with respect to the definition and explanation of terms, be it enacted,

276. That the terms and words hereinafter enumerated or explained, wheresoever occurring in this act, shall be understood as hereinafter defined or explained, unless it be otherwise specially provided, or there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such definition or explanation; that is to say,

The term "Lord Chancellor" shall mean also and include the Lord Keeper and Lords Commissioners for the custody of the Great Seal of the United Kingdom for the time being.

The term "Vice-Chancellor" shall mean such one of the Vice-Chancellors of the High Court of Chancery as shall for the time being have duly vested in him jurisdiction in bankruptcy.

The term "the court" and the term "the Court of Bankruptcy" shall mean her Majesty's Court of Bankruptcy, and shall mean also and include any commissioner or commissioners of her Majesty's Court of Bankruptcy constituting and acting as a court under this act.

The term "the senior commissioner" shall mean the senior commissioner of the court acting in London, which seniority shall be determined by the date of the letters-patent or commission under which the commissioners of the court acting in London were or shall be appointed, and in the event of such letters-patent or commission bearing the same date, then by the place and precedence of such commissioners at the bar.

The terms "fiat" and "fiat in bankruptcy" shall mean also and include any commission of bankrupt.

The term "annulling" shall mean also and include "superseding."

The term "month" shall mean a calendar month.

The term "assignees" shall mean the assignees of the estate and effects of the bankrupt.

The term "oath" shall be deemed to include the declaration or affirmation of any person authorised by law to declare or affirm.

The term "Bank of England" shall include all branches thereof.

Words importing the singular number or the masculine gender only shall be understood to include several matters as well as one matter, and several persons as well as one person, and bodies corporate as well as individuals, and females as well as males; and words importing the plural number shall be understood to apply to one matter as well as more than one, and to one person as well as more than one.

And in all cases in which any particular number of days is prescribed by this act, or shall be mentioned in any rule or order of court which shall at any time be made under this act, for the doing of any act, or for any other purpose, the same shall be reckoned, in the absence of any expression to the contrary, exclusive of the first and inclusive of the last day, unless the last day shall happen to fall on a Sunday, Christmas-day, Good Friday, Monday or Tuesday in Easter week, or a day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, in which case the time shall be reckoned exclusive of that day also.

277. That this act shall extend to aliens and denizens, both to make them subject thereto and to entitle them to all the benefits given thereby.

278. That this act may be amended or repealed by any act to be passed in the present session of Parliament.

LONDON, OCTOBER 20, 1849.

The "Act for amending the Procedure in Courts of General and Quarter Sessions" (the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45) will come into operation on the 1st of next month. It is framed on the model of another of Mr. Baines's acts, relating to orders of removal, (the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 31), and seeks to effect two desirable objects—uniformity in appeals to quarter sessions, and the prevention of frivolous and merely formal objections before that tribunal. In furtherance of the first object it is enacted, that in every case of appeal (except against a summary conviction, order of removal, or order under any statute relating to pauper lunatics, or in bastardy, or any proceeding under any statute relating to the excise, customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office) to general or quarter sessions, fourteen clear days' notice of appeal, at least, shall be given; that it shall be in writing, signed by the person giving it, or his attorney; that it shall specify the grounds of appeal, and that on the trial thereof the appellant shall not give evidence of any other ground. (Sects. 1 and 2).

The above exceptions will still render notices of appeal anything but uniform, as will be evident when we consider that those against summary convictions depend upon the numerous statutes creating the offences, or giving the mode of summary prosecution. Appeals from orders of removal are regulated by the stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 31, s. 9; and appeals against orders of maintenance, in the case of lunatic paupers, by sect. 62 of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, are subject to the regulations respecting appeals against orders of removal. (See Reg. v. The Justices of Glamorganshire, 13 Jur., part 1, p. 453). Notice of appeal, in the two last-mentioned cases, must be given within twenty-one days after service of notice of chargeability, and statement of grounds of removal; or if within the twenty-one days the appellants apply for a copy of the depositions, then within fourteen days after sending copies of the depositions. Notices of appeal against orders in bastardy are to be given within twenty-four hours after the adjudication, and need not be in writing, (7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 4). The only cases in which the right of appealing is recognised in terms by the customs laws is from the decisions of commissioners and justices in Ireland, which right is regulated by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 51, s. 39. Appeals in excise cases are provided for by the 4 Vict. c. 20, s. 26 et seq.; in proceedings under the stamp laws, by the 10 Anne, c. 19, s. 172, the 26 Geo. 3, c. 82, s. 5, and the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 97, ss. 24, 28; under the laws relating to taxes, by the 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 24, &c., and the 48 Geo. 3, c. 141; under those relating to the post-office, by the 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 36, s. 13.

The fourteen days' notice must be exclusive both of the day of giving it and of the first day of the sessions. (Reg. v. The Justices of Middlesex, 2 New Sess. Cas. 73). It appears that the appellant will not be allowed to go into grounds of appeal not specified in the notice, even though such grounds be apparent on the face of the order, &c. (See Rex v. The Inhabitants of Withernick, 6 Adol. & Ell. 273; Rex v. Bromyard, 8 B. & C. 240).

The 3rd section is taken almost word for word from the 4th section of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 31, and applies to appeals to general or quarter sessions in all cases in which grounds of appeal are required to be sent, preventing objections to the form of a ground of appeal, or to the reception of evidence in support thereof, unless the Court shall be of opinion that such ground is so defectively set forth as not to enable the respondent to inquire into it and prepare for trial; and in all cases of appeal where it is considered that an objection to any ground of appeal, or to the reception of evidence in support thereof, ought to prevail, such ground may be amended on terms. Any appellant may render himself liable to costs by including frivolous grounds of appeal, (sect. 4, similar to sect. 5, of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 31); by giving notice of appeal, though it is not afterwards prosecuted, (sect. 6); and by prosecuting or resisting it unsuccessfully, (sect. 5). In the last-named case the costs may be recovered in the manner provided by the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27.

The 7th section provides for the amendment of an order or judgment of justices on the trial of an appeal, or on the return to a certiorari, where the objection is merely formal. A distinction has hitherto prevailed in this respect between convictions and orders; the former might be amended before returned to the sessions, or return may be made to a writ of certiorari. (See Rex v. The Justices of Cheshire, 5 B. & Adol. 439). But this was not allowed with regard to orders. And if, as we presume, the word "judgment" in this section includes convictions, they may now be amended by the court of quarter sessions or a superior court, as well as before their return to such courts.

The 8th section provides for the substitution of "sufficient" for "insufficient" recognisances entered into for an appeal against an order or summary conviction; and the decision of quarter sessions as to such substitution, as well as sufficiency of statement of grounds of appeal, and the amendment of orders, of judgments, or of statements of grounds of appeal, is to be final. (Sect. 9).

By the 9 Geo. 4, c. 15, in cases where a variance appeared between written or printed evidence and the record, in civil actions or indictments for misdemeanours, the record might be amended. This provision was extended to all offences by the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 4; but neither of these statutes gave the power of amendment to courts of quarter sessions. This is remedied, and such courts have equal powers for this purpose with the superior courts, by the 10th section of the present act.

The 11th section enacts, that, after notice of appeal against any judgment, order, rate, or other matter, (except against an order in bastardy, or a proceeding under the excise, customs, stamps, taxes, or post-office laws), for which the remedy is by such appeal, the parties may obtain a judge's order for a special case, and for the opinion of a superior court; and provision is made in similar cases (excepting also appeals against summary convictions) for references to arbitration of such matters of appeal. (Sects. 13—15). Recognisances for the prosecution of an appeal are not to be forfeited by adopting the special case or arbitration, (sect. 16); and the proceedings subsequent to the authority given by the 3 Geo. 4, c. 46, for levying and recovering fines, issues, and amerciaments imposed &c. by any justice, shall be the same as in the case of forfeited recognisances, provided for by that act. (Sect. 17).

The 18th section enacts, that an order of general or quarter sessions may be removed into the Court of Queen's Bench, and enforced as a rule of that Court. This is a great improvement upon the former dilatory and expensive remedy by indictment. Such order may now, if merely for the payment of money, be enforced by execution; if for any other purpose, by attachment.

We may observe, in conclusion, that summary convictions appear not to be excluded from the operation of this statute, except by the 1st section, which relates to the time for giving notice of appeal, its form, &c., and by those which provide for references to arbitration. (Sects. 12—15).

AD VALOREM STAMP ON A LEASE GRANTED, IN PURSUANCE OF A CONTRACT, TO A PURCHASER OF THE BENEFIT OF THE CONTRACT.

An erroneous dictum of the Court of Queen's Bench, in the case of Boone v. Mitchell, (1 B. & Cr. 18), on a question of practical importance, has been recently overruled by the Court of Exchequer in the case of The Attorney-General v. Brown, (18 Law Journ., Exch., 336). In Boone v. Mitchell an action of assumpsit was brought to recover 170*l*., which the defendant agreed to pay to the plaintiff in consideration of his procuring the governors of a charity estate to grant a lease to the defendant. It appeared that the lease had been granted in pursuance of the agreement, and that the plaintiff was a party to it, but it did not contain any reference to the pecuniary consideration agreed to be paid to the plaintiff, and bore no ad valorem stamp in respect of it. Upon a motion for a nonsuit, one of the grounds of objection was, that the lease was void by reason of the omission to notice the consideration. In answer to this the Court said, that "the Stamp Act, requiring the consideration to be set out, and imposing an ad valorem duty on the consideration, applied only to the case of a consideration passing between the lessor and lessee. The Legislature never could have intended the lease to be void by reason of the lessor's omitting to state a consideration which he might not, and perhaps could not, be aware of." The decision was of course correct, because the stamp on a lease is regulated solely by the consideration and rent expressed on and reserved by it. The reasons given in the judgment shew that the Court had forgotten the provisions of the Stamp Act. The stamp on a lease is regulated, as we said, by what appears on the face of it, and when the stamp is not sufficient to cover the rent and consideration (if any) expressed, the lease is not void, but only inadmissible in evidence until it is duly stamped; and the ad valorem duty is not charged on the counterpart of a lease, nor does the want of a proper stamp on the lease render the counterpart inadmissible.

But the consideration agreed to be paid to the plaintiff in Boone v. Mitchell ought to have been stated in the lease, which would then have been chargeable with the ad valorem duty on that sum; for a lease granted in consideration, wholly or in part, of a fine or premium, is liable to the same ad valorem duty in respect thereof as a conveyance on the sale of land for a sum of money of the same amount; and under the title "CONVEYANCE," in the schedule to the Stamp Act, it is provided, that "where any person, having contracted for the purchase of any lands or other property, but not having obtained a conveyance thereof, shall contract to sell to any other person, and the same shall in consequence be conveyed immediately to the sub-purchaser, the principal or only deed or instrument of conveyance shall be charged with the said ad valorem duty in respect of the purchase or consideration money therein mentioned to be paid, or agreed to be paid, by the sub-purchaser." An act of the 50 Geo. 3, c. 31, s. 17, referring to and explaining the provisions of the stat. 48 Geo. 3, c. 149, sufficiently shews, that the provision above cited from the present Stamp Act applies to the case in question; and accordingly it was held, in The Attorney-General v. Brown, that the defendant (who had sold the benefit of an agreement for the lease in consideration of 850*l*., and who was a party to the lease, which did not state the consideration) was liable to the penalties (50*l*. and five times the excess of duty) imposed by the stat. 48 Geo. 3, c. 149, s. 22, on purchasers and sellers omitting to set forth the full purchase or consideration monies in the instrument of conveyance.

By sect. 23 of the same act, parties liable to penalties under the preceding section, and informing, are indemnified, and entitled to a reward. By sect. 24, purchasers are enabled to recover back any consideration-money not set forth; and by sect. 25, solicitors, &c., parties to any such offence, are subjected to a penalty of 500*l*.

CAP. CVII.

An Act for the Amendment of the Law of Bankruptcy in Ireland. [1st August, 1849.]

Sect. 1. Commencement of this act.
2. Laws at variance with this act repealed.
3. Petitioning creditor's bond may be dispensed with.
4. Person against whom a commission has issued, on proof of probable cause for believing that he is about to quit Ireland, or to remove or conceal his goods with intent to defraud creditors, may be arrested.
5. Penalty on gaoler suffering bankrupt, &c. to escape.
6. Any person so arrested may apply for his discharge forthwith. Commissioner may discharge the person, or not. Order of commissioner may be appealed from.
7. No person liable upon an act committed more than twelve months.
8. Act of bankruptcy committed within a year sufficient to support adjudication.
9. Requisite amount of petitioning creditor's debt.
10. Persons specially named liable to become bankrupts.
11. Power to commissioner to summon trader, if creditor make affidavit of his debt, and of his having required payment.
12. Manner of proceeding on summons of trader by a creditor.
13. Trader not attending summons, or refusing to admit the demand, and not making deposition of belief of a good defence thereto, and not paying or compounding within a certain time, or giving bond for payment, to be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy.
14. Trader signing an admission of demand in form prescribed, and not paying, securing, or compounding within a certain time, an act of bankruptcy.
15. Trader admitting part only of a demand, and not making deposition of a good defence to the residue, and not paying, securing, or compounding for sum admitted, and as to residue not paying or compounding, or entering into bond to pay any sum recovered, with costs, an act of bankruptcy.
16. What shall be deemed a refusal of admission of debt. Commissioners may enlarge the time for admission of demand.
17. Admission of debt signed elsewhere than in court, if attested by attorney of trader, may be filed, and have the same force as an admission signed by a trader on his appearance before commissioners under the summons.
18. Trader summoned on affidavit of debt to have such costs as the commissioners shall think fit; or commissioner may direct the costs to abide the event of any action for the debt.
19. Wherever a creditor plaintiff shall not recover the amount sworn to in his affidavit of debt filed against a trader, if such affidavit be made for such amount without probable cause, the trader defendant shall be entitled to costs.
20. Trader not paying, securing, or compounding for a judgment debt, upon which the plaintiff might sue out execution within fourteen days after notice requiring payment, an act of bankruptcy.
21. Trader disobeying order of any court of law or equity, or order in bankruptcy or lunacy, for payment of money, after service of order for payment on a peremptory day fixed, an act of bankruptcy.
22. Trader filing a declaration of insolvency in the office of the secretary of bankrupts an act of bankruptcy.
23. Filing petition for arrangement between a trader debtor and his creditors, with the concurrence of a certain number thereof, to be an act of bankruptcy, if petition dismissed.
24. Manner of making a debtor a bankrupt by affidavit of debt and notice to pay. Creditor to file an affidavit of debt, and serve notice requiring payment within twenty-one days.
25. If commission not proceeded on by petitioning creditor within three days, any other creditor may proceed on it.
26. If bankrupt shall not proceed to dispute the commission, and prosecute with effect, the Gazette to be conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy as against the bankrupt, and against persons whom the bankrupt might have sued had he not been adjudged bankrupt; saving present rights for which any proceedings are pending.

27. Provision for debtor to the bankrupt's estate paying the debt into court, when sued by the assignees within the time for bankrupt to dispute.

28. Appointment of official assignees. Their duty.

29. Commissioners may take security by recognisance or of guarantee society.

30. Official assignees to receive bankrupt's estate and effects. How to apply same.

31. Proviso restricting the authority of the official assignee.

32. Lord Chancellor may remove official assignees, and may fill up vacancy in the number.

33. Power to appoint official assignee to act with the existing assignees under commissions now pending, and to whom the latter shall deliver over effects.

34. Official assignee may act until creditors' assignee appointed. May sell the property if commissioner so order, and make allowance to bankrupt for his support. Property vested in official assignee to go to his successor.

35. To exempt official assignee from personal responsibility.

36. Debtor and creditor account to be furnished by official assignee to creditors' assignee before dividend.

37. Remuneration to official assignee.

38. Pay, half-pay, and pensions of bankrupts to be applicable for the benefit of creditors.

39. Audits and dividends to be had and made whenever the commissioner thinks fit, after the time appointed for the bankrupt's last examination.

40. Commissioner may order three months' wages or salary to clerks or servants.

SOLICITORS' AND GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 57, Chancery-lane, London.

This Society presents the following advantages to the Assured:—

First.—The security of a large subscribed Capital.

Second.—Exemption of the Assured from all liability.

Third.—Tables of Premiums calculated on the true law of mortality, expressly for this Office, and affording particular advantages to young lives.

Fourth.—Participating and Non-participating Scales of Premiums. In the former the Assured are entitled to EIGHTY PER CENT. or FOUR-FIFTHS of the profits divided amongst them periodically, either by way of addition to the sum assured, or in diminution of Premium, at the option of the Assured.

Fifth.—No deduction is made from the four-fifths of the profits belonging to the Assured for interest on Capital, or Guarantee Fund.

Sixth.—No Policy disputed, except in case of fraud.

Seventh.—This Society gives a much larger share of profits to the Assured, and at a lower rate of Premium, than the great majority of other Life Offices.

Eighth.—Parties wishing to assure their lives without participating in the profits can do so on a lower scale of Premiums than that of a large proportion of other Offices.

Assurances may be effected through any respectable Solicitor, or by writing to the Secretary, from whom prospectuses and all other requisite information may be obtained.

CHARLES JOHN GILL, Secretary.

LONDON, OCTOBER 27, 1849.

We understand that a doubt has been lately raised, before one of the Commissioners in Bankruptcy, whether any Commissioner has jurisdiction to adjudicate on a petition, where the trader has neither resided nor been in business for six months within his district; and the learned Commissioner is said so far to have encouraged the doubt, that he refused to give any opinion on the point, the facts in the case before him enabling him to decide without doing so, because the trader, although he had not been in business six months, had resided for six months. Now, the portions of the act (the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106) on which this question was said to turn, in the argument of the case referred to, are the 65th and 89th sections, and the Schedule (M.) annexed to the act. The 65th section declares generally what persons are to be deemed traders liable to become bankrupt, and that section says nothing about the period of either the residence or the trading of such persons. The 89th directs that proceedings to obtain adjudication of bankruptcy shall be by petition, such petition, if presented by a creditor, to be in the form specified in the Schedule (M.), and if presented by a trader, in the form specified in the Schedule (O.); and that, from and after the filing of the petition, the Court shall have power &c. On looking to the Schedules (M.) and (O.), it will be seen that they both run in this form:—"Sheweth, that ——, being a trader, and having resided [or "carried on business," as the case may be] for six calendar months next preceding the date of this petition within the district of this honourable court;" both of the forms particularly specifying six months of residence or trading. If the matter rested here, there might perhaps be considerable doubt, because the forms given in the schedules are not mere forms, but embody substantial statements; and yet it could never have been intended, that, if a trader had never resided nor carried on business for six months in any one district, he should not be liable to become bankrupt. But the 90th section, which seems to have been overlooked in the case to which we refer, appears to remove any solid ground for doubt. By that section it is enacted, "that every petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against or by any trader liable to become bankrupt shall be filed and prosecuted in the court within the district of which such trader shall have resided or carried on business for six months next immediately preceding the time of filing such petition, except where otherwise in this act specially provided: provided always, that the senior commissioner shall have power, whenever he may deem it expedient, to order any petition against or by any trader to be prosecuted in any district, with or without reference to the district in which the trader shall have resided or carried on business, or to consolidate the proceedings, or any part thereof, under two or more petitions for adjudication of bankruptcy, or to impound any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, and the proceedings thereunder, or any part thereof, upon such terms as the senior commissioner shall think fit, or to transfer any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, and the proceedings thereunder, and the prosecution or the further prosecution thereof, from the court in any one district to the court in any other district, and the court to which any such transfer shall be made may remove the official assignee, and appoint a new official assignee to any such bankruptcy; and any such order by the senior commissioner may be in such of the forms contained in the Schedules (P.), (Q.), or (R.) to this

Now, it seems to us, that this section makes it impossible to contend, that the six months mentioned in the Schedules (M.) and (O.) are intended to be a condition affecting the liability of a trader to be made a bankrupt, and shews that they only relate to the jurisdiction in which it shall be primarily proper to prosecute the petition, if a trader has resided or traded for six months. If the act meant that all the terms of the forms in the schedules should be strictly complied with, it would be impossible for the senior commissioner ever to exercise the power given to him by the 90th section, of directing a petition to be prosecuted in any other district than that in which the bankrupt had resided or carried on business. For, as the form prescribed, states that the bankrupt has resided or carried on business in the district of the court in which it is filed, it is obvious that the allegation would be untrue if the petition were filed in any other court, and consequently the senior commissioner could not, by any possibility, exercise the part of his jurisdiction referred to. He might, it is true, transfer a petition already filed in one court, under the power given to him in the latter part of the 90th section; but it is plain, that the act, by giving him power first to order any petition to be prosecuted in any district, and secondly to remove any petition from one court to another, meant to give him power to direct where proceedings should be originally commenced, as well as power to change their locality after their initiation. Then, if that is so, what is there in the act to shew that six months' trading are requisite for bankruptcy, or to shew that the Schedule (M.) and the 90th section meant anything more, with respect to the period of six months, than that, if a trader has resided six months or traded six months in a particular district, there, and not elsewhere, his bankruptcy shall be prosecuted, unless the senior commissioner shall otherwise order? We should have thought, that, independently of the 90th section of the act, this would be its construction, because no section in the body of the act limits, by naming any particular time, the generality of the 69th section; and, such a limitation being in itself very unreasonable, it would be contrary to the general order of construction to convert a form into a substantive provision repugnant to the general spirit of the body of an act. But, however the case might be if the 90th section did not exist, looking not only at the effect which we have pointed out, as flowing from such a construction of the schedule upon the 90th section, and looking also at the peculiar wording of the power given to the senior commissioner, from which is excluded all mention of any particular term of residence or trading as necessary for the foundation of a petition, we cannot but think that there is no ground for the doubt that has been suggested. We apprehend that the true construction of the statute is, that if a trader has resided or traded for six months in any particular district, primarily a petition against or by him should be prosecuted before the commissioner in whose district he has so resided or carried on business. If he has not either carried on business or resided in any one district for six months, then it may be a question whether the senior commissioner alone has power to direct where the proceedings are to take place, or whether the petition may be prosecuted before any commissioner. We should think that any court will have jurisdiction, because we apprehend, that, as regards the time mentioned in the 90th section and in the schedules, all that is intended is, that, if a trader has traded or resided six months in a district, his petition is to be prosecuted in that district; and nothing being said about what is to be done if he has neither traded nor resided for six months in any one district, then, in such a case, no particular jurisdiction being fixed, any commissioner would have jurisdiction.

Review.

The Equitable Jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery. Vol. 2. Comprising Equitable Estates and Interests, their Nature, Qualities, and Incidents. In which are incorporated, so far as relates to those Subjects, the Substance of "Maddock's Treatise on the Principles and Practice of the Court of Chancery." By GEORGE SPENCE, Esq., One of her Majesty's Counsel. Roy. 8vo. Pp. 1102. [Stevens & Norton.]

Five years have elapsed since we congratulated the Profession on the partial performance, by a gentleman of so much learning and experience as Mr. Spence, of the arduous task of tracing the history and expounding the principles and details of the equitable jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, and we are quite sure, from the evidence presented by the present volume, that those years have not been idly spent by its author. In the former volume (which, like the present one, may be considered as complete in itself) is contained a history of the rise, progress, and final establishment of the various heads of equitable jurisprudence—a work of some extent antiquarian, but also essentially institutional in its character—in which Mr. Spence has applied to the doctrines of equity (though in greater detail) the same method of exposition by which Blackstone so successfully elucidated the mysteries of real-property law.

The second volume, more bulky than its predecessor, is wholly devoted to the existing principles and rules of equity jurisdiction, discussed in detail under the following heads, which, though they express perfectly well the methodical and scientific view which Mr. Spence takes of his entire subject, give a very inadequate idea of the multifarious contents of the chapters so intitled. But for practical purposes the subheads in the table of contents, and the index, furnish a sufficient guide to the ample stores of information contained in the book:—

Chap. 1. General view of equitable estates and interests created by way of express declaration. (Express trusts; office of trustee; rights of cestui que trust; powers in the nature of trusts, &c.)

Chap. 2. The doctrine in regard to remoteness.

Chap. 3. Of executory trusts.

Chap. 4. Limitations of personal estate in respect of the claims of children and other descendants, and the incidental doctrines relating to such limitations.

Chap. 5. Of trusts for accumulation; the Thellusson Act, its construction and operation; of maintenance out of rents or interest directed to be accumulated, and incidentally of maintenance out of defined and contingent legacies; liabilities of trustees under trusts to accumulate.

While Mr. Spence has brought to the performance of his task the resources and stores of his own experience and learning, he has wisely made the best use of his energies, by reserving them for the elucidation of the least explained parts of his subject, economising his strength, and seeking assistance wherever it could be obtained from the best text-writers of the day, not, however, copying them servilely, but using them as pioneers and indicators, and always most fairly acknowledging his obligations in loco. In addition to these casual intimations, he has given in his preface the following general acknowledgment:—

"It is proper that I should here acknowledge the 'obligations which I am under to the authors whose 'works I have principally consulted in the composition 'of this volume. First, I must mention Mr. Lewin's 'work on Trustees*, which I consider to be a model for 'a treatise. Next, Mr. Hill's work on Trusts, in which 'most of the authorities on that subject are to be found, 'very judiciously arranged. On the subject of mort-'gages I have derived the greatest assistance from the 'ample stores contained in Mr. Jarman's treatise, in 'the fifth volume of his edition of Bythewood's Con-'veyancing, with the valuable additions of Mr. Sweet; 'and from Mr. Coote's well-known work on the same 'subject. I need scarcely say, that on all occasions 'where anything relating to the subject under con-'sideration was to be found in the works of Sir E. 'Sugden, I have resorted to them, and always with 'the greatest advantage. My obligations to Mr. Samuel 'Miller, and to Mr. Hargrave and other writers whose 'works I have consulted, are acknowledged in their 'proper place. It is only where the apparently un-'settled state of the law, or the difficulty of the sub-'ject, appeared to require it, that I have entered into 'any lengthened details, and yet the bulk of the work 'has been by this means increased far beyond my ex-'pectation. . . . . The delay in the publication of the 'volume has, in fact, been productive of advantage, 'for in the mean time some important points of law 'have been settled; and, above all, Sir Edward Sugden's 'important work on 'The Law of Property, as ad-'ministered by the House of Lords,' has been published, 'so that I have had an opportunity of referring to this 'valuable addition to our legal stores."

After all obligations are acknowledged and allowed for, there remains a vast amount of valuable information, both theoretical and practical, upon topics not to be found in any of the recent treatises, which must be carried to the sole credit of Mr. Spence's own original and laborious investigations; and from this results the peculiar character of the book, that it is at once trite and recherché, containing all the stock information on subjects within its scope which may be found in the current text-books, and superadded to these the results of an experienced lawyer's researches in neglected paths, and resumés of or criticisms (where criticism is called for) on the most recent decisions, doctrines, and innovations of the Court of Chancery. A more dense mass of living law, available alike for study, reference, and practice, has seldom been presented to the Profession.

We have only space for a single extract, the subject being a doctrine but recently settled, if, indeed, it can yet be considered as settled—the conditions to the validity of voluntary assignments and transfers of equitable interests and of choses en action:—

"On a review of these authorities, as regards equit-'able estates and interests, all of them seem to agree 'in the general proposition, that if the transaction be 'complete, whether as an assignment or as a declara-'tion of trust, the party is bound, and by consequence 'so are his representatives; but what particular acts 'are necessary to make the transaction complete can-'not be extracted with precision as applicable to any 'particular case; it can only be said, generally, that 'nothing must remain to be done to complete the pur-'pose which the party has in view, and that purpose 'must be the complete divesting of the interest which 'is intended to be transferred. If, as it has been said, 'what has been done is equivalent to a transfer of the 'legal interest, (Collinson v. Patrick, 2 Kee. 123; but 'see Beatson v. Beatson, 12 Sim. 281, supra), that will be 'sufficient as regards choses en action. This much may 'perhaps be stated to be clear—that if a person, with a 'view to confer the beneficial interest in a chose en 'action, in which he has the legal interest, on another, 'makes an assignment in writing, particularly if by 'deed, and delivers the assignment and the security 'to the donee, or to a trustee for him, shewing an in-'tention to put both the one and the other, and con-'sequently the debt, out of his control, and also gives 'notice to the debtor, so as to make the debtor a quasi 'trustee for the donee, then the transaction is complete 'and binding, and the donor becomes a trustee of the 'legal interest, (which must of course remain in him), 'for the donee. A clear and explicit verbal declaration, 'accompanied by the delivery of the securities, and 'notice, would, it is presumed, be equivalent to an 'assignment in writing. But, in cases not embracing 'all these ingredients, the authorities are not uniform; 'and particularly there is, as above mentioned, au-'thority (Fortescue v. Barnett) for saying, that such 'transaction may be complete if by deed, although no 'notice should have been given to the debtor, or person 'from whom the money is to be recovered.

"In the above-cited case of Ward v. Audland the 'several authorities before adverted to were reviewed 'by Lord Langdale. His Lordship endeavours to re-'concile the authorities, as I understand his judgment, 'by holding, that where a person executes any instru-'ment, even a deed, which purports to be an assign-'ment of property which is not assignable—for instance, 'the money due on a policy of insurance—without 'doing that which amounts to a quasi delivery, namely, 'giving notice to the debtor, or person to pay, no title 'will pass to the donee, for no title passes which is 'available at law and in equity. All that the Court 'could do would be to declare that the donor was 'trustee of the money for the donee, which would be 'contrary to his intent, which was to pass all his 'interest, not to make himself a trustee.

"If this is to be considered as the rule, it is at least 'intelligible, and capable of application. In principle, 'however, the same doctrine might be held to apply to

* "Mr. Lewin, with a liberality in which a person of esta-'blished reputation can afford to indulge, placed in my 'hands his own copy, with his MS. additions; but, as they 'were made with a view to a new edition, I forbore to look 'into them."

'the case where notice has been given to the person to 'pay, namely, to the debtor, or insurance company; 'for still the donor's name must be used to recover the 'money, and so far, therefore, he must be treated as a 'trustee.

"Where the donor assigns to the donee his interest 'in or the right to recover the money, as such a form 'of assignment involves the right to use the donor's 'name to recover the money, then Lord Langdale's 'objection will not apply; for when the beneficial interest only of the party is assigned, it is not contrary 'to the apparent intent that he should be a trustee; 'and it is possible to contend, on the authority of 'Blakely v. Brady, that, where the assignment is of 'the donor's interest only, and of Fortescue v. Barnett, 'where the assignment embraces the security and also 'the donor's interest in the debt and security, the 'transaction is complete and binding if it be by deed; 'but not if it be only by writing signed but not sealed, 'as in Edwards v. Jones—at least, according to Lord 'Plunkett's interpretation of the case. Whether this 'be a satisfactory state of the law or not, is, of course, 'not the question, if the authorities have so settled the 'law.

"So where the subject of a gift is vested in a trustee, 'where, for instance, it is a legacy or share of a resi- 'due, as in Peter v. Espinasse, or a reversionary interest 'in a sum of stock, as in Sloane v. Cadogan, Lord Lang- 'dale's objection will not apply; for it is not in any 'way contrary to the ostensible intention to contend, 'that such an assignment converts the trustee of the 'donor into a trustee for the donee, or to assimilate it 'to an express declaration that the trustee should be a 'trustee for the donee. To avoid the authority of those 'cases, it must be contended, as I understand the Vice- 'Chancellor of England actually does contend, that an 'assignment of an equitable interest, such as was the 'subject of the assignment in each of those cases, can 'only amount to a contract.

"From the dicta in the judgment of the Vice- 'Chancellor Wigram in Meek v. Kettlewell, after 'stated, it might seem that in cases of the latter de- 'scription there are yet two other requisites that may 'be deemed necessary in order to make an assignment 'of such an interest effectual, namely, notice of the 'assignment to the trustee, and his acceptance; and 'also, where the subject is of such a nature as to make 'it practicable, that some act should be done in affirm- 'ance of the donee's title, as payment of interest to 'him by the trustee: but to hold that these are re- 'quisites would, contrary to the ordinary principle, 'put it in the power of the trustee to determine whe- 'ther the act should be binding or not. However, the 'cases put by the learned judge are only, as I conceive, 'intended as instances of what would probably be con- 'sidered as effectual transfers.

"It will be remembered, that where the transaction 'is such that the donor, having some interest that is 'capable of legal transfer, clearly intends to part with 'the whole of his interest, so that the donee shall stand 'precisely in his situation, and the instrument which 'he signs or executes does not amount to a transfer, 'the transaction is not incomplete merely, it is abor- 'tive. The Court cannot act upon the donor in the 'character of a trustee, for that would be contrary to 'the intention: if it be anything, it is a contract; and 'when once the transaction is reduced to that, its com- 'pletion cannot be enforced either against himself or 'against his representatives, unless there be a con- 'sideration. On the whole, it appears that the only 'sure way short of a legal transfer, where that is prac- 'ticable, of effecting a voluntary transfer to a stranger 'in any of these cases, is by the party entitled signing 'a declaration, (a deed does not appear to be necessary), 'declaring a trust in favour of the intended donee."

TO THE LEGAL PROFESSION.—A GENTLEMAN, a SOLICITOR, admitted and in practice in all the Courts of Law and Equity in London, is under the necessity of passing the Winter in the South of France or in Italy, or elsewhere in the South of Europe, as occasion may require, for the benefit of his health. He is anxious and will be glad to devote his time and attention to business, if possible, and will therefore undertake any matters which may be committed to him to be transacted on the Continent, for a moderate remuneration. For testimonials as to character, and for the Name and Address, apply to Mr. Henry Nethersole, 3, New-inn, Strand, London.

In a few days will be published,

LONDON, NOVEMBER 3, 1849.

If those who have been for some time advocating the propriety of abolishing capital punishment, even in cases of murder, were to confine their suggestion to the abolition of it in all cases where the proof rests entirely on circumstantial evidence, they would probably find a much larger body of supporters than they have hitherto had. Our readers are all well aware, that numerous well authenticated instances exist, in which the circumstantial evidence has been so strong as to produce conviction and punishment, and yet, in fact, it has turned out that the conviction and punishment were unjust. A most striking instance has lately occurred, in which the circumstantial evidence pressed most strongly against certain accused parties, so much so, that it is highly probable they would, upon trial, have been found guilty. Fortunately the most convincing proof of their innocence was produced before they were put upon their trial. We allude to the case of M'Gowran, lately before the public in the police reports, in which a man was robbed, and thenceforth missing. His property was traced to the accused, who were unquestionably guilty of the robbery; but, as the robbed man could not be found, and the robbers were the last persons known to have been in his company, a suspicion of their being also his murderers arose; and a strong chain of that kind of evidence which is founded upon the supposition that men have done that which it was likely they should do, was gradually being formed, when the missing man, who had taken the very unusual course of neglecting to try to get his money back, and had, from a very unusual degree of indifference to news, not heard anything about his having been murdered, suddenly re-appeared, and acquitted the accused, at least of his murder. But it is not upon few or even many instances of the actual failure of circumstantial evidence that we would rest our argument against the propriety of relying upon it to convict capitally; for we well know, that such facts, however much they may delight those who call themselves practical men, are by no means conclusive for supporting any general rule; and we know also, that instances have occurred in which the testimony of eye-witnesses, not wilfully telling any untruth, has yet been contrary to the truth, owing to some failure of accuracy either in observing or in remembering. We have ourselves heard from the lips of one of the parties, a case in which a charge of smuggling in her husband's ship by the wife of the captain, was obliged to be dropped, because the officer who had taken the goods upon her was, when she was produced before the magistrate side by side with a twin-sister, utterly unable to swear which of the ladies was the one on whom he had seized the smuggled goods. So, there are instances of men having so completely forgotten acts of their own, as to deny them upon oath. We rest not, therefore, upon isolated instances of error, but upon the principles in which the error has its source. Now, all human testimony is confessedly liable to inaccuracy; but, according to its nature, and the mode in which inferences are drawn from it, that liability may be greater or less. If a man, appearing to possess the ordinary senses of man, and being of good credit, states what he has seen or heard, the sources of error are only to be found in the possibility of his having not seen or heard what he thinks he has seen or heard, or of his not recollecting with precision what he actually did see or hear. If, therefore, what he alleges himself to have seen or heard is the very fact in issue, there is no difficulty arising from the possibility that the inference drawn may be incorrect. For instance, suppose the question is, whether A. killed B., and then suppose that a credible witness says he saw A. thrust a knife into B.'s body, that he saw blood issue, and saw B. fall, and afterwards saw A. go away, and then went to look at B., and found that he was dead. There may, of course, be error in the witness's testimony. He may have been mistaken in the fact of the knife having actually entered the body—he may have been mistaken in the identity of A. It may be that the blow did not kill B., but that he fell from fright, and so died. But if the facts stated by the witness are truly stated, there is nothing worthy to be mentioned in the mental process to be gone through by the hearer, in drawing his conclusion from the facts: the facts constitute the very killing in question, unless the ordinary laws of nature are supposed to be altered. But if, instead of these or similar facts, which, being followed by death, preclude the possibility of assigning any other cause for the death than the particular acts, we have what is termed circumstantial evidence, we let in, in addition to the sources of error arising from the incapacity of the witness, all that fruitful course of error which depends on the possibility of many causes, other than the apparent cause, having produced the results shewn to have taken place. Suppose, for instance, a murder is to be established by circumstantial evidence. A. is found dead, and with wounds of various descriptions; it is shewn, perhaps, that he had had some desperate quarrel with B., who left the neighbourhood at the very time when A. was found dead. By the side of the dead man is found a knife, proved to have belonged to B., and perhaps it is proved that B. was seen with marks of blood upon him. Now, here is almost enough, if the cause of B.'s departure, and of his being marked with blood, is not satisfactorily explained, to convict him of the death of A.; and if, in addition, the appearance of the knife, which had belonged to him, is not accounted for, B. would have but a slight chance with most juries. Now, doubtless, grave suspicion would naturally be excited by such a train of circumstances—doubtless, a probable cause of the knife of B. being found by the body of A. would be, that B. had used and forgotten it in the agitation of the murder—doubtless, also, it would be a probable cause for the sudden departure of B., that he had committed the crime, and sought to elude pursuit; and then the blood upon him, if unexplained, would be almost conclusive. Yet for all these things there might be many other causes. B. might have left the neighbourhood on account of debt, or for convenience, or for a thousand reasons besides having killed A. He might have lost his knife, or he might, in a struggle with A., originating A.'s attack upon him, have had it taken from him. Many causes might, in fact, have produced the various facts proved, quite independently of any murder of A. by B. The source of error, in acting upon this species of evidence, is to be found in the disposition of men's minds, having once had a suspicion aroused, to attribute all the events that have happened to causes favourable to the suspicion, instead of attributing them to any one of the numerous other causes which they might have had. Hence it is, that, if a murder has been committed, no cause of sudden departure by the person last seen with the murdered man, can ever be entertained as probable, except a desire to elude the consequences of having committed a crime. Hence it is, that, although a man may have blood on his clothes, or that some instrument belonging to him may be in a particular locality, from a thousand different causes, yet if he has had a quarrel with another, and has been seen with that other very shortly before his violent death, no other cause for the facts proved is entertained as probable, except that which is consistent with the supposition of his having murdered his enemy.

It would be manifestly absurd to consider testimony, which can only be susceptible of error from the tendency to error of the witness, as equally liable to error with testimony which is not only susceptible of error from the tendency of the witness to error, but, in addition, susceptible of error from the circumstance that many things may have caused the facts proved. And it follows, that circumstantial evidence, being of the latter class, must be much more likely to lead to erroneous conclusions, than the evidence of actual witnesses. If, then, it is admitted, that, even with regard to testimony of actual witnesses, there may be error, leading to an improper destruction of human life, surely, when the chance of error is greatly increased, it is highly impolitic to act upon evidence so tainted, to the extent of inflicting a punishment which cannot be recalled, if it is found to have been improperly inflicted.

We are induced by the interest, both public and professional, which has lately attached to trial by jury de medietate linguæ, to offer a few observations upon the subject. This mode of trial "is a privilege," says Blackstone, (3 Comm. 360), "indulged to strangers in no other country in the world, but which is as ancient with us as the time of King Ethelred, in whose Statute de Monticolis Walliæ (then aliens to the Crown of England) it is ordained, that 'duodeni legales homines, quorum sex Walli et sex Angli erunt, Anglis et Wallis jus dicunto.'" And in the reign of Edward I, "a Jew had his trial per medietatem linguæ, i. e. of Jews; and they were sworn by the five books of Moses, holden in their arms, and by the name of the God of Israel, who is merciful." (Note (59) to Dyer, fol. 144 a). By the 27 Edw. 3, stat. 2, c. 8, and the 28 Edw. 3, c. 13, s. 2, it was enacted, that, in all manner of inquests and proofs which be taken amongst aliens and denizens, the one half of the inquest or proof shall be denizens, and the other half aliens, if so many aliens and foreigners be in the town where such inquest is to be taken. This is cited by Mr. Reeves in his History of English Law, (vol. 2, p. 641), as a proof of the liberal spirit towards foreigners which had been distinguishing itself throughout the whole of this reign, particularly in matters that concerned the interests of commerce. These statutes of Edward III were confirmed by the 8 Hen. 6, c. 29, which speaks of them as having been enacted "in favour and liberty of the merchant strangers repairing into the realm of England," and "to give to the said merchant aliens the greater courage and desire to come with their wares and merchandises into this realm." This privilege of aliens was taken away in cases of treason by the 1 & 2 Ph & M. c. 10; (see Sherley's case, Dy. 144 a); yet it seems the King may, if he think fit, make a special grant to an alien to be tried for treason by a jury whereof one-half shall be aliens. (2 Hawk. P. C. 579, 8th ed.) In civil cases, it was also abolished by the Jury Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, which repeals the statutes of Edward III and Henry VI on the subject, (s. 62); and it is now allowed only upon trials for felony or misdemeanour. (6 Geo. 4, c. 50, ss. 3, 47).

It has been decided during the past week, in the case of Maria Manning, that, by the operation of the stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 16, an alien woman, married to a natural-born subject, loses her privilege in this respect. The words of that section are, "any woman married, or who shall be married, to a natural-born subject or person naturalised, shall be deemed and taken to be herself naturalised, and have all the rights and privileges of a natural-born subject." And the Court considered its effect to be to change the status of the wife, and to make her, to all intents and purposes, a British subject.

The following decisions upon this privilege of aliens will still be applicable, notwithstanding the changes which have been introduced. If, upon an indictment against an alien, he plead "not guilty," and a common jury be returned, if he does not surmise his being an alien before any of the jury be sworn, he has lost that advantage; but if he allege that he is an alien, he may challenge the array for that cause, and thereupon a new precept or venire facias shall issue, or an award be made of a jury de medietate; but it is more proper for him to surmise it upon his plea pleaded, and thereupon to pray it. (2 Hale's P. C. 271). The statutes mentioning only aliens generally, the foreigner is not entitled to have a "mediety" of his own countrymen, but only of foreigners; (2 Hawk. P. C. 580, 8th ed.); and those who find the indictment may be Englishmen. (Id. 579). If an alien be indicted with an Englishman, the trial shall be by an English jury. (Barre's case, Moore, 557; Bac. Abr., "Juries," E.; and see Vin. Abr., "Trial," N. 6, 7).

The propriety of preserving this distinction with regard to aliens has lately been questioned, and it is urged with some force, that an English jury, so far from feeling prejudiced against a foreigner, at the present day, would rather lean in his favour. However that may be, a verdict by foreigners, founded upon evidence, in the English language, of an offence against our laws, would hardly, we should think, be so satisfactory as the verdict of an English jury.

ADMISSIBILITY IN EVIDENCE OF UNSTAMPED DOCUMENTS.

In cases at Nisi Prius counsel have long been embarrassed in determining as to the admissibility in evidence of documents, the effect of which, though indirectly, is to establish the receipt of money, where the document has not impressed upon it the stamp required by the Stamp Act; for such has been the nature of the decisions in the various cases in which this question has arisen, that it has been difficult to discover the general principle by which the decisions have been regulated. A late judgment of the House of Lords in the case of Matheson v. Ross, which will be found in 6 Bell's Scots Appeal Cases, will go far to remove, if it will not entirely remove, this difficulty for the future.

The cases which have occurred may be divided into two classes—those in which the document tendered in evidence has been an account containing a variety of items in figures, and those in which the document has been an acknowledgment of some sort in express words.

In Wright v. Shawcross, which is to be found as a note to 2 B. & Ald. 501, a paper stating the full amount of a debt, and then containing successive entries "by cash," at each of which the balance remaining unpaid was brought out, was rejected as evidence; and the Court in Banc sustained the rejection, because the paper contained "acknowledgments at successive times upon payment of money." But, in Wellard v. Moss, (1 Bing. 134), an account of sums advanced to, and of disbursements made for, the plaintiff by the defendant, which contained at the foot of it, "I acknowledge the above account being correct, and am fully satisfied therewith," was received as evidence; because, as was observed by Park, J., "to hold that a receipt stamp is necessary on such occasions would lead to the greatest inconvenience;" an observation which is either worth nothing at all, or amounts to this—that, if a statutory requirement lead to inconvenience, the Courts may dispense with it.

These are the only cases in which the evidence tendered was to be derived by inference from the accuracy of an account, without more; and the object in both was direct—to discharge the defendant in the one case, and to charge him in the other with the money sued for: yet they are in direct opposition to each other.

In Jacob v. Lindsay, (1 East, 460), a case which was relied on in Wellard v. Moss, the plaintiff tendered his own book of accounts, at the foot of each page of which the defendant had written and signed, "Received the contents above, by me," or "Received the contents," or simply "Received:" the account was tendered as a document by which the plaintiff's clerk might refresh his memory, when swearing to the fact that the defendant had verbally acknowledged to him the accuracy of each item in the accounts at the time at which he signed the pages. The clerk was allowed by the Court to look at the book for this purpose, because that was not using it as evidence to prove the receipt; and as the clerk would unquestionably have been entitled to look at the book if the defendant had not signed the pages, the circumstance of his having done so could not create any difference. In Clark v. Hougham, (3 D. & Ry. 322), which was an action by a tenant against his landlord to recover back overcharges of public rates, which had been paid by the landlord for the tenant, accounts rendered annually by the landlord, and having the word "paid" at the foot, were tendered as evidence to prove that the landlord had charged the tenant as if the rating had been upon a rental of 3*l.* 10*s.*, whereas the actual rating which the landlord had paid was upon a rental of 2*l.* 10*s.* only, and the tender was allowed. In Brooks v. Davis, (2 Car. & P. 186), which was an action for payment of a bill of exchange for 13*l.*, the defendant proved that he had sent twenty yards of cloth, of the value of 14*l.*, to the plaintiff's house, along with a paper, which stated the price of the cloth, and deducted from it the amount of the bill, leaving a balance of 1*l.* in his favour; that the cloth and the paper were taken into the plaintiff's house; and that the plaintiff retained the cloth, and wished to retain the paper likewise, until the witness said he must take it back. In corroboration of this the witness produced the paper, which ended thus:—"Balance due, 1*l.* Received, J. Davis." And the document was received by Best, C. J., because "it was not put in as a receipt."

In Dibdin v. Morris, (2 Car. & P. 44), an action for work and labour, a receipt upon a 1*s.* 6*d.* stamp, for 52*l.* 10*s.*, "being the amount of a benefit at the Haymarket Theatre, which sum, together with 100*l.* already received, is in satisfaction of all my claims for the last season," was admitted as evidence, notwithstanding an objection that the stamp should have been 10*s.*, or at least sufficient to cover 152*l.* 10*s.*; and the ground of its reception was, because it was not a receipt in full of all demands, but only for 52*l.* 10*s.*; and, though it mentioned the previous receipt of the other sum, it was not at all given as a receipt for that sum. In Rex v. Castlemorton, (3 B. & Ald. 588), where the question was as to a settlement gained by a pauper, which depended upon the value of premises which had been held by him, parol evidence of the contents of a lost unstamped agreement was tendered in proof of the value. Abbott, C. J., refused to receive the evidence, with this observation—"The parties seek to shew the value by proof of a contract previously entered into respecting it. The contract was not, therefore, collateral, but of the very essence of the case."

In Hawkins v. Warre, (3 B. & C. 690), which was a replevin for corn distrained for rent, the plaintiff pleaded that he did not hold modo et formâ, as alleged by the defendant. In answer to this, the defendant tendered accounts of former years with the plaintiff, shewing a debtor and creditor side, and having these words at the foot—"Received the above.—E. Warre." The plaintiff objected the want of a stamp, and the objection was allowed. Abbott, C. J., held that the evidence had been properly rejected at Nisi Prius, because, taking away the fact that rent was paid, the paper would only be evidence of a claim having been made, but it was produced to prove the fact of the sum having been paid.

In Jardine v. Payne, (1 B. & Adol. 663), which was an action upon an account stated, for recovery of the amount of an unstamped bill of exchange, the plaintiff produced in evidence a letter from the defendant, addressed to the party entitled to the bill, acknowledging his liability for its amount. The Court refused to allow the plaintiff to read the bill, in order to prove its identity with that mentioned in the letter, or to prove that he was the holder of it. In Jacob v. Lindsay, Clark v. Hougham, Brooks v. Davis, and Dibdin v. Morris, there is an admission of unstamped documents to prove matter collateral to the fact of payment of money, although, in all of these cases, without questioning the correctness of the decision, it is not so very apparent that the matter sought to be proved was entirely collateral; but in Rex v. Castlemorton, Hawkins v. Warre, and Jardine v. Payne, in which the matter was beyond all question collateral, the evidence was rejected.

These are all the civil cases in which this question has arisen; but there are likewise some criminal cases, between which the inconsistency and irreconcileability are even more striking.

In Rex v. Pooley, (East's P. C., in an addition to the Preface, p. 17), which was a prosecution by the post-office against one of its clerks for stealing a letter, evidence was offered of this by his possession of a bill without a stamp which had been inclosed in the letter. The counsel for the prisoner objected that the bill could not be looked at, because it had not any stamp; but the objection was overruled, the Court being of opinion that the bill might be received in evidence for a collateral purpose, though not for the purpose of recovering the money contained in it. In Rex v. Hawkeswood, (Leach's C. C. 257), which was a trial for forgery of a bill of exchange, the Court overruled an objection, that the bill could not be looked at as it was not stamped, because the statute meant only that the bill should not be made use of to recover the debt. In Rex v. Morton and Rex v. Reculy, both in the same book, similar decisions were made; but in Rex v. Hall, (3 Stark. 68), which was a prosecution against a clerk for money received by him from a customer, and not accounted for, the Court refused to allow the receipt, which had been given by the clerk without a stamp, to be looked at. In Rex v. Hall the matter at issue was not the payment of money between the master and his customer, but the crime of fraudulent receipt and non-payment by the master's clerk—a matter as purely collateral to the fact of payment as was the matter sought to be proved in Rex v. Pooley, Rex v. Hawkeswood, Rex v. Morton, and Rex v. Reculy, in all of which the evidence was received as unobjectionable, although in Rex v. Hall it was rejected as inadmissible.

Such was the state of the cases at the time Matheson v. Ross came before the House of Lords, and if any one can extract from them a simple uniform rule of practice, he will discover greater acuteness than the Peers in that case took credit for to themselves. In Matheson v. Ross, which was an action for the price of labour, the defendants wished to shew that the whole money had been paid; for this purpose they tendered a "state of settlement with A. Ross," which contained various entries on either side, and wound up with the following —"Balance, 68*l.* 9*s.*" An unstamped acknowledgment of the receipt of this sum, expressed as "being balance amount of pay bills, paid from the 7th August to the 11th December," had originally been at the foot of the "state of settlement," but for some reason had been disjoined. The defendants likewise tendered this document for the purpose of having the benefit of the plaintiff's signature, as acknowledging the "state of settlement;" but they disclaimed all wish or any necessity for proving by this paper the receipt of the balance of 68*l.* 9*s.*, because the plaintiff himself had already proved that particular payment. The plaintiff objected that the paper could not be looked at for any purpose, as it purported, by its terms, to be an acknowledgment of money, but was not stamped. Lord Cottenham said the cases seemed, in most instances, to be so little regulated by any fixed rule or principle, that it would be a hopeless task to endeavour to reconcile them; but it appeared to him, that from all the cases a certain principle might be extracted. His Lordship then divided the documents, upon which the question might be raised, into three classes—first, a mere discharge for debt, about which there could be no dispute; secondly, where it is necessary to prove payment, not for the purpose of shewing a discharge as between debtor and creditor, but for what is called "a collateral purpose." That expression, his Lordship said, seemed to have been very much misunderstood, and to have led to a great deal of the confusion to be found in the cases. "It certainly is a collateral purpose," continued his Lordship, "if you produce a receipt, not to shew a discharge as between debtor and creditor, but for the purpose of establishing some other fact collateral to the question of payment, as in one of the cases" (Hawkins v. Warre) "I recollect, with regard to the payment of rent by a tenant, where a receipt, purporting to be a receipt for former rent, was produced, not for the purpose of shewing the discharge of that particular rent, but for the purpose of establishing the fact of tenancy. That is quite collateral to the fact of payment, no doubt. The great majority of the cases go to shew this—that if, in a case, the matter to be proved be the payment of money, and the receipt of the money so paid is proved by a document, the Stamp Acts do immediately apply to it, whether it is for a direct purpose, as between debtor and creditor, or whether it is for a purpose collateral. But there is another class of cases within which it appears to me the present falls—where the document is, indeed, a receipt, and purports, on the face of it, to be a receipt, but also purports something else —that is to say, as in the cases where an account of debtor and creditor appears set out between the parties, making a certain balance due, and the paper contains a receipt for that supposed balance. Whether that balance was paid or not, if the object of the parties be, not to prove the fact of that particular balance having been paid, but merely to shew that the parties to the account acknowledge the state of account as appears by the account, the receipt may be received for the purpose for which it is produced. Why because a paper, purporting to be a receipt, which cannot be used for the purpose of proving that receipt without a stamp, should not be used for another purpose, equally apparent upon the face of the paper, which does not require a stamp, is a proposition which it seems to me it is extremely difficult to support by any argument, certainly not by any language to be found in the Stamp Acts, or, I believe, by any authority, although there are some which it might be difficult to deal with. It does not appear to me at all to infringe upon the Stamp Acts, to hold this document admissible for the purpose of evidence, so far as it contains matter not connected with the receipt of money."

Lord Brougham puts the matter more tersely, in these words:—"The rule I take to be clearly this—that where a document is used for the purpose of proving a receipt of money in any way, it requires a stamp; and when the cases, as some of them do, lay it down, that where it is used for a collateral purpose, it does not require a receipt stamp, I do not think that that is a perfectly accurate, and not always a very intelligible expression, because it may be for a collateral purpose, and yet if it is used in a way to mix up with it the receiving or paying of money, so that upon the whole a receipt of money is the matter for which, or in respect of which, or connected with which, the document is used, it requires, past all doubt, to have a stamp, because it is, in one way or another, used as a receipt. But if the same document is used for a totally different purpose, it is to me perfectly clear that it is not to be regarded as a receipt."

This case, therefore, may be taken as having the previous uncertainty of the rule as to the reception of unstamped documents, and as having conclusively established, that a document is receivable in evidence, though in its terms it purports to be a receipt for money paid, and although it should not be impressed with the stamp required by the statute in respect of the sum mentioned in it; provided the payment of the money mentioned in the document is not the fact in issue beween the parties, but the state of the account between them generally, (the particular payment being proved aliunde), or some other object equally collateral to the fact of the particular payment.

INVALID LIVES.

In addition to the ordinary Assurance of Healthy Lives, this Society, early in the year 1824, originated the plan of granting Policies on the Lives of Persons more or less deviating from the standard of health. Having issued one-fourth of the whole number of Policies on Lives of that description, the Board have recently caused a careful investigation into this branch of the business to be made. The result of this investigation has proved highly satisfactory as to the past, and encouraging for the future. The data, derived from long experience in this class of cases, and exclusively available by this Society, enable the Directors to state with confidence their conviction that the system now adopted by them for assuring Invalid Lives is as safe and beneficial as that upon which the scale for Healthy Lives is constructed.

Every description of Assurance may be effected with this Society, and Policies are granted on the Lives of Persons in any Station, and of EVERY AGE.

BONUSES.

The two First Divisions averaged 22*l.* per Cent. on the Premiums paid; the Third, 28*l.* per Cent. The Fourth Bonus, declared January, 1847, averaged rather more than 36*l.* per Cent.; and, from the large amount of Profit reserved for future appropriation, and other causes, the Bonuses hereafter are expected to EXCEED that Amount.

The Fund accumulated and invested for the security and benefit of the ASSURED exceeds SIX HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND POUNDS; and the Income, which is steadily increasing, is now upwards of 137,000*l.* per annum.

The Balance Sheets of this Society (containing every item of Receipt and Expenditure) are at all times open for the inspection of any of the ASSURED.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 17, 1849.

In a preceding number of The Jurist, in the early part of the year, we discussed at some length the pernicious effects of the existing system of Chancery pleading, and the modes in which it might be reformed. The publication of the paper in question exposed us at the time to much ridicule and vituperation, and we feared at first, not that we had missed the truth, but that we had been premature in urging it.

Since that period, however, a considerable change has come over the opinions of the Profession, and we find now many who are prepared to join in considering a great part of the ponderous machinery of Chancery procedure as quite unnecessary, and, being unnecessary, mischievous. We are not conceited enough to suppose that we have had much influence in producing the change, except in so far as we may have put it upon thoughtful men to consider that which probably, in the hurry and pressure of actual business, they had not, for want either of leisure or inclination, before considered; and that the minds of thoughtful men, being so directed to the subject, could not do otherwise than perceive the monstrous inaptitude of Chancery procedure to the wants of the age. But no arguments of ours—no arguments coming from heads far more learned and lips far more eloquent than ours—could have had, in producing the change of opinion which has undoubtedly taken place in the Profession, half the effect that has been produced by the decrease, during the last few years, in the amount of Chancery business. For a time it could be, and was, attributed to the depression of the commercial interests; but when those began to revive, and the business of Chancery practitioners did not revive proportionately, men's minds were driven to seek for other causes for the continued depression; and they then perceived, or rather ceased to reject the perception, that the diminution in the delay and expense of Chancery procedure had not at all kept pace with the wants of the public; so that, in effect, by reason of such delay and expense, people are so terrified at the very name of Chancery, that they compromise or forego their rights, or, unless they are either very wealthy or very angry, will do or bear anything rather than embark in a Chancery suit. We put the argument for reform and simplification of Chancery proceedings on this double ground—of their being at present at once an oppression upon the public, and a check upon the legitimate occupations of those who live by the law—because we believe that to be the practical and worldly view in which such subjects should be looked at. No sensible lawyer professes to treat the exercise of his profession as other than a mode of maintaining himself by his labour. No honourable lawyer, on the other hand, would for a moment contend, or pretend, that the proceedings of Courts should be framed for the profit of the Profession alone; and a due consideration of his own fair and just interest, quite irrespectively of all feeling of any higher kind, must convince every lawyer, that it is idle to uphold a system, because it would be profitable, if it encouraged business; while it is not, in fact, profitable, because it checks business. The material question, then, for the public and the Profession—for their interests are identical—is, how the proceedings of Chancery can be rendered speedy and comparatively inexpensive; and, assuming it to be established, that, as at present regulated, they do not meet the interests of either the public or the Profession, we return to the charge, to point out the absolute inutility of some of the most time-honoured parts of our system of pleading, and to point out what may be well substituted for them.

For all the family of bills—bills of revivor, bills of supplement, of revivor and supplement, original bills in the nature of bills not original, &c., and answers—we continue to maintain that they are worn out, and should be wholly swept away. For the bill, should be substituted a statement of the plaintiff's facts, denuded of all merely formal language, and referring to the documents on which he means to rely, by way of documentary evidence. What this instrument is to be called, whether a plaint or a state of facts, or anything else, is of little consequence. The material point is, that it should state only facts which do not appear in any documents, and only refer to documents; and should state what it does state, positively and clearly, but shortly. So much for the original foundation of a suit. Then as to the mode of presenting to the defendant, and the Court, matters omitted by the plaintiff in the outset, or occurring subsequently to the institution of the suit—matters which are at present the subject of amendment, or revivor, or supplement, or some of these combined, giving rise to those difficult questions, which so frequently puzzle the most able counsel, as to the proper form of bill*;—as to all these, they should pass away. Everything that can be done by any of these forms, can be done, for all purposes of information, by amendment. The distinctions between amendment, as applied to what existed at the filing of a bill, and supplement, or revivor, to what has occurred since; and again, between revivor for that which cannot be questioned, as the title of a personal representative on the death of a party, and with reference to a title which can be disputed, as that which accrues by devise, are wholly capricious and irrational. All that the defendant and the Court require to know is, that some fact, or some party, or, speaking generally, some interest which was not before them when the suit was instituted, is now presented to their view; and it is quite impossible to conceive a case in which a simple amendment would not suffice to bring before the Court the new information requisite for the determination of the case.

Next, as to the defence; and this, perhaps, is the part in Chancery procedure which offers the greatest difficulties. In our former paper we suggested a mode of answering, which would undoubtedly effect considerable saving of expense. But further consideration and communication with others anxious to see a substantial reform in pleading, have led us to think that the principle of the American Act (partly printed in THE JURIST also in the early part of this year) is the better one, and that there should be, strictly speaking, no answer at all; that the defendant should be at liberty to put the plaintiff simply to the proof of all, or of so many of his statements as he does not think fit to admit; and to make, if he chooses, a counter-statement of his own case. But then it will be asked, how is the discovery from the defendant, which, it must be conceded, is the very essence of the equity jurisdiction, to be obtained? The answer is, that the defendant in equity is simply a witness examined by the plaintiff, and that the mode of obtaining discovery from him will be by permitting the plaintiff to examine him as a witness upon written interrogatories. The result of this alteration would be to dispense with the answer, and to substitute for it, so far as regards the discovery sought by the plaintiff, the depositions of the defendant. By this alteration, also, all proceedings in the nature of exceptions for insufficiency would be got rid of, as the examiner of witnesses would be, in regard to the defendant, what he already is in regard to every witness, an exceptant to everything in the nature of evasive answers.

We suspend for the present this inquiry, which we shall, however, from time to time, probably resume; at least, if we see ground for conceiving that the subject is seriously considered by the Profession. That they will seriously consider it, we, as working members of the Profession, most earnestly hope, being quite satisfied, that, if the method of proceeding in equity is not greatly simplified, its general business will decrease more and more.

* Let any one read Lord Redesdale's work on the distinctions between the cases when revivor is proper alone, and when revivor and supplement, and when an original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor, and the like; and if he does not rise from it with his previous confusion of mind increased, he is a wonderful man. We have ourselves heard an eminent judge say, in open court, that these mysteries were beyond him. They are worse than mysteries; they are, simply, learned nonsense; but, unfortunately, very expensive nonsense.

WALKER v. GILES.—TENANCY CLAUSES IN MORTGAGES.

Our observations (ante, pp. 262, 278) on the case of Walker v. Giles (13 Jur., part 1, p. 588) have been criticised in a curious fashion by one of the learned judges who decided that case. At the trial of a case of Barnard v. Pilsworth, before Wilde, C. J., the defendant had leave to move to enter a nonsuit, on the ground that a building society's mortgage should not have been received in evidence without a stamp. The rule was moved for last week before Maule, J., who refused it, and, referring to Walker v. Giles, said, "Some newspaper or publication of that kind has found fault with that decision. I thought that decision was correct, and I believe that was the opinion of everybody else who heard the case." (Times, Nov. 9). From this we learn three things: first, that it is consistent with judicial reserve to take public notice of newspaper criticisms on legal decisions; secondly, that his Lordship, when he concurred in the decision in Walker v. Giles, thought it was right; and, thirdly, that his Lordship thought it also consistent with judicial reserve to canvass the opinions of the bystanders, and that he had the satisfaction of meeting with their unanimous concurrence;—more fortunate than a certain able equity judge, who, having delivered an elaborate judgment on a difficult conveyancing question, shortly afterwards took advantage of a pause in the business of the Court to address a profound lawyer, who was sitting in the back row, in the following terms:—"Mr. L, did you hear my judgment in —— v. ——?" Mr. L, "Yes, Sir." "Did you approve of that judgment, Mr. L?" Mr. L, "No, Sir."

Mr. Justice Maule's allusion was to THE JURIST, and by terming it "a newspaper or some publication of that kind," his Lordship shewed either that he was unacquainted with its nature, (which does not reside in the newspaper stamp affixed to it), or that his temper had been ruffled by so simple a thing as a dry legal discussion of a decision of his Court, with reference to a doubt which had not even been suggested in argument before it*. We are inclined to adopt the latter explanation, especially as it enables us to add his Lordship's name to the list of eminent lawyers who have thought the legal articles in THE JURIST worthy of attention†.

Since the appearance of our observations on the stamp question in Walker v. Giles, the decision of the Court on a point reserved for further consideration has been reported by Mr. Scott, and that decision shews, either that there was no conveyancer among the bystanders consulted by Mr. Justice Maule, or that his Lordship omitted to take counsel on the question reserved, as well as on that decided. Walker v. Giles was an action of replevin, and the second avowry was made upon a clause in a mortgage to the trustees of a building society, by which the mortgagors agreed to become tenants of the mortgaged property to the trustees from the date of the deed, during their will, at a yearly rent of 200*l.*, subject to re-entry for non-payment, and to all usual covenants and remedies in leases of the like property. This was held to be so inconsistent with the object and general contents of the deed as to be utterly void. Wilde, C. J., said, "The deed recites, that its object was to create a mortgage security for the contributions payable in respect of the parties' shares in the capital of the society, and that security is in the last sentence of the deed limited to the sum of 840*l.*; and in order to secure such subscriptions to the extent of 840*l.* it is provided, that in case of default the trustees may appoint a collector of the rents, and if the rents shall not equal the arrears due in respect of the contributions, the trustees may sell; and it is declared, that the deed is upon trust that the grantors shall retain possession and take the rents and profits until default. The object of the deed, then, being distinctly expressed to be to secure the subscriptions to the extent of 840*l.* only, and that the grantors should retain possession and take the rents and profits until default, it is quite inconsistent with that object that the grantors should immediately, and before default, or even before the contributions are due, become tenants, at the rent of 200*l.* a year, and that such rent should be payable immediately and during the continuance of the demise, and without reference to the fact whether default should be made in the payment of the contributions or not: so that, to construe the deed to create the tenancy stated in the second avowry, the grantors must be deemed to have contracted to pay the contributions and also the rent of 200*l. a year*—a construction manifestly contrary to the obvious intention of the parties. To construe the deed, therefore, to create the relation of landlord and tenant upon the terms of the second avowry, would have the effect of defeating and not of giving effect to the intention of the parties." The Court accordingly decided for the plaintiff in replevin!

We have noted this case against the following passage in Jarman's Conveyancing, vol. 5, p. 515:—"The object" [to give to the mortgagee a remedy to recover arrears of interest by distress] "is sometimes effected by making a demise at will to the mortgagor, reserving a rent equal to the amount of the interest. (See a form to this effect, Cov. Prec. Mortg. 94)."

The mistake into which the Court fell in Walker v. Giles is to be attributed to their confounding the legal with the equitable operation of the security. The instrument in question was clumsily drawn, but not so inefficiently as to justify the decision. The effect of the deed was, in substance, this:—It recited, that its object was to secure the due payment of the monthly subscriptions; and it witnessed, that the mortgagors demised the property in question to the mortgagees, upon trust to permit the mortgagors to hold the premises and receive the rents and profits so long as they should duly pay the subscriptions; but, in case of default, to appoint a receiver of the rents, or to sell. The mortgagors covenanted to pay the subscriptions, and also agreed to become tenants at will of the trustees, at a rent of 200*l.* Need we add, that the mortgagors, so long as they duly paid the subscriptions, would, under the trust for quiet enjoyment until default, be entitled to receive the rents and profits legally recoverable by the trustees, including this 200*l.*, which they would thus pay with one hand and receive with another; and that, after default, though the trustees would, by the express terms of the deed, be entitled to recover at law both the subscriptions and the rent, they would be liable to account in equity? The Court might as well have said, that it could not have been intended to give the mortgagees the right to recover the mortgage-money by action on the covenant for payment, and also to recover the rents from the tenants by virtue of

* It was assumed by the counsel on both sides, in Walker v. Giles, that the Building Societies Act incorporated all the provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts applicable to building societies.

† Among these may be mentioned the judges of the Court of Queen's Bench, who, when a point similar to that in Doe d. Jacobs v. Phillips (11 Jur. 692; 10 Q. B. 130) arose before them, thought it a sufficient reason for taking time to consider their judgment, that that decision had been treated as clearly erroneous in an article in THE JURIST, (11 Jur., part 2, p. 310)—a conclusion, we may add, which has been confirmed by the Court of Common Pleas in Garrard v. Tuck, (13 Jur., part 1, p. 871); Mr. Hayes, (1 Introd. to Convey. 337); Mr. Jarman, (Concise Wills, 367); Messrs. Keating & Willes, (2 Smith's Lead. Cas. 411 a, 3rd ed.); Mr. Spence, (Equitable Jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, passim); Mr. Lewis, (Treat. on Perpetuity, Suppl. 103; see Sugden on the Law of Property, 120), &c.

their legal estate; yet such is the legal effect of every mortgage. It is surely elementary knowledge, that a mortgagee, under a stringent security, may have several legal remedies for recovering one debt, and that the only restraint upon his ultimately recovering too much is under the stat. 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, or in the Court of Chancery. LONDON, NOVEMBER 24, 1849.

In the 4th volume of The Jurist, (p. 593), we discussed a question which, at that day, excited great attention, not only among the members of the Profession, but at every table where educated men met. We allude to the question, whether Mr. Charles Phillips, then simple Counsellor at Law, since and now holding judicial office, had or not greatly exceeded the privilege of the Bar in his defence of a person accused of murder. We did not, in the paper referred to, actually name Mr. Phillips; but we took as admitted facts, in reference to which a principle was to be discussed, facts which all the world connected with the conduct of the Courvoisier defence; and we therefore, pro tanto, indirectly injured Mr. Phillips, if he was innocent of the conduct attributed to him.

Mr. Phillips has recently published a letter explaining all the circumstances, respecting which confused accounts, or other causes of error, had at the time misled the public. We are bound to say, that, after reading the letter of the learned Commissioner, no doubt whatever remains on our mind that his conduct was misrepresented, and that, in most painful and trying circumstances, he did exactly what a right-minded man and a conscientious advocate ought to have done. Whether this amende, late only because the explanation which has called it forth has been late, will administer, in any the slightest degree, balm to the wounded feelings of a man conscious of having been calumniated, we cannot, of course, form an opinion; we hope that it will. At any rate, we have unintentionally joined in a wrong; it is therefore our duty, as public writers, to retract, so soon as we have proof that we were wrong; and we have no slight gratification in finding, that, in acquiescing in the belief that a member of our Profession had been guilty of cruel and unconscientious conduct, we were wholly mistaken.

Mr. Commissioner Phillips's letter lays down the rule that is to govern the conduct of counsel in the defence of his client exactly as we have always conceived it. It is quite clear, that nothing can justify counsel in doing what is called, throwing up a brief, except that species of conduct in the client which amounts to a fraud upon his counsel, and would drag that counsel into a dishonourable position; or else the discovery that the client's case is utterly hopeless. But for a client, if he be a person charged with crime, to avow his criminality, or for a party to a civil proceeding to avow that he has no moral claim, is no ground for his counsel, who has accepted his brief, to throw it up.

It must not be forgotten, in this sort of inquiry, that counsel are not priests. It is not their duty to rebuke men for their moral iniquities, or to see that they are dealt with according to their moral merits or demerits. In judicial proceedings, the rights of suitors are dealt with according to the law of the country, and by their compliance with or departure from the rules of that law, are they to be judged. It may be, that, by applying the law, a criminal escapes punishment, or a just man meets injury. If such things happen, it is the fault of the law, the consequence of the imperfection of human institutions; but, since men's civil rights are the creatures of the municipal law, it is the duty of the advocate simply to see that his client obtains those rights to which by law he is entitled; and if, by the rules of the law, a man actually guilty in a moral point of view, is not legally guilty, it would be as gross an act of injustice in his counsel to abandon him, as it would be in his judges to condemn him.

For, since it is by the laws of his country, and not by the law of God, that he is being judged, he has a right to have proper care taken that he is only found guilty according to those laws, by the standard of which he is judged. And it must be observed, that what we are here advocating is not, as the public sometimes view it, the encouragement of moral wrong, under cover of technical legal right, but merely the enforcing of those laws which represent the average morality of the community. If a thoroughly sound and high-toned moral principle governed the actions of all men, there would, of course, be no necessity for laws; but because each man's notions of right and wrong are considerably different from his neighbour's—because, in fact, there is no standard of high morality so recognised and earnestly believed in, as practically to regulate the conduct of men—therefore it is that laws are made. And as it passes human wisdom to make laws capable of embracing all possible cases, while the very object of having any laws at all is, that men may know what, in the absence of any internal standard by which to regulate their conduct, they may or may not do, it follows that the general cause of morality is better served by maintaining a general adherence to the fixed standard of morality settled by the municipal laws, than by each man endeavouring to set up his own particular view, the rectitude of which would be questioned by every one of his neighbours. And hence, also, it follows, that the counsel who confines himself to the establishment of his client's legal rights, without reference to the question, whether, in the particular case, those rights are also, in the opinion of the counsel, or of any considerable number of men, moral rights, is doing more to uphold the general morality of the community, while thus supporting a fixed rule, than he would by following his own opinion, even if that opinion were shared by most of those considered good men, and thus introducing uncertainty. In truth, laws are made for the very purpose of setting up some settled rule—not a perfect one, but as good a one as the average morality and intelligence of the country can frame; and the judge who should judge by any standard but those laws, or the advocate who should look to any other standard in the struggle for his client's rights, would be contending against the very certainty which it is the object of all legislation to provide with a view to the well-being and practical morality of the people. We say, therefore, that, on every ground, the practice of the Bar of defending a client, to the extent of seeing that he is only condemned according to law, is not only defensible, but highly beneficial to the community. Of course, counsel, in doing so, is not called upon to do or say anything compromising his own personal honour or integrity; he is not called upon to make any personal assertion of belief, contrary to his real belief. But take the very case which has elicited these observations, where the counsel is apprised that his client is actually guilty; yet, if the law has laid down, for the general protection, some certain rules of evidence, or otherwise, according to which only, the legal conclusion of a man's guilt is to be arrived at, it is the duty of counsel to do as Mr. Phillips did—to retain his brief, and to use every endeavour that his intellect can suggest, to take care that his client shall not be condemned, except by a conclusion strictly deducible by applying the fixed rules of the law to the evidence produced.

We slightly discussed in a former number (ante p. 309) the question, whether, under the Statutes of the Cathedral of Rochester, trusts were created or not in favour of the scholars for whose tuition the statutes make provision. We have been since favoured with a copy of a pamphlet circulated by the Rev. Mr. Whiston containing his defence to the citation of the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral of Rochester, and we find therein a statement of the most material part of the statutes of the cathedral, in the following words:—

"The Statutes of Rochester Cathedral (A. D. 154[illegible] assign to the dean 100*l.*, and to each canon 20*l.* a year amounts which, according to the returns of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, have been raised to 1428*l.* and 680*l.* respectively. The same statutes assign 5*l.* a year till the degree of B. A., and 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* a year after the degree of M. A., to each of four students at the Universities, and ordain that they are to be maintained out of the funds of the cathedral church. 'Statuimus ut de bonis ecclesiæ nostræ quatuor scholares pauperes in academiis nostris semper alantur.'

"The statutes further assign 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* a year to each of twenty scholars, and ordain that they also are to be maintained out of the same funds, and describe them as so maintained. 'Statuimus et ordinamus, ut sint perpetuo in ecclesiâ nostrâ roffensi, viginti pueri pauperes de bonis ecclesiæ nostræ alendi.'—'Hos pueros volumus impensis ecclesiæ nostræ ali.'—'Pueri grammatici qui sumptibus ecclesiæ nostræ alentur.'—'Pueri grammaticam addiscentes, victum gratis intra ecclesiam datum habentes.' At present, however, neither the four students, nor the twenty boys, are maintained at the costs and charges of the church, and they receive each only the same numerical sums of money as in 154[illegible], viz. 5*l.* and 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* respectively—amounts which at that time were severally sufficient for the maintenance of a student at college and a boy at school.

"It should also be observed, that the statutes contain no provision, expressed or implied, for the division of a surplus amongst the dean and canons; and the subjoined scheme, drawn up for the original constitution of Rochester Cathedral, and submitted to Henry VIII, shews the intention of the founder to exhaust the whole of its revenues, by a distribution of them, in certain definite apportionments, among the various objects of his bounty. The scheme itself is preserved in the ledgers of the Augmentation Office, and is given in Henry VIIIth's 'Scheme of Bishopricks,' a small work published in 1838, by Mr. Henry Cole.

"And so if it please the King's Majestie the church to bere all charges of tenths, first frutes, and other, must be endowed with 800*l.* 5*s.* 1*d.*"

On Mr. Whiston's defence to the particular proceeding taken against him, we make no observation; we shall confine our notice to the question, whether, by the statutes of the cathedral, there is a trust declared in favour of the scholars and students mentioned in them; or, to take the more extensive view of the subject, whether the whole foundation of the cathedral is not a trust for the objects specified in the scheme set forth.

It is to be observed, that the same authority which endowed the cathedral, marked out the application of the income with which it was endowed; that the object of this, as well as most of the other cathedral endowments of the period, was not merely the preservation of cathedrals and cathedral worship, but the education of youth, principally for the church; that the exact proportion observed between the income and expenditure, or rather the specific appropriation of a given income to meet the ordained expenditure, is indicative of an intention in the founder, that all the objects named in the scheme should for ever participate in the benefits of the endowment; and, lastly, looking at the actual import of the language used, that, with regard to the scholars and students at least, the direction is positive that twenty boys and four students are to be nourished or maintained at the expense of the church for ever. Now, the funds assigned by the scheme were, at the time of their assignment, sufficient for maintaining such boys and students. How, then, can it be said that there was no trust in favour of the boys and students; and that the statutes, which direct them to be maintained, and provide for their maintenance, can be construed to intend, that, while the funds remain adequate for their maintenance, they should cease to be maintained? It is quite possible that the founder had no anticipation of the change which would take place in a few centuries in the value of money, and in the value of the endowment of the cathedral. But how does that affect the question of his intention to give a beneficial interest, to the extent of being maintained at school and at college, to that particular number of the King's subjects which the statutes specified? There are charities innumerable, in favour of the poor of a parish, or of certain designated classes, in which lands, originally worth 40*l.* or 50*l.* per annum, have been given for the purpose of dispensing the income in certain specified sums, for maintaining such poor or classes. Has it ever been contended, that because, by the increase in the value of money, the dole directed is insufficient for the purpose, there is no trust, and such dole is to be withheld?

We have in our former observations on this subject endeavoured to shew that this case is not the same as The Attorney-General v. Magdalen College, (10 Beav. 402). If it is not, then, we apprehend, it would be most difficult to shew that there is not a trust within the jurisdiction of equity. What construction would be put upon the statutes is quite another matter: it does not at all follow that the Court would adopt, in reference to the actual value of the cathedral endowment, the scale of payments directed by the original scheme; but it would, we think, beyond all question, hold that the twenty boys and four students should be maintained.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

INVALID LIVES.
In addition to the ordinary Assurance of Healthy Lives, this Society, early in the year 1824, originated the plan of granting Policies on the Lives of Persons more or less deviating from the standard of health. Having issued one-fourth of the whole number of Policies on Lives of that description, the Board have recently caused a careful investigation into this branch of the business to be made. The result of this investigation has proved highly satisfactory as to the past, and encouraging for the future. The data, derived from long experience in this class of cases, and exclusively available by this Society, enable the Directors to state with confidence their conviction that the system now adopted by them for assuring Invalid Lives is as safe and beneficial as that upon which the scale for Healthy Lives is constructed.

Every description of Assurance may be effected with this Society, and Policies are granted on the Lives of Persons in any Station, and of EVERY AGE.

BONUSES.
The two First Divisions averaged 22*l.* per Cent. on the Premiums paid; the Third, 28*l.* per Cent. The Fourth Bonus, declared January, 1849, averaged rather more than 38*l.* per Cent.; and, from the large amount of Profit reserved for future appropriation, and other causes, the Bonuses hereafter are expected to EXCEED that Amount.
The Fund accumulated and invested for the security and benefit of the ASSURED exceeds SIX HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND POUNDS; and the Income, which is steadily increasing, is now upwards of 127,000*l.* per annum.
The Balance Sheets of this Society (containing every item of Receipt and Expenditure) are at all times open for the inspection of any of the ASSURED.
Tables of Rates, and Forms of Proposal, can be obtained of

LONDON, DECEMBER 1, 1849.

An important question has lately been raised in the Court of Common Pleas relating to the office of the Registrar of Joint-stock Companies. It arose in a case of The Barwen Iron Company v. Barnett. The declaration was for instalments due on shares. The defendant pleaded that the company was within the stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110; but that, although it had been completely registered, its deed of settlement did not contain the particulars required by that statute. The plea was holden bad on general demurrer, upon the ground, that a certificate of complete registration effectually incorporates a joint-stock company, even although it may have been granted under a mistake or on a defective deed. The Court appeared to be of opinion, that, in such a case, there might be a mode of setting aside the certificate, but that, as long as it was in force, no person should be allowed to say that it did not properly incorporate the company.

The above was a case in which the complaint was, that a company had been completely registered which ought not to have been so. Another case is pending in the Court of Queen's Bench, in which the complaint is, that the certificate has been refused where it ought to have been granted. We allude to Reg., on the Prosecution of the National Land Company, (provisionally registered), v. The Registrar of Joint-stock Companies." There, a mandamus, setting forth the deed of settlement of the company, has gone to the Registrar, commanding him to renew the certificate of provisional registration, and grant a certificate of complete registration. He has returned three grounds for non-compliance—first, that the company is not established for profit, &c., within the stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110; secondly, that, by the deed, the directors are empowered to sell lands, &c. by lot, contrary to the lottery acts; and, thirdly, that the company is also a banking company, contrary to the banking acts. To this return the prosecutors have demurred generally, because they contend that the Registrar has no right to travel out of the deed, which shews the company to be within the Joint-stock Companies Act, and does not shew that the lottery or banking statutes have been contravened.

Now, here, we presume, a question, which was incidentally raised in The Barwen Iron Company v. Barnett, will recur, namely, whether the Registrar is a ministerial or judicial officer; and if the latter, whether, at all events, his discretion is not limited by the deed of settlement, and by a compliance on the part of the company with the express provisions contained in the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, as amended by the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 78.

The material provisions on this point in the former statute are the following:—It is intituled, "An Act for the Registration, &c. of Joint-stock Companies," and it recites the expediency of preventing the establishment of any companies which shall not be duly constituted and regulated according to its provisions. Having stated to what companies the act shall and shall not apply, it enacts, that, upon proceeding to make public an intention to form any such company, the promoters shall make certain returns to the office for registration of joint-stock companies, and upon the registration of some they "shall be entitled to a certificate of provisional registration." (Sect. 4). No joint-stock company is entitled to receive a certificate of complete registration unless it be formed by a deed, &c., which must contain certain particulars, and "on the production of such deed, setting forth such matters and making such provisions, &c., together with a complete abstract or index thereof, to be previously approved by the Registrar, and also a copy of such deed, for the purpose of registering the same, or as soon after such production as conveniently may be, the Registrar of Joint-stock Companies shall grant a certificate of complete registration, according to the provisions in this act in that behalf; and unless such deed and other matters be so produced, and such conditions be so performed, it shall not be lawful for him to grant such certificate." (Sect. 7). And if any deed appear to such Registrar to be insufficient by reason of omission or incompleteness, or if it contain provisions which appear to him to be inconsistent with or repugnant to the Joint-stock Companies Act, he shall notify the same to the persons who presented the deed, specifying the particulars wherein it is incomplete, &c. (Sect. 8). And if returns and documents be conformable to the provisions of this act, then it shall be the duty of the Registrar, and he is hereby required, forthwith to register the same, and, on demand, to grant to such company a certificate of provisional or complete registration. (Sect. 15). He is to be paid 5l. for each of such certificates. (Sect. 21). On complete registration being certified by the Registrar, the company is incorporated. (Sect. 25).

It would appear from these provisions that the statute has imposed (as might have been expected) a limit upon the power of the Registrar in refusing to incorporate a company which appears, by its deed, to be within its meaning and intention. Thus, although he may object to the abstract or index of the deed, and to the insufficiency of the deed by reason of omission or incompleteness, or of its containing provisions inconsistent with or repugnant to the stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, yet it would seem, that if he approve of the abstract or index, and the deed of settlement on the face of it comply with the express requirements of the statute, he has no power to refuse registration on account of matter dehors the deed. Such appears to be the reasonable construction of the act; and wide as the Registrar's discretion is under its provisions, it hardly seems advisable to extend it by implication.

Review.

A Selection of Precedents from the best Modern Manuscript Collections, and Drafts of actual Practice; with General Common Forms and Variations, adapted to all the Circumstances usually occurring; forming a System of Conveyancing; with Dissertations and Practical Notes. By the late W. M. BYTHEWOOD, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister at Law. New Edition. By CAYLEY SHADWELL, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister at Law. In Six Volumes. Vol. 1, 8vo., pp. 728. [Shaw & Sons, 1849.]

In his Preface, Mr. Shadwell gives the following account of his design:—"It having been considered that 'one of the greatest inconveniences to which collections 'of Conveyancing Precedents are liable is the extreme 'bulk to which they are apt to run, and their conse-'quent expense, the editorship of the present work was 'offered me, on the condition of compressing into six 'volumes that which was previously published in nine. 'Having accepted the editorship on this condition, I had 'to consider how it could be accomplished, with least 'violence to the valuable labours of my predecessors, and 'without injury to the general utility of the work. It 'soon occurred to me that one of the principal reasons 'for the excessive length of this and similar collections 'was, that the compilers of them had usually attempted 'too much; that, by introducing extended discussions on 'various heads of law, instead of confining themselves 'to short practical notes, they had endeavoured to com-'bine the character of a commentary on the whole 'body of conveyancing law, with that of a collection of 'its forms—an endeavour which, from the immense 'mass of materials with which they would have to 'grapple, would necessarily, after all, be extremely in-'complete, and which, perhaps, might the more readily 'be dispensed with, when it is considered, that, to a 'considerable extent at least, the subject-matter of such 'discussions is to be found in other books, which any 'one attempting the practice of conveyancing can hardly 'be without. As these disquisitions, however, are, for 'the most part, of great merit in themselves, although, 'as I cannot help thinking, rather out of place in a 'work such as the present, I have felt that the deal-'ing with them is the most delicate part of the task I 'have undertaken, and, consequently, have endeavoured 'rather to abbreviate their contents than to exclude 'them altogether, giving, as much as may be, the re-'sults of the cases cited, but omitting the reasonings 'that may have led to them." After enumerating the statutory alterations in the law of real property since the publication of Mr. Bythewood's Precedents, Mr. Shadwell concludes:—"The enumeration of these va-'rious changes and improvements in the law—and the 'catalogue might have been greatly extended—will be 'sufficient, I trust, to justify me against the charge of 'temerity in dealing as freely as I have done, and still 'propose to do, with the materials collected by the gen-'tlemen that have preceded me, and in rejecting much 'which, though formerly of great value, is not, in my 'judgment, material to the present practice of convey-'ancing."

This explanation is not complete. Mr. Shadwell calls his work a "new" edition—not, as is usual, the second, third, or fourth, as the case may be; and he speaks of "the gentlemen who have preceded him." The present volume may be judged from its contents; but to estimate the probable value of his forthcoming volumes, we must know the materials he has to work with. The case stands thus:—The first volume of the first edition of Bythewood is dated August, 1821; the third volume, November, 1823. Three volumes, containing the comparatively unimportant titles, "Acknowledgment, Affidavit, Agreement, Annuity, Appointment, Apportionment, Arbitration, Assent, Attestation, Attornment, Award, Bargain and Sale for a Year, Bond, and Confirmation," were all that he lived to complete. On his death the work was completed by Mr. Jarman, to whom alone the important titles, "Leases, Mortgages, Partnership Deeds, Purchase Deeds, Releases and Composition Deeds, Settlements, Wills," &c., in the work known as "Bythewood & Jarman's Conveyancing," are due. Mr. Jarman afterwards prepared a second edition of Mr. Bythewood's volumes and of his own; and the completion of a third edition of the whole by Mr. Sweet is expected with some impatience by the Profession. In the mean time, for some reason, a rival continuation of Bythewood and new edition of his three volumes was published by Messrs. Parken & Stewart, which was completed many years ago, in nine volumes. It is a new edition of this work, and not of the very different one by Mr. Jarman, that is now before us; and it is to Messrs. Parken & Stewart alone, and not to Messrs. Jarman and Sweet, that Mr. Shadwell alludes as his predecessors. What, therefore, is to be looked for in the forthcoming volumes, as soon as the title "Confirmation" is passed, will be neither Bythewood nor Jarman, but Parken & Stewart and Shadwell.

It is not our business now to characterise Messrs. Parken & Stewart's performance. Mr. Bythewood's precedents were not good, were mostly very special, and are now obsolete. Many of his notes, now also out of date, were very good, but they consisted, much more largely than is generally known, of verbatim extracts from the works of Powell, Roper, Sugden, and other writers of reputation. From some older writers he procured, at an easy rate, the materials for a display of legal antiquarianism.

From this statement, it appears, that while the work before us relies for its reputation on the name of Bythewood, it must owe its value to its present editor's labours. Those labours do not appear to have been exhausting, and Mr. Shadwell has succeeded in dealing delicately with the work of his predecessors. The precedents are, with very few exceptions, the old ones of Bythewood, unaltered, except by omitting the references to leases for years, and fines and recoveries. The forms of agreements for sales are unfurnished with the various important conditions which, since the time of Bythewood, have entirely changed the practice of sales. Some of the precedents cannot have been read by the editor. Thus, at p. 184, we have a form of an agreement by the "mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty" of a "town" exactly as Bythewood left it, without any reference to the Municipal Corporation Reform Act, which, besides regulating the proceedings of those bodies, has given them the uniform style of "mayor, aldermen, and citizens," (or "burgesses," as the case may be).

At p. 600 is a very extraordinary form, which Mr. Bythewood would certainly not have passed if Stiffe v. Everett (1 My. & C. 37) had been decided in his time —a security by assignment of a personal annuity held in trust for a married woman for her life, and not for her separate use. This assignment Mr. Shadwell directs to be acknowledged by the lady, pursuant to the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74.

At p. 653 is a form of a warrant of attorney to acknowledge satisfaction on a judgment, and no hint that a "satisfaction piece" has been substituted for that instrument by several rules of court, of which the last is that of Trinity Term, 1848.

At p. 642 is a still graver mistake—a warrant of attorney with the old form of attestation, under which it would be absolutely void, and of course no reference to the provisions of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 9 and 10.

Wishing to see if Mr. Shadwell had made any amends in his annotations for his neglect of the precedents, and remembering a long note by Mr. Bythewood on the liabilities of equitable mortgagees of leaseholds, we turned to the corresponding place in the present volume for the new editor's remarks on the question, whether the principle of Lord Cottenham's decision in Moore v. Greg (12 Jur. 952; 2 Phill. 717) extends to exempt every equitable assignee of leaseholds from liability to a suit for specific performance by the lessor. We little expected to find, in lieu of any such remarks, the following editorial statement of the existing law:—

"[It is now decided that the depositary of a lease, by way
'of equitable mortgage, will be held liable in equity to
'the rent and covenants, although he has not taken
'possession. (Flight v. Bentley, 7 Sim. 169).—Ed.]
'To avoid this liability, when a lease is deposited, there 'should be an agreement in writing for an underlease."

Flight v. Bentley was flatly overruled, by the learned judge who decided it, in Moores v. Choat, (8 Sim. 508); and Lucas v. Comerford, (3 Bro. C. C. 166; 1 Ves. 235), cited by Mr. Shadwell from Bythewood as being still law, was overruled in Moore v. Greg, where the Lord Chancellor, in a striking judgment, held that a lessor has no equity against a depositary of the lease, even though he has taken possession. Mr. Shadwell takes no notice either of this or of the other modern cases on the subject. (Jenkins v. Portman, 1 Kee. 435; Close v. Wilberforce, 1 Beav. 112; Willson v. Leonard, 3 Beav. 373; Sandys v. Benson, 4 Beav. 350).

At p. 215 is Mr. Bythewood's note on joint and several covenants, but no reference to any of the modern cases—Lane v. Drinkwater, (1 C. M. & R. 599); Foley v. Addenbrooke, (4 Q. B. 196); Hopkinson v. Lee, (6 Q. B. 964); Wakefield v. Brown, (9 Q. B. 219); Addison v. Gibson, (10 Q. B. 110); Mills v. Ladbrooke, (7 Scott's N. R. 1005); Sorsbie v. Park, (12 Mee. & W. 146); Bradburne v. Botfield, (14 Mee. & W. 559); Wetherell v. Langton, (1 Exch. 634); Caldwell v. Bishe, (2 Exch. 318), &c.

At pp. 332 et seq. is Bythewood's note on the proof in bankruptcy by annuitants and sureties. The old statutes, 49 Geo. 3, c. 135, s. 8, and c. 121, ss. 1 and 17, repealed by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, are set out at length, as in the first edition, and the decisions on them, now quite obsolete. The enactment of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, now also repealed, is then stated from the second edition. The present Bankrupt Act is not referred to. At p. 341 the law in insolvency is stated from the old act of the 7 Geo. 4, c. 57. The 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 58, and the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 25, are not referred to, nor any of the important modern decisions. At p. 340 the editor gives his readers sect. 55 of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, not as the authorised printed copies have it, but "corrected according to the obvious meaning."

At p. 373 we are told, from Bythewood, that the statutes relating to estates pour autre vie do not relate to copyholds, and that such an estate in copyholds, if limited to a man, his executors and administrators, determines on his death. This was not law when Bythewood wrote; and the contrary has been since expressly enacted by the 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 6, which also, in express terms, excludes the supposed necessity, in any case, for resorting to Mr. Bythewood's expedient of limiting estates quasi pour autre vie, i. e. for years determinable; but Mr. Shadwell retains the note unaltered.

At p. 129 is Mr. Bythewood's note on agreements in restraint of trade, but no notice of any of the recent cases—Ward v Byrne, (5 Mee. & W. 548); Hitchcock v. Coker, (6 Adol. & Ell. 438); Horner v. Greaves, (5 Mee. & P. 768); Proctor v. Sargent (2 Scott's N. R. 289); Glassington v. Thwaites, (1 Sim. & S. 132); Whittaker v. Howe, (3 Beav. 383); Rannie v. Irvine, (8 Scott's N. R. 674); Hinde v. Gray, (1 Scott's N. R. 123); Archer v. March, (6 Adol. & Ell. 966); Pilkington v. Scott, (15 Mee. & W. 657); Mallan v. May, (11 Mee. & W. 665; 13 Mee. & W. 511); Price v. Green, (16 Mee. & W. 346); Pemberton v. Vaughan, (11 Jur. 411; 10 Q. B. 87); Hartley v. Cummins, (12 Jur. 57; 5 C. B. 260); Nicholls v. Stretton, (10 Q. B. 553), &c.

P. 152. "As the Statute of Uses does not extend 'to copyholds, according to the prevailing opinion, it 'seems that springing uses, or uses to arise in future,
'cannot be created by a surrender of copyholds." This is an abridgment of a long note by Bythewood. The law is now settled the other way. (Boddington v. Abernethy, 5 B. & C. 776; Rex v. Oundle, 1 Adol. & Ell. 283).

P. 195. A note on ancient lights—no hint of the Prescription Act.

At pp. 554 and 672, Bythewood's crotchet, that a rent pour autre vie cannot be limited to executors or administrators, or go to executors or administrators in default of any limitation, is re-stated without correction, although the case of Bearpark v. Hutchinson (4 Moo. & P. 843) (not to mention the Statute of Wills) has settled the contrary.

At p. 394 it is stated to be still the law, that an unadmitted surrenderee of copyholds cannot devise the right to admittance, although the Statute of Wills has some elaborate provisions for enabling him to do it.

At p. 187 the editor professes to refer to the statutes as to exchanges of glebe lands and parsonage houses, but omits the 7 Geo. 4, c. 66, the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, s. 5, and the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, s. 22. So, at p. 205, he assumes to refer to the factors acts, and omits the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39.

At p. 113 is Bythewood's note on sales by reversioners and expectant heirs. The latest case cited is Fox v. Wright, (6 Mad. 111). The important cases of King v. Hamlet, (2 My. & K. 456; 9 Bligh, 610); Portman v. Taylor, (4 Sim. 213); Bawtree v. Watson, (3 My. & K. 341); Hincksman v. Smith, (3 Russ. 433); Potts v. Curtis, (You. 543); Wardle v. Carter, (7 Sim. 490); Aldborough v. Trye, (7 Cl. & Fin. 436); Davies v. Cooper, (5 My. & C. 270), &c., are omitted.

Pp. 639 et seq. Note on warrants of attorney; 3 Geo. 4, c. 39, stated; but no notice taken of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 136, which puts an end to the exception contained in the act of Geo. 4, in favour of judgments signed on unfiled warrants of attorney within the twenty-one days; or of sect. 137, which extends the requisition as to filing to judges' orders on consent; or of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 60, and the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 20, extending the protection of the 3 Geo. 4 to assignees in insolvency. No notice of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 66; no notice of the important provisions of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 9 and 10, as to attestation of warrants of attorney; and, as we have already observed, the old form of attestation, under which the warrant would be absolutely void, is retained. At p. 647 the editor says, that a judgment must be docketted, to bind the defendant's lands. In the precedent of a warrant of attorney to confess judgment (p. 646) he omits the proviso, that it shall not be necessary to revive the judgment after a year, and says, after Bythewood, that it is unnecessary. The Statute of Westminster, 13 Edw. 1, c. 45, which requires that to be done, is, however, still in force, and the proviso is still necessary. (See Morris v. Jones, 2 B. & C. 242; Hiscocks v. Kemp, 3 Adol. & Ell. 676; and Morgan v. Burgess, 1 Dowl., N. S., 850).

From these instances it may be judged how Mr. Shadwell has performed his implied promise to modernise Mr. Bythewood's precedents and notes. He has not been much more faithful to his express undertaking to abbreviate the notes, "giving, as much as may 'be, the results of the cases cited, but omitting the rea-'sonings that may have led to them." Mr. Bythewood's notes might often be reduced to one-fourth, without losing anything but words. At p. 115, his long statement of the case of Shelley v. Marsh, (3 Mad. 232), occupying nearly two pages of note, is retained. At pp. 234 et seq. two pages are devoted to a statement of the two cases of Stedman v. Martinant (13 East, 427) and Wood v. Dodgson, (2 Mau. & S. 195); and these are followed by some others at nearly equal length, all relating to doubts as to the rights of annuitants in bankruptcy, which were dispelled by the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. The obsolete clauses of the old bankrupt and insolvent acts are also printed at length. At pp. 352 et seq. is the case of Cooke v. Brummell, (2 Moore, 495), with the arguments of Serjeants Vaughan, Pell, Lens, and Best, occupying three pages; and a little further is the case of Eyre v. Bartrop, (3 Mad. 221), in two pages and a half, with the arguments of counsel. See also, pp. 399 to 401, Clay v. Sharpe, (18 Ves. 346); p. 449, Graham v. Diggles, (4 Taunt. 760); p. 451, Lucas v. Comerford, (1 Ves. jun. 435); p. 459, Richards v. Chambers, (11 Ves. 580). At pp. 674 et seq., Webb v. Jiggs (4 Mau. & S. 674) occupies more than three pages; but Willoughby v. Willoughby (4 Q. B. 687) is not cited. Pp. 665 to 673 are devoted to the questions as to the devolution of rents pour autre vie, which were never of much importance, and have been settled, since Mr. Bythewood's time, by the case of Bearpark v. Hutchinson, (cited above), and the late Wills Act.

These examples, taken from many more, are sufficient to shew that Mr. Shadwell has not modernised the precedents, nor corrected the law, nor pruned the luxuriances of his author.

Any one following, over the same ground, a writer so justly celebrated as Mr. Jarman for sound judgment, practical good sense, and deep and extensive learning, must have found that he had undertaken a task of no common difficulty; and certainly we cannot compliment Mr. Shadwell on his success in this undertaking. But it is due to Mr. Shadwell to state, that he appears to have exercised a most honourable forbearance as to availing himself of the labours of others—a forbearance which, though every man of honour must feel it as much a duty as to abstain from picking pockets, is, we fear, like many other virtues, often "more honoured in the breach than the observance."

LONDON, DECEMBER 8, 1849.

Not less by way of illustration of the propriety of what we recommended in a former paper, (13 Jur., part 1, p. 462), viz. the abolishing of all distinctions between matter for amendment and matter for revivor or supplemental statements, and making all requisite alterations in the plaintiff's statement of his case by amendment; than by way of calling the attention of our readers to a question at present of practical interest; we proceed to place before them the state of the authorities upon the question, what is the proper mode of proceeding when one of the defendants to an original bill dies before appearance?

In a case in 6 Jur., part 1, p. 49, (Clough v. Bond—1842), it was held, by the Vice-Chancellor of England, that when a defendant dies before appearance, and there is no new fact, but the fact of his death, to bring before the Court, the proper course of proceeding is by supplemental bill, to which the other parties to the original bill need not be parties.

In Crowfoot v. Mander (9 Sim. 346—1840) the same learned judge had previously said, that in such a case a bill ought to be filed against the personal representative of the deceased, which would be an original bill as far as respected the defendant, but a supplemental bill with respect to the suit. His Honor did not expressly say whether the original defendants would be necessary parties. The same point was decided in Hardy v. Hull, (14 Sim. 21), again without its being decided whether the parties to the original bill were necessary parties. It might have been thought that the distinction between the two cases last mentioned, and Clough v. Bond, was merely verbal, and that the Vice-Chancellor meant, by an original bill, an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill; but, in a more recent case, his Honor, if he has not expressly stated what he meant to decide as to parties in Crowfoot v. Mander and Hardy v. Hull, has at any rate now decided the point. In Foster v. Foster (13 Jur., part 1, p. 399) the same point arose: a defendant died before appearance, and then the plaintiff filed a bill against the personal representative, stating, as substantive statements, all the statements of the original bill, and praying as in the original bill: in effect, therefore, it was an original bill, following Crowfoot v. Mander, but it did not make the old defendants parties. The Vice-Chancellor held that they were necessary parties. His Honor said, "When Greaves (the new defendant) was made a party by a new bill, it rather seems to me, that, if that bill was to bring forward the administrator of W. P. Foster, (the deceased defendant), it was, in point of fact, as against him, an original bill, and ought to have made the other persons parties. Of course they would not have had to answer over again."

Therefore we have now on this point four cases—one deciding, that a bill, original against the new defendant, but supplemental as to the others, is the proper course, and deciding, as it must, we apprehend, now be construed, that the old defendants are necessary parties; then a case deciding, that a purely supplemental bill is the right course, and that the old defendants need not be parties; then a case deciding consistently with the first; and, lastly, a case not expressly deciding, that the bill must be an original bill, but that it may be so, and that if it is, the old defendants must be parties.

That the balance of authority is, according to existing practice, in favour of an original bill, and making the old defendants parties, seems clear. But it is equally clear, that the whole ground of difficulty is one created, not natural; that it is purely artificial, and its results purely mischievous. It is perfectly clear also, that every object that could be desired would be obtained by a simple amendment of the original bill. All that is required is, in fact, that the representative of the deceased defendant should be brought before the Court; that such matter as was intended to be put in issue between the plaintiff and the deceased, shall be put in issue between him and the representative of the deceased; and that the new matter, viz. the death, and the character of the new defendant, should be put in issue between the plaintiff and the old defendants. To what end are disquisitions, whether such matter is original or supplemental, and as against whom it is original, and against whom supplemental, except to perplex draftsmen, and produce delay and expense? The death is a fact, and the representation is a fact; and it is utterly immaterial whether those facts be correctly described as original, as supplemental, or as anything but facts; and it is utterly immaterial how the defendants are told of them, and required to say whether they are true or not, except that the shortest and least expensive way, which would be by amendment, is the best. Even if an entire remodelling of the system of Chancery pleading were thought too wide an alteration to be attempted, a great boon would be conferred on the Profession and the public by the mere abolition of bills of revivor and supplement, and their compounds, and the substitution of a rule, permitting all matter which it may be requisite or proper for the plaintiff to introduce into his pleading, after the filing of the original bill, to be stated by way of amendment simply.

INVALID LIVES.

In addition to the ordinary Assurance of Healthy Lives, this Society, early in the year 1824, originated the plan of granting Policies on the Lives of Persons more or less deviating from the standard of health. Having issued one-fourth of the whole number of Policies on Lives of that description, the Board have recently caused a careful investigation into this branch of the business to be made. The result of this investigation has proved highly satisfactory as to the past, and encouraging for the future. The data, derived from long experience in this class of cases, and exclusively available by this Society, enable the Directors to state with confidence their conviction that the system now adopted by them for assuring Invalid Lives is as safe and beneficial as that upon which the scale for Healthy Lives is constructed.

65	5	16	3	6	19	11	7	16	9

Every description of Assurance may be effected with this Society, and Policies are granted on the Lives of Persons in any Station, and of EVERY AGE.

BONUSES.

The two First Divisions averaged 22*l.* per Cent. on the Premiums paid; the Third, 28*l.* per Cent. The Fourth Bonus, declared January, 1847, averaged rather more than 36*l.* per Cent.; and, from the large amount of Profit reserved for future appropriation, and other causes, the Bonuses hereafter are expected to EXCEED that Amount.

The Fund accumulated and invested for the security and benefit of the ASSURED exceeds SIX HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND POUNDS; and the Income, which is steadily increasing, is now upwards of 127,000*l.* per annum.

The Balance Sheets of this Society (containing every item of Receipt and Expenditure) are at all times open for the inspection of any of the ASSURED.

From Mr. Phillips's letter to Mr. Warren we inferred that the Examiner of 1840, and its contemporaries, had supposed Courvoisier's confession to have preceded his counsel's cross-examination of the witnesses. We took it for granted that Mr. Phillips would not be insane enough to rest his defence on an assertion which the mere inspection of the record admitted by himself to be trustworthy must disprove. Regarding his letter as an explanation of an equivocal transaction, we at once gave to it a credit which we should not have accorded, without examination, to a direct impeachment of the veracity of a paper second to none in respectability. We confess that we were also a litle influenced by the array of dignified witnesses cited by Messrs. Warren and Phillips. We have since procured the report in the Times of June 22, 1840, and we are bound to say, that every particular of the Examiner's charge is strictly proved. The retainer of his brief after receiving his client's confession, was not included in that charge. Mr. Phillips was accused of having appealed to Heaven as to his belief in his client's innocence after receiving the confession of his guilt. We find that he did so twice. He said, "The omniscient God alone knew who did this crime." "And even supposing him guilty of the murder, which, indeed, was known to God alone, and of which, for the sake of his eternal soul, he (Mr. Phillips) hoped he was innocent," &c. To assert that the omniscient Deity alone knows who did the deed, is to call the omnipresent Deity to witness that the speaker does not know. To say that you hope a fact is so, is to affirm your ignorance of its not being so, and something more.

The other accusation, says Mr. Phillips, is that of endeavouring to cast suspicion upon the female servants. The accusation was more extensive. Mr. Phillips defamed other witnesses than the female servants, and without any preliminary disclaimer. The disclaimer itself, when considered in connexion with the rest of the speech, amounted to an imputation. "And here he would beg the jury not to suppose for a moment, in the course of the narrative with which he must trouble them, that he meant to cast the crime upon either of the female servants. It was not at all necessary to his case to do so. It was neither his interest, his duty, nor his policy to do so. God forbid that any breath of his should send tainted into the world persons depending for their subsistence upon their character." He would abstain from accusing the women. Why? Because he believed them innocent? No. Impute the crime to his client, and God alone knew who committed it; but with respect to the women, though he would not say that he believed them innocent, it was not his policy to accuse them. As they had their bread to earn, he would not say anything against them. But such disclaimers, even when unequivocally expressed, are mere artifices to induce a confidence in the speaker's candour which he intends to abuse. A practised advocate is not so liable to say what he does not mean as to require to make any such precautionary disclaimer. In fact, Mr. Phillips did so far forget "his interest, his duty, and his policy," as unequivocally and deliberately to make the very imputation he had disclaimed, and to misrepresent the evidence for the purpose of making it more effectually. He said, "The prisoner had seen his master retire to his peaceful bed, and was alarmed in the morning by the housemaid, who was up before him, with a cry of robbery, and some dark mysterious suggestion of murder. 'Let us go,' said she,' and see where my lord is.' He did confess that that expression struck him as extraordinary. If she had said, 'Let us go and tell my lord that the house is plundered,' that would have been natural; but why should she suspect that anything had happened to his lordship? She saw her fellow-servant safe—no taint of blood about the house; and where did she expect to find her master? Why, in his bed-room to be sure. What was there to lead to suspicion that he was hurt? Courvoisier was safe, the cook was safe, and why should she suspect that her master was not safe too? . . . He (Courvoisier) opened a shutter, and then the female servant saw a speck of blood on the pillow, and ran screaming out of the room." All this was purposeless babble, if it did not mean that the female servant had a guilty knowledge of the murder before she accompanied Courvoisier to their master's room; and to support this imputation, Mr. Phillips misrepresented the evidence. The witness did not say, "Let us see where my lord is;" she did not see a "speck" of blood. Her evidence is thus given in the Times:—"I went as far as the passage, and said, 'For God's sake, let us go and inform his lordship.'. . . . . I went about half way to the foot of the bed, and saw blood upon the pillow. Before I noticed the blood, I said, 'My lord! My lord!'" To obtain his client's safety, the police were accused of a conspiracy against his life. "He would have sent the trunk to a place of safety, where no miscreant, speculating on his share of the 450*l.* reward, could have tampered with it, in order to insure the conviction of the unfortunate man at the bar; but it was left in the room, accessible to the female servants and to the whole gang of policemen. . . . . He had a right to know who placed those gloves in the prisoner's trunk between the 6th and 14th May. Had there not been practice here? This man it was evidently determined should be made the victim of some foul contrivance. Collier, who, for reasons best known to himself, would not go to the trunk without a witness, and, to make sure of his witness, took a brother policeman," &c. "Some villains must have been at work here to provide proofs of guilt against the prisoner."

We have gone into these details, derived from our own perusal of the Times' report, in order to shew that we are not now relying, as we did before, on an ex parte statement. It is impossible to doubt that the Times' report, taken in writing on the spot by gentlemen accustomed to the task, and corroborated in every material particular by the independent reports of the other morning papers, is more trustworthy than the mere recollection of any listener; and therefore we attribute no countervailing weight whatever to the testimony of the gentlemen whose letters are appended to Mr. Phillips's pamphlet.

So much in justice to the Examiner. We regret that we have been led into the personal part of this discussion; but, having expressed an opinion which was unjust, we are bound to acknowledge our error. A question of general interest remains. Mr. Phillips has published letters from five barristers, who say that they heard the whole of the defence of Courvoisier, and heard nothing objectionable. There is, besides, some mention of the favourable testimony of several respected judges. To this last we do not presume to refer, because we have not the expressions in which it was conveyed. If five "competent witnesses" can be found to declare that they heard the whole of Mr. Phillips's speech, and heard nothing objectionable, we may well pause before we unreservedly rely on the recollection of two witnesses as to the effect of the necessarily guarded expressions which may have fallen from those eminent persons. We give to Mr. Phillips's five vouchers the full benefit of the supposition, that their perceptive faculties, as well as their moral sense, may have been somewhat confused; but though their ears did not tell them that the advocate called Heaven to witness to a lie, or that he distinctly imputed his client's crime to persons whom he knew to be innocent, they must, if they had any use of their faculties, have perceived that he expended the principal part of his labour, not in pointing out the defects in the evidence produced against his client—not in protecting him from being condemned on insufficient evidence, or against the forms of law—but in conscious misrepresentations of the evidence and of the characters and motives of the witnesses, and in vehement adjurations and appeals, which, so far from not involving the expression of personal opinion, had no other purpose or significancy than to intimate that the speaker's belief in his client's innocence was so earnest as to have aroused his sympathies on his behalf. A man may argue for any conclusion without asserting his belief; but when he adds to his argument gesticulations and expressions of emotion, he tells us of a conviction so pervading as to have extended from the region of the intellect to that of the affections. We know no difference between a lie acted and a lie spoken. If those gentlemen think that an advocate's duty exacts such conduct of him, and if, as we fear, their sentiments are shared by a minority of their brethren not absolutely insignificant in numbers, it is time to let them know that the Bar acknowledges no such duty, and that it professes, at least, to be governed by the same rules of morality as other classes of society. That its performance sometimes falls short of its principles, is no more than is to be said of human nature in every walk of life. The limits beyond which counsel may not go, on behalf of a client, have been often stated in this paper. To borrow the expression of a correspondent, "he may utter fallacies, because his business is to present all plausible arguments, and to judge none, but he must present them ingeniously. In civil cases, though he is to misrepresent nothing—to gain nothing by a trick—he is to take care that his client is not defeated, except upon strict legal proofs and legal grounds, whether his cause be morally just or not. Therefore he is not to bring forward or disclose any adverse fact, whether accessible to his adversary or not. . . . . But the community has an interest, paramount to any individual interest, in uniformity of decision. Therefore, though an advocate in a civil cause may suppress facts, he must not suppress law; nay, he must—as has been emphatically declared more than once from the Bench—interfere to save the Court from inadvertently disturbing the law in favour of his client, if he is aware of any principle or authority, overlooked by the Court, which would guide it to a right decision. If this were not so, the assumption by a looker-on of the character of amicus curiæ would be an impertinent intrusion. In criminal cases a further public interest is at stake—that crime should not escape unpunished. Here the sole function of the advocate is the guardianship of innocence and of the law. He must take care, above all things, whether he be prosecutor or defender, that the innocent do not suffer. Subject to that care, he must see that the rules of law, as well those devised for the punishment of guilt as those interposed by way of countercheck for the protection of innocence, suffer no impair. To aid in the escape of the guilty is no part of his office: actively to aid in the conviction of the guilty is no part of his office, if he be defender, because the imposition of such a duty would frustrate the ends for which advocacy is instituted. . . . . The advocate of a prisoner must by no means leave unnoticed, much less endeavour to put out of sight, any matter of evidence or law tending to criminate his client." Our correspondent proceeds to infer, that an advocate must not defend a client who has confessed his guilt. This is certainly not the rule of the English Bar. To deprive a prisoner of the assistance of counsel, on the mere report of a confession to his gaoler or to any one in the interest of the Crown or of the prosecutor, would be to expose prisoners to the danger of intimidation and coercion. The propriety of defending a prisoner who has confessed his guilt to his own counsel, and for the purposes of his defence, depends on more technical considerations. A criminal is to be convicted only upon legal evidence, and his moral guilt may be consistent with a legal defence, to the benefit of which the law gives him a title. This, we fear, is a necessary though undoubtedly a large concession to guilt. In a case where some of the witnesses have been implicated with the prisoner in misconduct, though not in the actual crime of which he stands accused, it is obvious, that counsel intrusted with such a confession cannot conduct the defence without danger of frustrating the ends of justice. Lord Langdale's exposition (in the case of Hutchinson v. Stephens, 1 Kee. 68) of the duties of counsel has been partially cited by the Examiner. It is as follows:—"With respect to the task which I may be considered to have imposed upon counsel, I wish to observe, that it arises from the confidence which long experience induces me to repose in them, and from a sense which I entertain of the truly honourable and important services which they constantly perform, as ministers of justice acting in aid of the judge before whom they practise. No counsel supposes himself to be the mere advocate or agent of his client to gain a victory, if he can, on a particular occasion. The zeal and the arguments of every counsel, knowing what is due to himself and his honourable Profession, are qualified, not only by considerations affecting his own character as a man of honour, but also by considerations affecting the general interests of justice." That the confidence mentioned by Lord Langdale is sometimes abused is, as we have said, a consequence of human frailty. The remedy is to be sought, we believe, principally, in the abolition of trial by jury in non-political cases, and in the exercise by the Bench of a more strict censorship over the Bar. In the old trial by battle, (of which the trial by counsel is the modern representative), if either of the champions was detected in foul play, he was liable to severe punishment, and incapacitated from being again employed. A few modern examples of similar discipline would effectually disabuse Mr. Phillips and his friends of their peculiar notions as to the license of counsel.

Correspondence.

GRAY'S-INN, Nov. 19, 1849.

Sir,—As a Bencher of Gray's-inn, I cannot but express my regret at seeing a statement in the daily papers, alleged to have been made by Mr. James Stewart, at a general meeting of the Society for the Amendment of the Law, that a general failure had taken place of the lectures at the Inns of Court for the information of students in the study and practice of the law.

I beg to observe, that, as regards the lectures delivered at Gray's-inn, upon the law of real property, I, on Monday last and on this evening, attended the lectures in Gray's-inn Hall, and I counted the students attending on each day. On Monday last forty students attended, and on this evening thirty-nine, and I think more; and I find that sixty-five have entered their names to attend the present course of lectures.

It appears to me to be due to our lecturer and the society of which I have the honour to be a member, that the truth should be known with respect to the lectures delivered in Gray's-inn Hall; for I have the greatest satisfaction in saying, that the lectures have been hitherto, not only highly satisfactory to the Benchers who have been present at their delivery, but that they have been attended to by the students with much interest, and, apparently, with great utility to them in assisting them in their legal studies.

I must also beg leave to state, that our lecturer has given every possible assistance to the students, not only in public, by lectures, and mootings, and examinations, but also in his chambers, at private lectures; so that if students were desirous of obtaining legal information, they have had the means of doing so; and I feel a pleasure in saying, that they have very much availed themselves of the opportunities afforded to them.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
FRS. WHITMARSH.

[By some accident the above communication reached us only a few days ago. We are well aware of the great success which has rewarded Mr. Lewis's learning and zeal. Whether Mr. Stewart's statement is more just with respect to the other Inns of Court, we do not know; but if their lectures have been successful, the fame of them has not reached us.—ED.]

THE ATTENDANT TERMS ACT.

A correspondent, after some observations on the case of Doe d. Clay v. Jones, (13 Jur., part 1, p. 824), which we think has been sufficiently discussed, thus enlarges upon a question suggested ante, p. 384:—

"But, whatever might be the right decision in this particular case, I wish to point out a serious omission in the act, which may irretrievably damage many titles, which, before the passing of the act, were perfectly good and marketable. Let me suppose a not improbable case:—An estate is purchased, which is subject to an old mortgage for a term. The purchaser has to borrow part of his purchase-money, and in order to secure it a new mortgage is effected, and the old mortgage is transferred to the new mortgagee or to a trustee for him, the deed of assignment containing a declaration, that, subject to the mortgage, the term shall attend the inheritance for the purchaser. Upon this transaction, it is clear that the term would, before the act, protect the purchaser from all mesne incumbrances. Now, suppose, after the act has come into operation, the purchaser pays off the mortgage, what is his situation? It is clear, that, as the term was not satisfied on the 31st December, 1845, it is not included in the 1st section of the act. It may, perhaps, be contended, that as the term did not 'after that day become' attendant on the inheritance, since it was made so attendant before, it is out of the operation of the act altogether; but I think the better opinion to be, that it is within the 2nd section, notwithstanding the words I have quoted; that the term has consequently ceased; that as it was not satisfied on the 31st December, 1845, it does not come within the protection afforded by the latter part of the 1st section, which only relates to the terms which were within the first part of that section; and that the mesne incumbrances, against which the term protected the purchaser before the act, are now let in. "K. W. R."

Our correspondent assumes, that a mortgage term cannot be satisfied while it is held by or in trust for the creditor, and the debt subsists. But this, as we have already hinted, does not seem to us to be quite clear. The argument for considering the term as unsatisfied is single and obvious: the object of the term was to secure the debt, and the debt subsists. But a security for a debt may be satisfied without satisfaction of the debt. The satisfaction of a term is a purely equitable notion, and must depend upon the equitable incidents of the security. The object of a mortgage term is, in equity, to secure a debt, by enabling the mortgagee to take the rents and profits, and, if need be, to foreclose, or, when there is a power of sale, to sell. These remedies the mortgagee may, by virtue of the term, enforce against the reversioner. But when the mortgagee obtains dominion over the reversion in fee, the term is no longer capable of operating as a security against the mortgagor, and it is no longer by virtue of the term that the mortgagee is enabled to recover the rents, to foreclose, or to sell. As against a mesne legal incumbrance, the term may, it is true, be available; but that is an accident which cannot alter the effect of the transaction between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. The term protects against mesne incumbrances, not as a mortgage term, but as an attendant term. Subject to the accident of its protecting against mesne incumbrances, the term, as a security, is at an end: its object was to secure the debt; but the debt is now secured by the fee, and not by the term, which merely subsists as a legal bulwark to the fee. If a mortgage is a conditional purchase, a mortgagee of all equity of redemption in fee, who takes a transfer of a prior term of years, deals with it in the same way as an absolute purchaser would do; he discharges the fee which is in him from the prior incumbrance, but keeps the legal estate outstanding. It can make no difference that he does this subject to redemption by the mortgagor, or that the mortgagor remains legally liable to pay the debt. The transaction, so far as concerns the title to the land, and the securities on it, would be the same if the mortgages, instead of being securities for debts, had been mere charges, not involving any personal liability. The question is certainly difficult, and its solution is important with reference to transactions entirely subsequent to the passing of the Satisfied Terms Act, as well as to those in the position suggested by our correspondent; for if, when a mortgagee for years takes a further security on the reversion in fee, the term is satisfied, it then becomes attendant on the inheritance, and is extinguished by the act, letting in any mesne incumbrances on the legal estate.

If, however, our correspondent is right in assuming that, in his case, the term was not satisfied before the passing of the act, the case clearly falls within the 2nd section of the act. For if, when a term is transferred to or in trust for a mortgagee in fee, it is not satisfied, a declaration that the term, subject to the mortgage, shall attend the inheritance, does not make it an attendant term, in the sense in which that expression is used in the act, so long as the mortgage subsists. The effect of the declaration is, that when the mortgage is satisfied the term shall attend the inheritance, and it is not until the mortgage is satisfied that the term becomes attendant. It is to the point of time when the term actually becomes attendant, and not to the date of any anticipatory declaration, that the act refers. A term cannot properly be said to be attendant on the reversion while it subsists for independent purposes. If an unsatisfied term could be made attendant by express declaration, then, without such declaration, it would be attendant by implication of law; for the declaration that, subject to the security, it shall attend, expresses no more than the law implies. In that sense, therefore, every term created for a special object is attendant from the time of its creation; but terms created before the act passed, and becoming attendant after its passing, are expressly mentioned in the 2nd section, which conclusively shews that that is not the meaning of the word in the act.

If the case comes within the 2nd section, the act may operate harshly. The owner of an estate makes a mortgage to A. for years, then mortgages to B. for years or in fee, then sells to C. without notice of B.'s security, and C. procures D. to advance the purchase-money on a mortgage of the fee, A. being paid off, and assigning his term to a trustee for D., and, subject to the mortgage, to attend the inheritance. If by this transaction the term was satisfied, the case is within the 1st section, and there is no hardship. If the term was not satisfied, the ultimate declaration of trust would seem to bring the case within the principle of Saunders v. Dehew, (2 Vern. 271), so as to disentitle B. to maintain a redemption suit against D., and even to place him in the situation of an ordinary transferree, if he should pay off D., and obtain an assignment of the term; for, though the mortgagee might transfer the term to any one who would pay him, the transfer would be taken with notice of, and subject to, the express trust by which the benefit of the term was appropriated to C. If the 2nd section of the act applies to this case, it undoubtedly operates with hardship upon C.; but we do not know that C. is more entitled to complain than B. would have been, if the old law had remained unaltered.

LONDON, DECEMBER 22, 1849.

We have seen a short pamphlet on Patent-law Reform, which is, in fact, a reprint from a paper published in the London Journal of Arts; it bears the name, and we presume emanates from the pen, of Mr. Newton, a gentleman whose well-known experience as a patent agent entitles his opinions, on the practical questions affecting the interests of inventors, to much consideration. Mr. Newton, after pointing out what he considers the most oppressive defects of the law and practice of patents, as at present administered, proceeds to suggest the following alterations:—

"1st. That patents shall be held on the same tenure as heretofore, viz. as royal grants; but that the terms of the grant shall be changed, so as to shew that justice, and not favour, is the motive for conferring such privileges. [By this means, it is presumed that the feeling of jealousy, which too generally exists in the public mind against patentees, will be in great part removed.]

"2nd. That in place of the three patents which are required to give an inventor the sole right to work his improvements in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Colonies, and Channel Islands, the limits of all patents hereafter granted shall be, the British empire. [By thus extending to the utmost the sphere of the patentee's operations, he will have an inducement to push his invention in those parts of the empire where its use must now, in most cases, be of necessity unknown.]

"3rd. That the cost of a patent for fourteen years shall be reduced to 30*l.*; and that patents for a term of five years shall be granted, for minor inventions, at a cost of 10*l.* [This reduction in the cost of patents would, by holding out a prospect of reward to ingenuity, confer incalculable benefits on inventors generally, and, consequently, increase the prosperity of the manufactures and commerce of the country, enabling Britain, through the uncrippled energy and unrivalled skill of her sons, to compete successfully with the world in every branch of the manufacturing arts. The granting of short and cheap patents would allow of that legislative abortion—the act for registering articles of utility—being swept away.]

"4th. That a patent shall in no case include more than one invention, or one improved manufacture; that is to say, a patent shall protect one invention, whether it be applied to one or more manufactures; or it shall protect one improved manufacture, whether such manufacture be effected by one or more inventions. [On the adoption of this proposition, it would be possible to ascertain the object of an invention by reading the title of the patent; which facility is of the utmost consequence in conducting a search among old patents, with the view of discovering what has been already done in any given manufacture.]

"5th. That all applications for patents shall, as heretofore, be made at the Secretary of State's office, and be subject to the present fee; and that such applications shall be referred to the English Attorney or Solicitor-General, for their consideration; at whose office a fee of 10*l.* shall be paid on every application for a fourteen years' patent, and 5*l.* for a five years' patent—one half of which sums, respectively, shall be remitted, in case the application is finally rejected.

"6th. That the patent shall bear date from the day on which the inventor's application is received at the Attorney or Solicitor-General's office; and that with such application shall be deposited a preparatory specification of the invention sought to be patented. [This, in connexion with amendment No. 7, will prevent the carrying on of the frauds before mentioned, and will insure to the inventor his right to protection.]

"7th. That, as an appendage to the office of the Attorney and Solicitor-General, a board of examiners, consisting of not less than three scientific men, shall be appointed, whose duties shall be to inquire into the sufficiency of every preparatory specification that is deposited, and assist the Attorney and Solicitor-General in coming to a right decision in cases of opposition*.

"8th. That the examiners shall be empowered to reject such applications as are not accompanied by a clear description, setting forth the nature and object of the invention; to refuse all applications which include more than one invention; and to apprise applicants that their inventions are anticipated, when such is the case. [These provisions will insure, first, that no purposely-mystified description could be deposited under the idea of getting more scope for the insertion of additional improvements in the complete specification; secondly, that the advantages contemplated under amendment No. 4, will be realised; thirdly, that an inventor will have a means of ascertaining whether the invention for which he is soliciting a patent is or is not the subject of an unspecified patent.]

"9th. That the Lord Chancellor shall be empowered, on receiving the report of the Attorney or Solicitor-General, to order the patent to be prepared, and the Great Seal to be affixed thereto.

"10th. That the third payment, making up the cost of the patent to 10*l.* or 30*l.*, respectively, shall be paid into the Great Seal office within one month from the day on which the application was made, and that before the patent is sealed: in default of payment, the application to be considered as withdrawn.

"11th. That any party becoming honestly possessed, by purchase or otherwise, of an invention, whether emanating from a British subject or a foreigner, shall be at liberty to obtain a patent for that invention in his own name, provided the inventor's name be recited in the patent. [This will render patent property a far safer investment for capitalists than at present; and will, consequently, enable poor inventors to find pecuniary assistance more readily than heretofore.]

"12th. That in case a party has fraudulently obtained a patent for the invention of another, it shall be competent for the Lord Chancellor, on the matter being brought judicially before him, to order a transfer of all rights in the patent to the first and true inventor. [By the adoption of this clause, it will not be necessary, in order to undo one act of injustice, to commit another; for, instead of the inventor being benefited by the cancelling of a patent fraudulently obtained for his discoveries, it is the public who, by the present plan, are advantaged—for the invention then becomes public property.]

"13th. That the stamp-duty on specifications shall be removed, and that the preparatory specifications shall be also recorded at the office where the complete specifications are inrolled.

"14th. That for these six months next ensuing from the inrolment of his specification, the patentee shall have the exclusive right to print a description of his invention. [This will secure him from the inconvenience and loss to which he is at present subject, if he cannot apply for his foreign patents before his English specification is inrolled*.]"

The first of the proposed amendments appears to us to be quite immaterial. If it will please inventors, that the patent should recite that they are entitled as of right to patents, instead of, that the Queen, of her mere motion, is pleased to grant them, so let it be, we should say, if we were consulted thereon by her Majesty or her Majesty's Attorney-General. The point is of as little consequence as it is whether the seal affixed to letters-patent is of white or of yellow wax.

The second proposition is much more material; and if the cost of a patent for the whole British empire is reduced to 30*l.*, or thereabouts, as proposed in the third suggestion, we should say it would be very desirable that every patent should be for the whole empire; but if the proposed reduction in price, or a reduction coming very near to it, does not take place, then there are substantial reasons why the grants should remain as they now are—separate for the three kingdoms; and these reasons are, that it would be, in certain cases, a considerable hardship on an inventor to compel him to take and pay for a patent more extensive than he would desire, having regard to the fact, that there are many inventions relating to trades exclusively, or almost exclusively, carried on in one or two of the three kingdoms; and hence a patent in the other or others of them would be comparatively useless.

Mr. Newton's third proposition will probably meet with unqualified approbation from the class of inventors, nor do we see anything in it to find fault with, as regards the public. Some mischief may be done by the facility which it will afford for inundating trade with petty inventions; but, on the other hand, probably a more than counterbalancing benefit to the public will result from the facility offered to inventors, of moderate pecuniary means, for applying themselves to the task of perfecting manufactures.

The sixth, seventh, and eighth suggestions are important; their object is, and probably their effect will be, to prevent those frauds which are too frequently committed, by persons applying for inventions, with what is termed a wide title, and then, under the existing practice, taking possession, in the interval allowed for filing a specification, of other men's inventions, and introducing them into their own specifications. Most of the remaining suggestions have a practical bearing, and are deserving of much consideration. They would not, as their author observes, remodel the whole system, and might leave many blots untouched; but they would introduce, if adopted, at least some substantial improvements.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint James O'Dowd, Esq., to be her Majesty's Solicitor-General for the Island of Tobago.

1. A Treatise on the Principles of Evidence and Practice as to Proofs in Courts of Common Law; with Elementary Rules for conducting the Examination and Cross-examination of Witnesses. By W. M. Best, LL.B., of Gray's-inn, Barrister at Law. Small 8vo., pp. 570. [Sweet.]
2. A Treatise on the Law of Evidence, as administered in England and Ireland; with Illustrations from the American and other Foreign Laws. By John Pitt Taylor, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. In Two Volumes, royal 8vo., pp. 1472. [Maxwell.]

Mr. Best explains that his design is not to add to the practical treatises by which the subject has been illustrated, but to examine the principles on which its rules are founded, tracing them to their sources, and shewing their connexion with each other. By executing this design with extraordinary care, ability, and success, Mr. Best has imposed a lasting obligation on students of every branch of English law; for the principles of evidence are of general application in the English law, and there is no division of practice in which they do not, more or less, come into operation. A systematic exposition of the principles of evidence, unincumbered with practical details, or with any discussion of particular authorities, but always considered with reference to the foundations of those principles in reason and policy, is at once the most attractive form which a treatise on the subject can assume, and the most likely to leave a lasting impression on the memory. The late J. W. Smith insisted on the fitness of mercantile law for scientific exposition in a small compass, because its rules are deduced from considerations of utility, the force of which the mind perceives as soon as they are pointed out—unlike the law of real property, which is unintelligible apart from the details of its history. The fitness of the law of evidence for compression is still more striking, because it depends more exclusively on logical and scientific considerations. Other parts of the law are founded on positive precepts, the creation of the Legislature or of usage, and it is only the application of them in practice that involves the use of exact reasoning; but the law of evidence is a scientific art invented by the judges themselves, founded on acknowledged principles of human nature and the rules of logic, and in the main is not clogged with arbitrary dogmas, but follows the course which any private searcher after truth would adopt. Upon this view of the subject is founded Mr. Best's division of the introductory part of his work:—

"Facts which come in question in courts of justice 'are inquired into and determined precisely in the same 'way as doubtful or disputed facts are inquired into 'and determined by mankind in general, except so far 'as positive law has interposed artificial rules to secure 'impartiality and accuracy of decision, or exclude col-'lateral mischiefs likely to result from the investiga-'tion. And this is strictly analogous to the relation 'between natural and municipal law, of which it has 'been well observed, 'There are in nature certain 'fountains of justice whence all civil laws are derived 'but as streams; and like as waters do take tincture and 'tastes from the soils through which they run, so do 'civil laws vary according to the regions and govern-'ments where they are planted, though they proceed 'from the same fountains.' (Bac. Adv. Learn., book 2). 'As, therefore, the study of natural law precedes that of 'municipal, so an inquiry into the natural resources of 'the human mind, for the investigation of truth, should 'precede an examination of the artificial means devised 'for its assistance." (Introduction, p. 1).

In the Introduction are considered, first, the sources of ideas, the nature of belief, the different kinds of evidence and testimony; and, secondly, the nature of judicial evidence, and the peculiarities (arising principally from the fact, that a judicial tribunal cannot, like a philosophical or historical inquirer, suspend its judgment, but must form a conclusion, and act upon it) distinguishing judicial from other evidence.

Part I contains—Chap. 1. A general view of the English system of judicial evidence. 2. History of the rise and progress of the English law of evidence.

Part II contains—Chap. 1. Witnesses—their obligation to give evidence—their privileges—their competency—and the grounds of suspicion of oral testimony. 2. Real evidence, immediate and circumstantial—forgery of real evidence. 3. Documentary evidence.

Part III. Rules regulating the admissibility of evidence. Chap. 1. Primary rules of evidence—relevancy—onus probandi—extent of proof. 2. Secondary rules of evidence—direct and circumstantial evidence, and presumptions of law and fact—primary and secondary evidence—derivative or second-hand evidence in general—res inter alios acta—opinion evidence—self-regarding evidence—quantity of evidence required—evidence rejected on grounds of public policy—res judicata.

Part IV.—Chap. 1. Forensic practice respecting evidence—usual course of a trial—offering, receiving, and objecting to evidence. 2. Elementary rules for conducting the examination and cross-examination of witnesses.

The solid reputation which Mr. Best has earned by his treatise on Presumptions and Presumptive Evidence, will be rather augmented than impaired by this new work, on a subject of more general interest. His expositions of principles and rules are always clear and exact; his illustrations from history and general literature are not got up for the occasion, but are drawn from the stores of a studious and discursive mind; and if some of his metaphysical speculations, or his notions of the expediency of particular institutions, do not please us, they relate to subjects on which diversity of opinions will probably long continue to exist. We shall take another opportunity to examine into the grounds of his approval of trial by jury.

Mr. Taylor's work is "founded" on Dr. Greenleaf's American treatise on the Law of Evidence, much in the same way as Mr. Bright's treatise on the Law of Husband and Wife is founded on Roper's well-known work. The external difference between the two superstructures is however striking; for Mr. Bright acknowledges his obligations to Roper on the title and on the back of his book; but Mr. Taylor, considering, perhaps, that the graft is nobler than the stock, gives no intimation, in his title-page, of Dr. Greenleaf's claim to the plan and arrangement, and a considerable part of the substance, of "Taylor on Evidence." In the Preface, indeed, the truth comes out, and Mr. Taylor confesses, that, after having been for some months engaged in the task of merely editing Dr. Greenleaf's treatise, the bright idea struck him, that, by citing the English cases more at length, and introducing the English statutes, and suppressing some of the American citations, he might be able so far to alter the American work as to pass it for his own. It is not for us to inquire into Mr. Taylor's private motives to this rather startling proceeding; but we cannot help perceiving that part of his industry appears to have been employed in striking out, not only some citations of American cases, but also the majority of Dr. Greenleaf's candid references to English treatises, and especially to those treatises of Messrs. Starkie and Phillipps which every writer on the English law of evidence, whether he acknowledges it or not, must, if he is possessed of common sense, be deeply indebted to. No one but a Lord Foppington, and least of all a practical English lawyer, can afford to rely exclusively on the natural sprouts of his own wit, neglecting the accumulated harvests of his predecessors; nor is it by ignoring the labours of such men as Starkie and Phillipps that Mr. Taylor will raise himself to anything near their level. Throughout the chapter on Presumptions, Mr. Taylor has but one reference to Mr. Best's treatise on that subject, and that is appended to the following passage:—"We may here mention 'one or two presumptions which attach to particular 'trades, and which, though apparently harsh, are in 'reality founded on just principles of public policy." Dr. Greenleaf, from whom the greater part of the chapter is transcribed, repeatedly refers to Mr. Best's work, both for particular passages and generally. We had proceeded a little way in a comparative examination of the chapter with Mr. Best's work, in order to discover whether Mr. Taylor had really not made use of the book which he seemed so unwilling to cite, when we stumbled upon two parallel passages in Greenleaf and Taylor which resolved our doubts. In Greenleaf, part 1, ch. 4, p. 46, is the following passage:—"Juries 'are often instructed or advised, in more or less forcible 'terms, to presume conveyances between private indi- 'viduals in favour of the party who has proved a right 'to the beneficial enjoyment of the property, and 'whose possession is consistent with the existence of 'such conveyance as is to be presumed, especially if 'the possession without such conveyance would have 'been unlawful, or cannot be satisfactorily explained. '(Phill. & Am. Evid. 475, 477; 1 Phill. Evid. 455, 457)." The passage in Taylor (vol. 1, p. 135) stands thus:—"Juries are often instructed or advised, in more or less 'forcible terms, to presume conveyances between pri- 'vate individuals in favour of the party who has proved 'a right to the beneficial ownership, and whose undis- 'turbed possession, being consistent with the existence 'of the conveyance required to be presumed, affords 'reasonable ground for belief that the legal title has in 'fact been conveyed. (Doe v. Cooke, 6 Bing. 180, per 'Tindal, C. J.)" [The reference to Phill. Evid. is suppressed.] We then turned to 1 Phill. 475, and found—"Conveyances between private individuals are 'often recommended to juries, in more or less forcible 'terms, as presumable in favour of a party who has 'proved a right to the beneficial ownership of property, 'and whose possession has been consistent with the ex- 'istence of such a conveyance as is to be presumed, es- 'pecially if the possession cannot be accounted for, and 'would have been unlawful, except on the supposition 'of a conveyance. (Per Tindal, C. J., in Doe v. Cooke, '6 Bing. 180)." We gave Mr. Taylor credit for citing Tindal, C. J., more exactly than Mr. Phillipps had done; but on turning to Bingham we found the dictum to be as follows:—"In all these cases the presumption has been 'made in favour of the party who has proved a right to 'the beneficial ownership; the possession has been con- 'sistent with the existence of the surrender required to 'be presumed, and has made it not unreasonable to be- 'lieve that the surrender should have been made in 'fact." Thus Mr. Taylor retains the passage which Dr. Greenleaf owed to Mr. Phillipps, suppresses the reference to that writer, and, substitutes his reference to Doe v. Cooke, but does not substitute the actual terms of the dictum, which Mr. Phillipps had paraphrased in order to give it a more general application. All this must have cost trouble, which might have been otherwise bestowed with more credit to the "adapter," and more profit to his reader. It must be confessed, however, that this is only an extreme case of a fault at present too common among legal writers. Whenever, as must constantly happen in the preparation of a legal treatise of any length, the writer makes use of a preceding author, either simply as a guide to the cases supporting a particular proposition, or as his authority for stating the effect of them, it is his duty, both to his author and to his reader, to confess his obligation. Such citations, too, lead the student to a knowledge of the best sources of information. But if a preceding treatise merely directs a writer to authorities from which he draws conclusions more exact or more extensive than those of his predecessor, the obligation is too small to require an acknowledgment which, that it may not mislead, must necessarily be qualified. From reading Mr. Taylor's references, one would imagine that he had derived his knowledge of the law of evidence almost exclusively from the reports and inspiration. Mr. Best almost errs in the other extreme, and so scrupulously acknowledges his obligations, that he cannot even bring in the well-known quotation from the De Arte Poetica, to illustrate the value of real evidence, without giving to Bonnier the credit of that particular use of it.

Mr. Taylor, however, has bestowed great labour on his prize, and has produced a useful digest of the law of evidence, which, though very unreadable, is, for practical purposes, the best because the latest in the market, superseding, for the use of every one but the student, the more scientific works to which we have alluded, until new editions of them, in their turn, drive Mr. Taylor's out of the market. It has not, any more than its American parent, any well-founded pretensions to a scientific character; for although Mr. Taylor has preserved some of the philosophical tinsel with which, after the fashion of American writers, Dr. Greenleaf has decorated one or two chapters, and has even added a few scraps of his own picking up, he has not attempted, or attempting has entirely failed to achieve, that happy union of philosophical with legal views which constitutes the charm of the two English treatises.

Mr. Taylor says, "From the American decisions 'cited by Dr. Greenleaf, I have made a copious selec- 'tion, having referred to such as in my judgment 'either afforded favourable illustrations of doubtful 'points of law, or laid down rules superior to those 'adopted in our courts. . . . The libraries of our inns 'of court contain neither a large nor a well-chosen col- 'lection of American decisions; but I am happy to say 'that the librarian of the Middle Temple, with a libe- 'rality which I trust will be followed by the other inns, 'has determined to remedy the evil, and has made ar- 'rangements for the purchase of all such reports as are 'held in estimation by the courts of the United States."

Of all cants, the cant of comparative jurisprudence disgusts us most, because it concerns us most nearly. We are now writing with more than 650 volumes of English reports on the shelves around us, though our collection is far from complete; and we are sorry to find that from a few affected writers the foppery has spread into our courts, of citing Irish and American decisions; as if the great professional evil of the day were not the overwhelming accumulation of our own reports—as if the chief impediment to the improvement of the scientific part of our law lay not in the very multitude of its precedents—and as if one lawyer out of ten were even possessed of, not to say adequately familiar with, a complete collection of English reports.

When the quality of these transatlantic authorities is examined, the mania for citing them appears still more extraordinary, for not the best of them that we have seen will bear comparison with the staple of our own courts. This is a consequence of the peculiar social and political circumstances of the United States. It would, indeed, be extraordinary if the lawyers of the most civilised country in the world could go abroad with advantage to learn either the theory or the practice of their own art. As, however, the works of

Dr. Story, Chancellor Kent, &c., continue to be imported into this country, and have still a much higher reputation than they deserve, it may save the student some waste of money and time if we devote a little space to an exposition of their real character and worth.

ARCHBOLD'S BANKRUPT LAW, BY FLATHER.

In the press, and shortly will be published,

THE NEW BANKRUPT LAW CONSOLIDATION ACT, with Practical Notes, and an Index; intended as a Supplement to Archbold's Bankrupt Law. By JOHN FLATHER, Esq.

S. Sweet, 1, Chancery-lane; and Stevens & Norton, Bell-yard, Lincoln's-inn.

SOLICITORS' AND GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 57, Chancery-lane, London.

This Society presents the following advantages to the Assured:—

First.—The security of a large subscribed Capital.

Second.—Exemption of the Assured from all liability.

Third.—Tables of Premiums calculated on the true law of mortality, expressly for this Office, and affording particular advantages to young lives.

Fourth.—Participating and Non-participating Scales of Premiums. In the former the Assured are entitled to EIGHTY PER CENT. or FOUR-FIFTHS of the profits divided amongst them periodically, either by way of addition to the sum assured, or in diminution of Premium, at the option of the Assured.

Fifth.—No deduction is made from the four-fifths of the profits belonging to the Assured for interest on Capital, or Guarantee Fund.

Sixth.—No Policy disputed, except in case of fraud.

Seventh.—This Society gives a much larger share of profits to the Assured, and at a lower rate of Premium, than the great majority of other Life Offices.

Eighth.—Parties wishing to assure their lives without participating in the profits can do so on a lower scale of Premiums than that of a large proportion of other Offices.

Assurances may be effected through any respectable Solicitor, or by writing to the Secretary, from whom prospectuses and all other requisite information may be obtained.

LONDON, DECEMBER 29, 1849.

It used to be said and thought by the public in general, that the opposition to law reform came principally from the lawyers. Of late, however, surely enough has been said and written, and even done, by the lawyers, to shew, that it is not now, at least, they who prevent or oppose law reforms. Hitherto they have usually confined their reforming endeavours to the reform of abuses in the ordinary practice of the law; but now a new crusade is arising, and one, perhaps, more needed than any other, against the monstrous abuses that incumber the law business of railway companies.

That the law expenses of railway companies have always been conducted on principles of the most reckless extravagance, we have been, in common with most men, well aware; but we scarcely conceived the actual amount expended. The following is the statement made by the author of a pamphlet, lately published, of the result of his examination of the returns made to the House of Lords, under the order made by that House on the 3rd May last*.

"The whole," says the author, "of these returns have been printed, and having made a careful analysis of them, I am enabled to state the result of this analysis to be, that the amount of the sums which have been already ascertained to have been expended in law charges and parliamentary expenses, by these 127 railway companies, is—

"Total . .	*£4,538,409	14	6

"In the returns thus made, only a very few, comparatively speaking, of what can properly be called the principal railways of the country, are included. Of these latter, the London and North-Western, the Lancashire and Yorkshire, and the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railways, stand forth the most conspicuous, their returns being thus made:—

"London and North-Western.

"For law charges . .	£143,477	1	6
"For parliamentary expenses	714,051	1	10
"Total . .	£857,528	3	4

"Lancashire and Yorkshire.

* The Law Expenditure of Railway Companies, &c. By Peter Isaac Macpherson. London, Baily, 1849.

* "In seven cases there is no return to Lord Brougham's order, under one or other of the heads forming the subject of the above returns, and in one other case there is no return at all as to either of them. The reason given for this default is shortly explained by the two talismanic words, 'Not ascertained,' which are inserted in the returns in lieu of the required information. Surely this seems, at first sight, a somewhat strange and cavalier answer to give to the House of Lords, and naturally suggests an inquiry as to the mode in which the accounts of these defaulting companies must have been kept, if they are unable to add up their law bills. If this answer is submitted to, it will form a most valuable precedent for a short answer to all parliamentary inquiry, and, no doubt, will in future get rid of a good many bothering questions."

"I have ascertained that there are still about sixty other railway companies by whom no returns had been made at the period of the termination of the last session, and that these latter returns are expected to be made, so as to be presented to the House of Lords, early in the session of 1850. In this number will be included the returns of the Great Western, the London and South-Western, the Eastern Counties, the South-Eastern, the Great Northern, the Midland Counties, the York and North Midland, the York, Newcastle, and Berwick, the London and Brighton, and various other railway companies not much inferior in note.

"I have, of course, no means of giving any very positive opinion as to the precise results of returns which I have had no means of inspecting. Judging, however, from my own experience in such matters, (an experience of more than thirty years), and also taking into the account that the companies which I have just enumerated (more especially the Great Western and the London and South-Western) have for years past been engaged in every species of contest, parliamentary and otherwise, that is known to the law, I am perfectly satisfied that it will not be too much to assume, that the amount of the law charges and parliamentary expenses, to be included in the returns of the next session, will be fully double those of the last.

"Taking, however, the result of these returns at a medium point, and calculating them at no more than six millions, (a most moderate estimate, in my opinion), it follows that the total amount of law charges and parliamentary expenses of the railway companies, which will in the end be returned to Parliament, will exceed the sum of TEN MILLIONS!!!"

This is, indeed, a marvellous amount to have been spent in parliamentary and other litigation, and the companies, no doubt, must and will alter their modes of proceeding. We have never, however, felt for the railway companies, nor do we think that they have ever deserved, much pity for the heavy taxation to which they have subjected themselves in the shape of law expenses. In the high and palmy days of the companies, when they appeared to be, and for the time were, a fourth estate in the realm, exercising an almost arbitrary sway over the public, their proceedings in the conduct of their affairs, as against the public, were always of a most imperial kind. They coveted a man's house, and they proceeded to cut it down, till stopped by the strong arm of the Court of Chancery. They coveted their neighbour's field, and forthwith dug it up, and made it a viaduct, or a station, or anything else they might happen to require, almost before he could wake up from his astonishment, and resist. They did, in fact, as unto them seemed best. It was, however, but part of this magnificent scheme of universal aggression and domination, to dazzle the public with the appearance of unbounded resources; and the shareholders in railroad companies, rejoicing in their power and importance—rejoicing in their then brilliant dividends—sanctioned, if they did not actually encourage, a system of lavish law expense, which at once dazzled and terrified the public. They had, and they have, their reward.

The time has probably come when the law expenses of railroad companies must, like their other expenses, be curtailed; and there can be no doubt whatever of the practicability of the system being reformed. Mr. Macpherson recommends two things principally: the first, that companies should have a salaried law officer, just as they now have a salaried secretary—just as now the Government has its law business conducted by salaried law officers; secondly, that, if this cannot be done, the rule of companies should be, not to pay their solicitors' bills of costs without taxation, instead of the rule being, as it is, just the opposite. These suggestions appear sensible; but, as we have said already, we believe no difficulty will exist in practically reforming the abuses of the system of law proceedings of companies, if, and so soon as, the companies themselves see it to be their interest to reduce their law expenditure. What we contend is, that hitherto their armies of lawyers, and their lavish expenditure upon those armies, have been part of their system. They have not paid heavy law expenses blindly—they have not been entrapped by the lawyers: they thought it their interest to dazzle, and to crush all opposition; therefore they were always prompt for law; therefore they maintained their legal staff as legal staff was never before maintained. Now that their interest is different, their tactics will change, and be changed easily.

That Dr. Story has the reputation, among those who read without discrimination, of being a scientific writer, ever considerate of principle, is not surprising, because he makes a point of favouring his readers with a formal discussion of every moot point; and that his works are voluminous is owing to the diffuseness of his style, and particularly to the formula after which his discussions are uniformly conducted, which is this—first to weave a thick and broad web of unprofitable generalities, like that fabric which is produced most largely by orators who have to speak against time; then to say what the civil law and the laws of most European countries have or have not prescribed upon the subject in question, or upon some other subject, citing a dozen passages from as many jurists; and to conclude with a copious citation or statement of English and American authorities, of which, if the reader has patience to verify them, he seldom finds one half to be in point. Our limits are ill adapted to the demonstration of an anatomy so unwieldy, and we must

To the hackneyed topic of the constitution of partnership as to third persons, 105 pages are devoted. (Commentaries on Partnership, 46 et seq., 2nd ed.) The principal question under this head, as our readers know, is, as to what amounts to a participation of profits sufficient to render the participator liable to third persons. Story cites, by way of leading case or pole star, Lord Eldon's well-known dictum in Ex parte Hamper, (17 Ves. 404), which we may safely say has never been followed, for the same reason that we cannot say it has ever been overruled, because it has never been understood:—"The cases have gone further, to this 'nicety, upon a distinction so thin that I cannot state 'it as established upon due consideration, that if a 'trader agrees to pay another person, for his labour in 'the concern, a sum of money, even in proportion to the 'profits, equal to a certain share, that will not make 'him a partner; but if he has a specific interest in the 'profits themselves, as profits, he is a partner." (17 Ves. 404). Lord Eldon was then considering the question as to the existence of partnership between the parties themselves, and what he meant we do not profess to know. On a subsequent day he stated the same distinction as applicable to the question of liability to creditors:—"Thomas is clearly a partner as 'to third persons; whether as between him and Rogers 'is a very different consideration. The ground as to 'third persons is this—it is clearly settled, though I re-'gret it, that if a man stipulates, that, as the reward of 'his labour, he shall have, not a specific interest in the 'business, but a given sum of money, even in pro-'portion to a given quantum of profits, that will not 'make him a partner; but if he agrees for a part of 'the profits, as such, giving him a right to an account, 'though having no property in the capital, he is, as to 'third persons, a partner; and, in a question with third 'persons, no stipulation can protect him from loss." (17 Ves. 412). Here we have two propositions identical in everything except this—that the first relates to partnership inter se, and the second to partnership quoad strangers. Now, as, wherever there is a partnership between the parties, there is a joint liability to creditors, we cannot help suspecting that Lord Eldon, for once, committed a blunder, and having first enounced a rule, which is rather inconclusively expressed than incorrect, as to partnership inter se, adopted it as governing all questions of liability to creditors. However this may be, it is clear, first, that the cases which Lord Eldon asserted to have established his unintelligible rule, existed nowhere but in his imagination; (see Collyer on Partn. 24, 2nd ed.; Bisset on Partn. 13); secondly, that Ex parte Hamper and Ex parte Rowlandson, (1 Rose, 416), like many other cases to be found in the Chancery reports, from 8 Vesey down to 3 Russell, did not decide the point discussed in them; and, thirdly, that no writer of any ability has ever pretended even to understand, much less to approve of, Lord Eldon's rule. Our commentator, however, thus amplifies and thickens the Eldonian fog:—"But however nice the distinction 'may be in itself, and however difficult it may be suc-'cessfully to apply it to the circumstances of particular 'cases, it is by no means clear that there is not a very 'just and satisfactory foundation on which it may well 'rest. The question in all this class of cases is, first, 'to arrive at the intention of the parties inter se; and, 'secondly, if between themselves there is no intention 'to create a partnership either in the capital stock or in 'the profits, whether there is any stubborn rule of law 'which will, nevertheless, as to third persons, make a 'mere participation in the profits conclusive that there 'is a partnership. If there is any such rule of law, the 'next inquiry is as to the nature, and foundation, and 'true extent thereof. Now, it is incumbent upon those 'who insist that a partnership exists between the par-'ties, as to third persons, by mere operation of law, in 'opposition to their own intention, to establish, that in 'the given case, under all the circumstances, there is 'such a rule, and that it is strictly applicable." [A rule in a case, under all the circumstances, and strictly applicable?] "What, then, is the rule of law relied on 'for the purpose? It is said that the true criterion is, 'whether the parties are to participate in profit, or, 'according to the language used on another occasion, '"every man who has a share in the profits of a trade 'ought also to bear his share of the loss as a partner.' In 'a just sense, this language is sufficiently expressive of 'the general rule of law, but it is assuming the very point 'in controversy to assert, that it is universally true, or 'that there are no qualifications, or limitations, or ex-'ceptions. On the contrary, the very cases alluded to 'by Lord Eldon, in the clearest terms, establish that 'such qualifications, limitations, and exceptions do exist, 'and are either contemporaneous with the promulgation 'of the general rule, or are necessary to its just appli-'cation and use." [Where are those cases?] "It is, 'therefore, far from being universally true, that a mere 'participation in the profits constitutes the party a part-'ner; at most, it is only true sub modo. Indeed, as an 'original question, it might admit of very grave doubt 'whether it would not have been more convenient, and 'more conformable to true principles as well as to public 'policy, to have held, that no partnership should be 'deemed to exist at all, even as to third persons, unless 'such were the intention of the parties, or unless they 'had so held themselves out to the public. But the 'common law has already settled it otherwise, and 'therefore it is useless to speculate upon the subject." Let us pause here for breath, and also to remark, that our author's true admirers (as distinguished from those who praise by rote) must be those who like that writer best with whom they can go furthest at the least expense of thought. In the next paragraph we are of course told what the Roman law and modern foreign laws say on the subject; and then we come to this proposition, that, "if the participation in the 'profits can be clearly shewn to be in the character of 'agent, (as a mere compensation for labour and ser-'vices), then the presumption of partnership is re-'pelled"—a proposition which he lauds, not only as being strictly agreeable to justice and policy, but also as harmonising all the cases with each other and with common sense. He then proceeds to cite, and in some instances to state, the cases so harmonised. This statement we cannot extract, but we may observe that it includes Hesketh v. Blanchard, (4 East, 144); Smith v. Watson, (2 B. & C. 401); Dixon v. Cooper, (2 Wils. 40); Benjamin v. Porteus, (2 H. Bl. 590); Gibbons v. Wilcox, (2 Stark. 45); Ex parte Watson, (19 Ves. 461); Green v. Burley, (2 Scott, 164); Mair v. Glennie, (4 Mau. & S. 240); Perrot v. Bryant, (2 You. & C. 61); Cheap v. Cramond, (4 B. & Ald. 663); Wish v. Small, (1 Camp. 331, note); Wilkinson v. Frazier, (4 Esp. 182); Bond v. Pittard, (3 Mee. & W. 357); Meyer v. Sharpe, (5 Taunt. 74); Ex parte Langdale, (18 Ves. 300); Farrant v. Copeland, (2 Bing. 170); Hopkinson v. Smith, (1 Bing. 13); Tench v. Roberts, (6 Mad. 145); Geddes v. Wallace, (2 Bligh, 270); Peacock v. Peacock, (2 Camp. 45); Coppard v. Page, (Forr. 1); and Gilpin v. Enderby, (5 B. & Ald. 954). We are almost afraid to add—the assertion seems so incredible—that the question of partnership quoad third persons did not arise in any one of these cases, which are authorities exclusively on the question of partnership as between the parties themselves. How much of this mis-citation is to be attributed to mere incapacity, and how much to a practice, in which the learned commentator greatly indulged, of citing his authorities at second-hand, without acknowledgment*, and even from the ordinary Digests, it is not worth while to discuss. The only other English cases cited in support of Lord Eldon's rule, and the commentator's explanation, are Withington v. Herring, (3 Moo. & P. 30); Ex parte Digby, (1 Deac. 341); Ex parte Hodgkinson, (19 Ves. 29); Saville v. Robertson, (4 T. R. 720); and Ex parte Gellar, (1 Rose, 297), in none of which was the existence of a partnership in dispute; and Waugh v. Carver, (2 H. Bl. 235); Grace v. Smith, (W. Bl. 998); Dry v. Boswell, (1 Camp. 329); and Ex parte Langdale, (18 Ves. 300). Now, Waugh v. Carver decided that an agreement to share profits created a liability as partners. Grace v. Smith decided that a fixed annuity to a partner who retires, and lends money to the continuing partner at interest, does not make the retiring partner liable to new creditors. Of Ex parte Langdale, all that appears is, that an issue was directed; and the Lord Chancellor, in directing it, said, that the question was, whether there was an agreement to share profits; as to which the evidence was conflicting. Lastly, in Dry v. Boswell, the owner of a lighter agreed with the man who worked her to pay him half of her gross earnings, which, Lord Ellenborough held, was very different from a participation in net profit, and was nothing more than a mode of paying him for his labour. Such is Dr. Story's explanation of Lord Eldon's famous rule, and such are the authorities by which he supports it. We need scarcely add, that the rule never existed but in Lord Eldon's imagination. We cannot part with the subject without citing, as an instance of this compiler's accuracy, the following passage from p. 109:—

"It is upon a similar ground, that, where a person is 'to receive an annuity of a fixed sum out of the profits 'of a trade or business, he is held to be a partner as to 'third persons; for in such a case the annuity will be 'payable out of the net profits, and will rise and fall 'according to the profits, if there be not enough profits 'to pay the annuity; and there will also be a lien on 'the profits therefor."

Of the author of the Commentaries on American Law we have not to speak so severely. He has not written so many books, nor are his pretensions so lofty as those of Dr. Story; and he seems to have collected his materials with greater industry and research, and to cite authorities more honestly, than the latter. His work is a meritorious compilation, and very useful for reference on American law; but we seek in it in vain for scientific accuracy, elucidation of principle, or correction of error.

Thus, in the 40th lecture, on Bailment, we are told that "there are five species of bailment, according to 'Sir W. Jones, in his correction of Lord Holt's enu-'meration of the different sorts of bailment:—

"1. Depositum, or a naked deposit without reward.
"2. Mandatum, or commission, which is gratuitous, 'and by which the mandatory undertakes to do 'some act about the thing bailed.
"3. Commodatum, or loan for use without pay, and 'when the thing is to be restored in specie.
"4. A pledge, as when a thing is bailed to a creditor 'as a security for a debt.
"5. Locatio, or hiring for a reward."

Let us see how Sir W. Jones, whom the commentator follows because he has a fresher reputation than Holt, has corrected the judge. In Coggs v. Barnard, (Ld. Raym. 909), Lord Holt makes six kinds of bailment, of which it is sufficient to say that the third is, "when goods are left with the bailee to be used by him for hire, this is called locatio et conductio;" and the fifth is, "when the goods or chattels are delivered to be carried, or something is to be done about them for a reward, to be paid by the person who delivers them to the bailee." Upon this, Sir W. Jones remarks, that, "in fact, his fifth section is no more than a branch of his third; and he might with equal reason have added a seventh, since the fifth is capable of another subdivision. I acknowledge, therefore, but five species of bailment." The amendment, then, consists in placing together, as specifically undistinguishable, the act of the man who borrows a cab for the purpose of driving in the park, with that of the painter who takes it home for the purpose of restoring its splendour. We believe, that, with the exception of Chancellor Kent, no writer, pretending to originality, has cited this "correction" without appending to it some sort of note of admiration.

To take an example of a more practical kind, no less than twenty-seven pages (2 Comm. 514 et seq., 6th ed.) are devoted to the discussion of the laws of England and of America as to the effect of the stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5, and the corresponding American acts, on a sale or mortgage of goods without delivery of possession; and individual cases are cited and commented upon to a degree of diffuseness very unsuitable to the design of the work. The question is styled "vexatious," and we, who always thought our own law on the subject to be tolerably clear and settled, are told that "it has be-'come difficult to determine when the circumstance of 'possession not accompanying and following the deed, 'is, per se, a fraud in the English law, or only pre-'sumptive evidence of fraud resting upon the facts to be 'disclosed at the trial." "It is certainly," adds the commentator, "nothing more, if the purchaser was not a 'creditor at the time, and the goods were under execu-'tion, and the transaction was notorious, and not, in 'point of fact, either clandestine or fraudulent." We trust that our law is at least somewhat more precise than this last sentence, and furnishes some other description of a bonâ fide sale than this, "that it is not, 'in point of fact, either clandestine or fraudulent." In a subsequent page we are told, that "the conclusion 'from the more recent English cases would seem to be, 'that though a continuance in possession by the vendor 'or mortgagor be primâ facie a badge of fraud, if the 'chattels sold or mortgaged be transferable from hand 'to hand, yet the presumption of fraud arising from 'that circumstance may be rebutted by explanations, 'shewing the transaction to be fair and honest, and 'giving a reasonable account of the retention of the pos-'session. The question of fraud arising in such cases 'is not an absolute inference of law, but one of fact for 'a jury; and if the personal chattels savour of the real-'ty—as, for instance, the engines, utensils, and ma-'chinery belonging to a manufacturing establishment '—no presumption of fraud will arise from the want of 'delivery."

Now, we need scarcely remind our readers, that the rules of law on this subject are—1. That an assignment of goods is not invalidated by the statute of Elizabeth, if the best transfer of possession is made that the nature of the goods and of the transaction admits of; so that, where a manual transfer is not made, a transfer of the indicia of ownership, according to the usage of a particular trade, is sufficient. 2. That if goods are assigned by way of security, and by the terms of the contract the mortgagor is to retain the possession until a certain day, or until demand, his possession accordingly does not invalidate the security under the statute of Elizabeth, although the transaction has no pretension to be called "fair and honest," within the meaning of the framers of that statute. 3. That the exception of chattels incapable of manual transfer, and of fixtures which savour of the realty, from the general requisition as to actual delivery, depends upon entirely different principles, the former being protected because delivery is not to be expected, and the latter because things which savour of the realty are held by title, and not by posse-sion. The distinction between the effect of the statute of Elizabeth, and of the order and disposition clause in the Bankrupt Act, is cardinal; yet the commentator cites the reasoning of the Court in Ryall v. Rowles (1 Ves. 348; 1 Atk. 165) in illustration of the former statute.

LONDON, JANUARY 5, 1850.

In a recent work of considerable, and we believe generally deserved, reputation, we find a passage which we conceive to be inaccurate, and we notice it because any inaccuracy in a book on the law is likely to be dangerous, in proportion to the general merit of the work. The passage to which we refer is in a recent treatise on the Law of Husband and Wife*.

"When husband and wife are separated by private arrangement, they still continue to be husband and wife, as before; for, in the great case of Marshall v. Rutton, a principle (which had been disturbed by some prior determinations) was, upon much consideration, and with great solemnity, affirmed and reiterated by the Court of King's Bench, to this effect, namely, that husband and wife cannot, by mutual agreement, change their legal characters and capacities. But, although this is undoubtedly true on the one hand, it is equally clear on the other, that a deed of separation, properly framed, will discharge both husband and wife from the performance of one of the cardinal nuptial duties—the duty of cohabitation.

"No doubt the Church Courts view this matter differently. In those courts, a deed of separation, however valid at law and in equity, is no bar to a suit instituted for restitution of conjugal rights; but if, after executing a valid deed of separation, the husband or wife were to resort to this ecclesiastical remedy, equity would interpose by injunction; otherwise the wheels of the civil and clerical jurisdictions would be locked in each other, and the business of human life could not go on.

"Such injunctions were formerly made the subject of ingenious doubts. In particular, it was insisted that equity would not enjoin where it had not concurrent jurisdiction. But there are precedents to the contrary; and, at any rate, the difficulties in question are put an end to by the late decision of the House of Lords in Wilson v. Wilson."

To these passages are appended the following notes:—

"1. In Tothill's Rep. 13, 14, no less than six different cases are mentioned of injunctions by the Court of Chancery to stay proceedings in the ecclesiastical court. (See Hill v. Turner, 1 Atk. 515; West, 195).

"2. In The Stockton Railway Company v. The Leeds and Thirsk Railway Company, (2 Phil. 670), Lord Chancellor Cottenham held, without any hesitation, that the Court of Chancery had jurisdiction to restrain a party from petitioning Parliament, although no one ever imagined that there was a concurrent jurisdiction in such a case. The injunction affects not the Court, but the party. Lord Cottenham, in this last case, said, that there could be no doubt upon the question, 'except by the same confusion of ideas which gave rise to the old discussion between Courts of law and equity, which had been so long set at rest, and which was founded on the supposition, that the injunction operated on the Court, and not on the party.'"

We will shortly review the cases bearing on this subject:—

One of the earliest cases is Guth v. Guth, (3 Bro. C. C. 614), which is frequently erroneously supposed to decide that a contract for separation will be enforced. The agreement, in that case, was enforced, as regarded a covenant by the husband to pay an annuity to the wife during the separation. No other point required decision; and though the question, whether the principal agreement to live separate would be enforced by an injunction restraining proceedings in the ecclesiastical court, was mentioned, the Master of the Rolls expressly avoided deciding it. Legard v. Johnson (3 Ves. 352) only decides, that a deed between husband and wife simply, without the intervention of trustees, cannot be upheld against creditors. It assumes that it might be upheld, as between husband and wife, when there are trustees intervening—a point now quite clear, so far as regards property; but it neither decides nor assumes anything as to enforcing the principal agreement for separation. Lord St. John v. Lady St. John (11 Ves. 525) decides nothing but a question of pleading, whether matter, in an answer to a bill for delivering up a deed of separation, going to circumstances of conduct, was impertinent or irrelevant. It was held, on the peculiar framing of the bill, that it was not. Lord Eldon, according to his custom, laid down much valuable doctrine arguendo, but neither decided nor expressed an opinion that equity would enforce an agreement for separation by injunction. A very recent case, in the House of Lords, (Jones v. Waite, 9 Cl. & Fin. 101), decided, that the execution of a deed of separation by a husband was not an unlawful consideration for an agreement, by a third party, to (among other things) pay money to the husband for payment of his debts. But it did not touch the point of enforcing the separation.

In Worrall v. Jacob, (3 Mer. 256), Sir W. Grant enforced the subordinate agreement as to property, laying it down positively, that the Court will not enforce specifically the principal agreement; and his Honor particularly noticed and commented on the anomaly.

In Frampton v. Frampton, (4 Beav. 287), Lord Langdale also lays it down, that the Court will not enforce the principal agreement, though it will the subordinate ones, as to property.

Wilson v. Wilson, (1 Cl. & Fin., N. S., 538), the latest and most important case on the doctrine of deeds of separation, settles clearly, or rather treats as clear law, that the property clauses of a separation deed will be enforced, trustees being duly interposed; and it decides, that the staying of a suit, instituted by the wife for nullity, is a sufficient consideration passing to the husband to support the contract as to property. There is, it is true, a dictum as to a Court of equity restraining the husband, after he has consented to allow the wife to live separate, from suing in the ecclesiastical court for restitution; but the judgment in Wilson v. Wilson not only does not decide the point in favour of the jurisdiction, but rather guardedly avoids deciding that any such jurisdiction exists.

Thus far, then, as regards the cases directly upon separation deeds, they do not appear at all to support the doctrine laid down by the learned author whose labours we are criticising. Then, as to the authorities cited by him in the notes referred to, Hill v. Turner (1 Atk. 515) was a very peculiar case, not, as it appears to us, at all touching the present question. The husband was, at the time of the marriage, an infant ward of Court, and was entrapped into marriage by a woman of bad character, who obtained against him a decree for alimony, and sentence of excommunication; and the Court of Chancery restrained her from proceeding to enforce such decree. The marriage, and everything consequent upon it, were, therefore, a contempt of Court; and, besides, there was not any question of separation in the case. The Stockton Railway Company v. The Leeds and Thirsk Railway Company (2 Phil. 670) is also quite a different case from the one under consideration. That was an injunction to restrain a party from opposing a bill in Parliament, contrary to his agreement. The Lord Chancellor treated it as an agreement concerning purely private rights of property—an admitted subject of equitable jurisdiction. It must be remembered also, that what the Court was asked to do there, was merely to compel performance of his agreement by a party, who, being clearly not bound by any contract or moral duty to oppose a bill in Parliament, but free to oppose it or not, had thought fit to agree, for a consideration, not to oppose it. But when the Court is asked to enforce a contract between husband and wife for separation, it is asked to enforce an agreement made in pais in defeasance of an antecedent contract, recognised by the law as of the most solemn character, and of the highest force. The question is not one of mere technical interference with the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Court, as to which there never could be any difficulty: the real difficulty is as to the jurisdiction of equity to give effect to an agreement between parties, in derogation of a preceding agreement of a more solemn kind, and of the character of which the law recognises the Ecclesiastical Court as the peculiar judge, as much as it recognises Courts of law as the peculiar judges of purely legal contracts. We may add to the foregoing observations, that we have searched in vain for any case in which a covenant for separation has been held to support an action for damages or otherwise; while in Warrender v. Warrender (2 Cl. & Fin. 488) are to be found dicta by Lords Brougham and Lyndhurst, treating it as beyond question, that a covenant not to proceed in the ecclesiastical court, to enforce cohabitation, could not be acted upon either at law or in equity; and it would be new to find the Court of Chancery granting an injunction in aid of a contract, purporting to be legal, which would not be held binding at law. On the whole, we apprehend that the present state of the authorities does not at all justify the idea, that a Court of equity would enforce a deed of separation, as to the contract for separation itself, by injunction.

The Queen has been pleased to grant unto William Wingfield, Esq., one of her Majesty's Counsel, and recently one of the Masters in the High Court of Chancery, her royal license and authority henceforth to take and use the surname of Baker, in compliance with a direction contained in the last will and testament of Richard Baker, Esq.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Knight of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto William Jeffcott, Esq., Recorder of Prince of Wales Island, Singapore, and Malacca.

MEMBER RETURNED TO SERVE IN PARLIAMENT.—Alexander Francis Charles Gordon Lennox, commonly called Lord Alexander Francis Charles Gordon Lennox, for the borough of New Shoreham, in the room of Charles Goring, Esq., deceased.

TITLE BY ADVERSE POSSESSION.

(From a Correspondent).

The case of Doe d. Mary Carter v. Barnard (13 Jur., part 1, p. 915) suggests some curious considerations on the effect of sects. 2 and 34 of the late Act for the Limitation of Actions and Suits relating to Real Property. In that case, John Carter, son of Robert Carter, had, by permission of his father, remained in possession, without payment of rent, from 1815, till his death, intestate, in 1834. On John Carter's death, his widow, the lessor of the plaintiff, entered, and remained in possession till her ouster by the defendant, who claimed under a mortgage in fee by Robert Carter. The lessor of the plaintiff relied on her own possession for thirteen years, and her husband's before her for eighteen years; but this was held insufficient to entitle her to recover, on the ground that her own possession was unconnected, by right of any sort, with that of her husband. The Court appeared willing to assent to the opinion, that the 34th section not merely extinguishes the old title, but gives a new right to some other person, operating as a statutory transfer of the right. "Probably," it was said, "that would be so, if the same person, or several persons claiming one from the other by descent, will, or conveyance, had been in possession for the twenty years; but the lessor of the plaintiff shewed nothing to connect her possession with that of her husband by right of any sort; and if she be right in her construction of the 34th section, the same consequence" (i. e., it seems, the transfer of the right) "would follow if twenty persons, unconnected with each other, had been in possession, each for one year, consecutively, for twenty years; yet it would be impossible to say to which of the twenty persons the 34th section has transferred the title."

Now, in this case put by the Court, the right of the former owner is certainly extinct; and if the statute do not transfer the right to any one of the twenty disseisors or adverse occupants, it follows, that there no longer exists any rightful title to the land in question —that no one can succeed in an action of ejectment against the person who may happen to have obtained possession; and that if that person himself be ousted, he will be equally helpless against the new disseisor: and this state of things may, it is plain, last for ever. The solution of the difficulty appears to be, that the possession of all subsequent disseisors enures for the benefit of the first, who may tack their possession, although they may not tack his; and when the first in the line is barred, the second succeeds to his position, and may avail himself of the whole length of the subsequent possession. Accordingly, in the case under consideration, the Court seems to have thought that the heir of John Carter might recover, although his ancestor had not been in possession for the full period. This, however, is not consistent with what is said in the passage above extracted from the judgment; and during the argument, Coleridge, J., is reported to have asked —apparently with reference to the question whether the heir could have recovered—"How can the title of the son be improved by the expiration of the twenty years?"

Supposing that the conclusion above suggested is generally true, it may require the limitation, that the person availing himself of the possession of subsequent disseisors, or some person through whom he claims, should have been in possession at [or after] the passing of the act. For in Doe v. Thompson, (6 Adol. & Ell. 721), where the possession of the first of the adverse claimants, (a tenant at will), after having lasted upwards of twenty years, determined, before the passing of the act, by his decease, it was held, that his heir could not recover against his widow, who had since been in possession.

It is, however, to be observed, as affecting the bearing of Doe v. Thompson on the question under discussion, that in that case the five years given by sect. 15, in cases where the possession was not adverse at the passing of the act, had not expired, and consequently the title remained in the former owner; and on this ground the decision appears unquestionably correct. But, assuming the case to be an authority that the right cannot be transferred to a person out of possession at the passing of the act, the title may, in such cases, be vested in the person at that time in possession, (as, for instance, to the widow in Doe v. Thompson), however recent his or her occupation may have been. It seems, in all cases, an absolute necessity, where the former title is extinguished, to find some one in whom the right may vest; and therefore it is submitted, that the doctrine apparently deducible from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, viz. that the statute may extinguish the right of the former owner without conferring a new right on any other person, is not law.

It would be impossible to reconcile all the dicta in Doe d. Carter v. Barnard with the decision. There the lessor of the plaintiff proved that her husband, having been in possession as tenant at will of the real owner for eighteen years, died in 1834, leaving several children, and leaving the lessor of the plaintiff in possession, which possession she retained until a short time before the action was brought, when she was dispossessed by the defendant, who claimed under a mortgage made to him by the former owner in 1829. The Court held, that the lessor of the plaintiff could not recover, because she proved too much. Had she proved merely her own possession at the time of the ouster, she would have proved a primâ facie title; but, in the words of Patteson, J., "she did more, for she proved the possession of her husband before her for eighteen years, which was primâ facie evidence of his seisin in fee; and as he died in possession, and left children, it was primâ facie evidence of the title of his heir, against which the lessor-of-the-plaintiff's possession for thirteen years could not prevail; and therefore she has, by her own shewing, proved the title to be in another, of which the defendant was entitled to take advantage." It was assumed that the title of the former owner had been barred by the possession of the husband of the lessor of the plaintiff and that of the lessor of the plaintiff, the point having been so decided in a former case. (Doe d. Goody v. Carter, 11 Jur., part 1, p. 285). This was a mistake, because the mortgage of 1829 had converted the possession of the husband from a tenancy at will to a tenancy at sufferance, so as to exclude the possession prior to that event from the computation of time; the 7th section of the statute not applying to a tenancy at will expired before the act passed. (Doe d. Evans v. Page, 8 Jur., part 1, p. 999; Doe v. Bold, 12 Jur., part 1, p. 350). This erroneous assumption, however, was not material to the judgment, because the alternative title of the true owner was also stated by the plaintiff. But the judgment, instead of being opposed to the construction contended for by our correspondent, appears to us to have been expressly founded on it, the lessor of the plaintiff having been held not to be entitled, because the heir of the person in possession when the twenty years began to run was entitled. We think there can be no doubt that this is the right construction, but we think also that it is irreconcilable with the very decision which the Court founded upon it in Doe v. Barnard. The effect of that decision is this—that if A., the true owner, allows B. to hold possession as tenant at sufferance, and B. is dispossessed by C., a stranger, B. cannot recover possession from C. so long as A.'s title remains unbarred, but as soon as A.'s title is barred, B. may recover. Under the old law of limitation, when the remedy only and not the title was barred, the result would have been still more absurd. A bare possession is admitted to shew a primâ facie title, which, if unexplained, is taken to be a title in fee. The presumption of title in fee is rebutted by shewing an actual title in another person contemporaneous with that possession. How, then, can the possession of A. for eighteen years, during the whole duration of which there was an available title to the fee in another, become, after it has ceased, what it never was during its subsistence, a ground for presuming a title in A. to the fee? The case of Allen v. Rivington, (2 Saund. 110 a), relied on by the plaintiff, seems to be correct, notwithstanding the note of the learned editors; and it is confirmed by Doe v. Dyeball, (M. & M. 346); Doe v. Martin, (Car. & M. 32); and Doe v. Birchmore, (1 Per. & D. 448). The cases of Roe v. Harvey (4 Burr. 2484) and Doe v. Barber, (2 T. R. 749), cited by the editors of Saunders, are not in point. Proof that the lessor of the plaintiff was in possession before the defendant's entry, is proof of a primâ facie title; and proof that before the possession of the lessor another person, under whom the defendant does not claim, was entitled, is not inconsistent with that primâ facie title; for it may be that the lessor derived title under such former owner. Every title must have an antecedent. If the lessor of the plaintiff relies on a title which he proves, and not on his possession, his case is met by shewing an outstanding legal title (whether paramount or derivative is immaterial) in another, because that is inconsistent with his claim; but when he relies merely on his possession at and previous to the ouster complained of, proof of a title in a third person prior to his possession is not inconsistent with his claim. The decision in Doe v. Barnard is directly encountered by the case of Doe v. Birchmore, (1 Per. & D. 449), where the lessor of the plaintiff recovered, although his case shewed that he claimed adversely to the true owner, whose title had not been barred by the statute. The true rule, it is submitted, is, that as against a wrongdoer priority of possession is a sufficient title. This is quite consistent with the rule, that the plaintiff in ejectment must do more than shew a want of title in the defendant.

In his observations on Doe v. Thompson our correspondent appears to have forgotten, that where a tenancy at will has actually determined before the passing of the act, the term runs, not from the end of the first year, but from the determination of the tenancy.

". . . . A work which promises to be one of the most learned and philosophical treatises on the largest branch of British jurisprudence which our language has produced.
"For such a work, so valuable and so unique, the Profession would not begrudge the cost of one or two volumes, more or less. The pockets of the English lawyers are, we regret to say, not likely to be often appealed to by claims of equal merit."—Law Times, Oct. 6, 1849.
". . . . The reader, however, will be surprised at the mass of information which it contains; all the principal branches of learning are explored. There never was less book-making in any book than in this."—Law Magazine, N. S., No. 8.
"A more dense mass of living law, available alike for study, reference, and practice, has seldom been presented to the Profession."—Jurist, No. 668, Oct. 27, 1849.
